It is not known how they managed the wedding-cakes at that famous feast in Cana long ago, though some must be said of the wine provided so plentifully on that occasion; but it is well understood that at our modern marriages the cake business is managed on showy but safe principles.

It is believed also that the marriage presents which are spread out for our envy or admiration, that even this rich, rare and radiant things are honestly and prudently hired for the occasion.

That like the German gentleman who manipulates piano, violin and coronet in the little room behind the parlor, they come with the night and depart with the morning.

These beautiful French clocks and bronzes, these shining rows of silverware, these laces and flashing jewels, these pretty knick-knacks, these bank checks for such fabulous sums! We envy you no more, you are but shams and frauds, loaned but to add to the glamour of the gathering. Go back to the jews who hire ye out, and offend our truth and our taste no more.

Let us turn to another part of our modern marriages, and behold the humorous side of them, for humor there is, and sometimes a good deal of it in these unions.

As might be expected the women are more at home in these matters than the men. They behave themselves in a more quiet and becoming manner, and always sign their names to the legal document in a firmer hand than the male animals.

And so it comes to pass that the blunders are chiefly made by the men.

Trying to arrange the parties to a marriage ceremony in order one night, before we began the introductory address, the happy bridegroom spoke up and said: "That's right, sir, that's what Saint Paul says. Let everything be done cleverly and in good time." We could not remember that the Apostle had uttered these words; but we managed to preserve a solemn face and proceeded with our work. Another candidate for matrimony insisted on being married with his coat off. The day was very warm; and he wanted things "done comfortable." We prevailed on him to change his purpose, and assume the black coat; but he removed it the moment the ceremony was ended, and would be "comfortable," and who will blame him?

On another occasion we had ended the preliminary address to the waiting couple, had directed them to join their right hands, and were in the middle of the old, old question, "Will you take this woman whom you hold by the right hand to be your true and lawful wife, to love her, honor her, cherish her, &c., &c. when the bridegroom looked at us with a surprised face, and said stoutly: "I came here on purpose for that."

Once, and only once, in our experience have we seen either party "buck down" at the last moment. In this case it was the woman who refused.

The feast had been prepared, the friends assembled, the carriage dispatched for the minister. He came and began at once the work of filling up the legal duplicate. The intended bridegroom answered readily all the many questions, but at the first question put to the lady—"What is your name?"—she answered quickly, "I have made up my mind I don't want to be married—I shan't have him." We were all in dismay, but nothing could overcome her repugnance.

The minister bowed and retired. The poor rejected bridegroom followed him and whispered: "Keep your courage up sir; we will have it in a few days."—Whereat the minister replied, "Keep your own courage up, sir. You need it more than I do."

We remember a marriage where, in the middle of the ceremony, the bride cried, "Stop, sir." and then turning to her man, said, "Davy, hand me that glass of water." Having drunk the water, she handed the glass to the minister, remarking in a very simple and quiet way. "I was very thirsty. Now, you may go on, sir."

We remember also that on another occasion having received our fee from the newly made husband, the mother of the bride presented us in addition with two living turkeys, which we dragged home by the heels after much labor, blessing the benevolent mother many times on the way.

And, to all this tale of modern marriage, we may mention that having married a couple in church, the mother, who had arrived too late to witness the ceremony, insisted with much anger that we must go to her house and marry them over again, as she knew she could not sleep in her bed if she did not see her child married.

Whereupon we repaired to the excited lady's home and remarried the astonished couple without any additional charge.

A gentleman who had conferred a favor upon an Irishman, was thus addressed by him: "Long life to you sir: With the blessing of God, may you live to eat the hen that scratches the gravel on your grave!"

One of "our young girls," at an examination in grammar, the other day, when asked why the noun "bachelor" was singular, blushingly answered: "Because it is very singular they dont get married." She went up to the head.

HORSES.—At this season of the year horses are unusually out of condition, consequently they require to be more carefully attended to, both as regards their food, grooming and exercise. Long yoking should be avoided. The stomach of the horse being comparatively small, he requires to be fed regularly at intervals of not more than five or six hours. The stable should be well ventilated, and all currents of cold air guarded against. When the horse returns to the stable from the yoke, he should be rubbed over, and afterwards thoroughly groomed—say about eight o'clock The two common practice of allowing horses when warm to drink water greatly proves injurious to their general health, and is not an unfrequent cause of colic. If the horse's legs are washed in a pond, they should be afterwards carefully rubbed, otherwise inflammation of the cellular tissues of one or more of the legs be induced. This disease is commonly known by the term "weed," and greatly deteriorates the value and general usefulness of horses. Foals may now be separated from their dams and carefully fed on suitable food. A small quantity of oats may be given twice a day, and in the evening less than one half pailful of cooked food which may consist of light grain, chaff, refuse potatoes, with or without a portion of turnips. It is generally found advisable to place a foal beside another young horse, unless there are two foals on the farm, when both can be kept together.

CARE OF COWS.—Cows should be provided with warm shelter. Milking should be done at regular hours night and morning; slow milkers soon dry up cows, the faster they are milked the better. Cows should be stripped until no milk is obtained, or they will gradually fail in milk, let the feed be what it may. Some cows discharge their milk; faithfully rubbing the whole bag while giving no milk, and a month after with tallow, will cure this entirely. Milk is affected by the food of the cow; if she eats turnips or cabbage it injures her milk materially. Most persons use their cow's milk the fourth milking, but it would be well to test it; if it boils without curdling it is fit for use; if not throw it out.

FEEDING CHICKENS.—In feeding wheat screenings as obtained from the mills, they should be soaked in water eight or ten hours, or at least washed, before feeding, to soften the white caps, swell the shrunken kernels and destroy the poisonous dust. Corn meal should always be mixed with boiling water for chickens. Onions, tops as well as bottoms, should be cut fine and fed daily. They are very stimulating, and superior to many medical preparations recommended for sick chickens. A daily feeding of onions tends greatly to ward off disease.

HOW TO KNOW THE AGE OF A HORSE.—The colt is born with seven grinders; when four front teeth have made their appearance the colt is twelve days old; and when the next four come forth it is four weeks old.—When the corner teeth appear the colt is eight months old; when the latter have attained to the height of the front teeth it is one year old. The two-year-old colt has the kernel (the dark substance in the middle of the tooth's crown) ground out of all the front teeth; and when three years old these are substituted by the horse teeth. The next fourth year, and the corner teeth in the jaw.

At six years of age the kernel is worn out of the lower middle row of teeth, and the bridle teeth have now attained their full growth. At seven years a hook has been formed in the corner teeth of the upper jaw, the kernel of the teeth next at the front is worn out, and the bridle teeth begin to wear off. At eight years of age the kernel is worn out of all the lower front teeth and begins to decrease in the middle upper front. In the ninth year the kernel has wholly disappeared from the upper middle front teeth, the hook on the corner teeth has increased in size, and the bridle teeth lose their points. In the tenth year, the kernel is worn out of the teeth next to the middle front of the upper jaw; and in the eleventh year the kernel has entirely vanished from the corner teeth of the same jaw. At twelve years old the crown of all the front teeth in the lower jaw has become triangular and the bridle teeth are much worn down. As the horse advances in age the gums shrink away from the teeth, which consequently receive a narrow appearance, and their kernels have become metamorphosed into a darkish point, gray hairs increase in the forehead, over the eyes, and the chin assumes the form of an angle.

SHEEP.—Some way or other agriculture seems incomplete without a flock of sheep. They are essential to the thick set longevity of the old grass land, and all the world over in olden times they were esteemed as most important, and in the most improved agricultural country, viz: England, they are cherished by every farmer, from the highest to the lowest. The wool is one of the incomes which cannot be dispensed with, and the flocks are so managed that the tegs cut heavier and more valuable fleeces than older sheep; in fact teg fleeces in England not only weigh thirty per cent heavier than ewes, but make ten or more per cent higher prices. If any tenant farmer in the regular agricultural districts of England farmed without sheep, he would soon lose his crops, and nobody would rent to a man who did not practice sheep husbandry.—(Cor Country Gentleman)

HOG CHOLERA.—The prevailing disease called hog cholera, confined to the corn districts of the western states, I am satisfied is produced by feeding corn without other vegetable food. The natural tendency of that kind of feeding is to produce worms and other animalcules that infest the intestines of the hog, and from thence make their way through the flesh, and infect the whole system. The peculiarity of the disease is that, at a hog becomes once infected, it will never entirely recover. Sows once infected will never raise a healthy litter of pigs, even if kept for years. The pigs will usually show symptoms of the disease before they are a week old, and some, or all of them, will die within one or two months. A large share of the hogs of the western country are more or less infected in this way, and quite often where there appears to be no visible signs of disease. This kind of meat is not tempting to the palate. All white hogs seem to be affected and die sooner than black or spotted ones. I find the Berkshire will resist much longer than any other hog.—[Iowa Homestead.]

CHICKEN CHOLERA.—Mr. Wm. Elliott, a very successful amateur poultry fancier, of this city, gives his chickens one or two doses of castor oil when attacked with cholera. He pours a few drops down the throat from a teaspoon, and scarcely ever fails to cure. He uses tincture of iron—ten drop to a pint of water—occasionally, when the fowls seem feeble or sickly. Mr. Elliott had a fine collection of poultry on exhibition at the state fair. Our friend M. A. Aenman, dealer in poultry at Sunman, Ind., was well represented also. The entire display in this line was excellent.—[N. W. Farmer.]

Cement Mortar for Brick Houses.

After nearly every shower of rain, neat house keepers, who are so fortunate as to dwell in houses of brick, have an undesirable job of washing their windows on the outside; as the descending rain will wash out and carry down more or less of the mortar between the outer courses of the brick wall. This is particularly the case when the bricks have been laid in mortar made of loam and lime, instead of clean and sharp sand and lime. Every driving storm against one side of a brick house will dislodge earthy matter from the joints; and in its descent, it appears to have an unusual attraction for the windows. We have observed scores of windows in Brooklyn and New York City, after a shower, the glass of which appeared as if they had been sprinkled with turbid water.

The remedy is a feasible and cheap one; which is simply to lay the outer courses of bricks in cement mortar made of clean sand, good lime, and Rosendale cement. Where it has been the practice to use one bushel of good lime, let half that quantity be employed with a half bushel of cement. For example, let three bushels of clean sand, not loam, be mingled with half a bushel of good lime and half a bushel of cement. Such a proportion of materials will make a mortar for laying bricks that will endure for more than fifty years. If such mortar is prepared as it should be, only as fast as the masons use it, the material between the bricks will soon become about as hard as limestone; and driving storms will wash out no more sand and lime than can be dislodged from good bricks.

The extra expense of employing cement for a portion of the mortar will be extremely small when compared with the monthly cost of washing the windows, year after year. Besides this, when hard bricks are laid in cement-mortar, a wall will not absorb one tenth part as much rain water as if a mortar made of loam and lime were employed. If brick chimneys were made with such mortar as we have indicated, instead of loam mortar, the joints between the bricks would remain well filled with mortar for an age.

Lover's Verses in the Visitories' Book at Niagara.

Our travelling correspondent, in one of his recent letters, noticed the Visitors' Book at the Niagara Falls and its sundry records constantly accumulating.—A writer in Dickens' 'All the Year Round' notices it too, and made some extracts from it, which appear in the late number of that serial. Among them are the following. The first is from a gentle who must have had a difference with his lady love. At all events he eases his mind by the profound reflection:

Great is the mystery of Niagra's waters,
But more mysterious still are some men's daughters.

Another swain, deeply enamoured but more of a wag than a poet, writes from his heart, and with a daring ryme:—

Next to the blesses of seeing Sarah,
Is that of seeing Niagara.

A disconsolate one, jilted, perhaps, or it may be, divorced, records her sorrow in prose. 'I have come,' she says, 'to Niagara too late. Five years ago I was a creature of enthusiasm, heartless, soulless. The once gushing fountain of youthful emotion have been broken up by the withering blast of adversity.—The flowers of my life are blighted, and all is dull, all is tame. I laugh at Niagara! What care I for the thunder of its waters? Great God, how should I have enjoyed this sight once?' The signature of this outburst of disappointment it 'Bit,' to which some critter of the firmer sex has appended this comment: 'Yes, bit with affection!' A happy lover enters what he perhaps thought a very original remark: 'How lonely and desolate the life of a man would be without woman!' To this a critic who signs himself 'Quin,' appends the query; 'What has woman to do with the Fall. I should like to know who has. She made the first fall herself.' The next is evidently the production of a much later period in married life then the moon of honey:—

Once on a time with naught to do at home
My wife and I determined we would roam,
But to decide upon the route
Admitted much domestic doubt.
If I said East, she said 'twas best
That we should travel to the West,

So, after many arguments and brawls,
She brought me 'nolens' volens to Falls.

The thunderous roar of the waters is so loud, when heard either from the Table Rock, or from the tower of great Island, that silence, if not impossible by the majesty of the scene, is rendered necessary by the difficulty of making oneself heard above the din of the waters.—This fact, of course does not escape the notice of the amiable cynics who like to make a harmless jest upon the ladies. One of them writes:—

"Niagara. It has been sung,
Can speak so loud without a tongue,
You hear its voice a mile hence
But I a greater wonder know—
A pretty woman who although she has a tongue keeps silence."

Socrates, who hints that he has no Xantippe of his own, declares what he would do if he were in such an unhappy condition:

If I were annoyed with a termagant wife,
Whos tongue was the blame of my every day;
To try to get rid of her pestilent clatter.
I'd live on the brink of this Great Fall of water.

The last quotation, out of scores that might be made is the more creditable effusion of a happy lover:

In after years when memory comes
To cheer our happy homes,
A voice amid the social cheer
Shall speak of what we witnessed here;
No time, no change, no change shall sever
The link that binds our hearts forever,

Transported for life—The man who marries happily.

"Professor of the accumulative art" is the polite name for thief.

The man who attempted to "cloak his sins" could not find a garment large enough.

An Irishman, speaking of his children said: "They are all very well but the one born in this country. I must take him to the Green Isle, for I believe he is languishing for his native air that he never smelt at all."

There was a man so intensely polite that as he passed a hen on her nest, he said, "Don't rise, ma'am."

"Jack, your wife is not so pensive as she used to be." "No, she has left that off, and turned expensive."

"William, if you go out in the street I'll whip you." "But, mother, if I let you whip me now, may I go out afterward?"

"Mamma," said a promising youth of four or five summers, "if all people are made out of dust, ain't coloured men made of coal dust?"

A gentlemen who had been struck by a young lady's beauty has determined to follow the injunction and "kiss the rod that smote him."

"A penny for your thoughts, miss," said a gentleman to a pert beauty.—"They are not worth a farthing, sir," she replied; "I was thinking of you."

The poet Rogers once observed to a lady, "How desirable it is, in any danger, to have presence of mind!" "Yes," she quickly replied, "but I would rather have absence of body."

A locomotive on a Western railroad has been adorned with the title, "I still live." This is more than many of the passengers can say at the end of the journey.

Paterfamilias—"Hollo, Tommy, you'll be up early. When do you rise when you're at school," Tommy—"oh, any time we like; but we must not be later than half-past six."

It is very sickly here" said one of the sons of the Emerald Isle to another. "Yes" replied his companion, "a great many have died this year that never died before."

A little girl hearing it said that she was born on the Queen's birthday, took no notice of it at the time, but a day or two after asked her father if she and the Queen were twins.

A physician, on being inquired of concerning a friend, replied that he had been arrested for taking what did not belong to him, and had no business to meddle with. "By whom was he arrested, and what did he take?" "He was arrested by Death for taking the typhus fever."

During the late war,——, entering the hospital surgery, met Paddy Doyle, the orderly, and asked him which he considered the most dangerous of the many cases then in the hospital. "That sir, said Paddy, as, with an inimitative jerk of the thumb he pointed to where, on the table lay a case of surgical instruments.

A GRAVE ERROR.—An idea seems to be prevailing, and increasing every day, that the whole business and purpose of life is to be amused and have a "good time." The old-fashioned and dull routine of utility and economy of time is ignored, and it is dying out with the past generation. The serious business of life, with its grand purposes and momentous results, is treated as a splendid bugatelle, and "go it while you are young" is the stimulating motto that seems to prompt all to action. This appears to us to be a grave error. "Life is real, life is earnest," and it should be lived in an earnest spirit, with a due sense of the responsibilities involved in it—hinging upon another infinitely beyond rather than frittered away in the reckless and frivolous manner that too much characterizes the times. Much of this springs from want of employment. Daughters are brought up, or come up, with an eye to the degradation of work, and parents foolishly indulge or positively encourage the impression—working themselves, however, all the time—and their girls are dolls and butterflies, unskilled in household duties or in any other useful employment, and as "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do," this comes in the form suggested—a vain pursuit of the bubble pleasure, and an avoidance of all that is practical and beneficial.—Sel.

A profound sensation has been caused in the little village of Winsor, Browne, Co., N. Y. by a a case of extraordinary parental cruelty under the guise of religion. A man named Stow and his wife were arrested by the woman's father for cruelly and shamefully beating and maltreating their child, only eighteen months old; The couple belong to a religious sect called "Nazarites," who believe in all sorts of superstitions, among them the exorcising of evil spirits. The child had been whiped by its father until it was literally black and blue from its waist to its feet. Here and there upon it little body were also deep incisions, from which the blood was oozing. The cause of this shocking treatment was given by the father, who said that the child refuses to tell him its name.—Mrs. Blatchley, who is considered an apostle and oracle among the Nazarites, at once proclaimed that the child was possessed of an evil spirit, and its father had been compelled to whip the devil out of it. To assist the spirit in making its exit from the lacerated body of the infant, according to this prophetess, the latter had been placed upon a high stool, without support to its back or feet, where it had been sitting for twenty-three hours, when it grandfather made his appearance. These details seem too horrible for belief, occurring in an enlightened community, but they are only too true. The inhuman father and mother have been held to appear at the next Court of Sessions, in $500 bail each.

On the death of one England's most eminent physicians, all his effects were sold by auction, and among other things was a sealed packet, marked "Advice to Physicians," which brought a great price. If physic is necessary, use Parsons Purgative Pills; they are the worst secret medicine prepared pill that has appeared in the last hundred years.

TO OWNERS OF HORSES.—It is a well attested fact confirmed by the experience of thousands that "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy," for horses is superior to anything of the kind now or ever known. We know that it has been used in many cases where the horse has been considered almost worthless, with the most satisfactory result, the horse has been restored to perfect soundness or so much benefited that the complaint could not scarcely be observed. Many such horses have afterwards have been sold for from $70 to $100 more than they would have previously brought, and were worth the difference; let all interested consider this. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hart & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

WHEN the body and brain are well balanced, the stomach is capable of restoring to waste from which the system is constantly suffering; but when the brain is large in proportion the stomach is incapable of supplying it; in other words, the expenditure is too large for income. Here is the cause of so much suffering from Diseases of the Heart Liver, and Lungs, which is produced by taxing the Nervous System too severly; and Perkins Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is the only preparation known which imparts this vitality directly, and consequently the power to overcome disease.

Dr. H. Anders, a German chemist and member of the Medical Faculty of New York city, after fifteen years' research and experiment, has discovered a method of destroying bedyine in pure water. This preparation (Dr. Anders Iodyne water) has cured many cases of scrofula, ulcers, cancers &c., that has resisted the action of all other remedys.

BLANKETING HORSES.—A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, after giving some cautions against feeding horses with grain, &c. immediately after hard work of working them immediately after feeding, and also cautioning against musty, dusty or mouldy hay or oats, says:—A great many grooms, and even owners of horses, especially in cities and towns, are in habit of having their horses always covered with blankets, which, of course, makes their skin very tender and delicate, prevents the natural growth of the hair during the cold season, and thereby exposes the animals a great deal more to catching cold, if they are a short time without their blankets when not exercised. Others have their horses covered with blankets even during exercise, and make them in that perspire more freely, which is wrong altogether, and frequently a source of catching cold afterward, when the blanket is removed. To make the skin of a horse used for as vice as very tender and soft, can have none but bad consequences. Proper grooming and cleaning the skin, and keeping the same in normal activity, is good necessary; but putting a blanket on a horse when he is standing idle in a good and comfortable stable is perfectly useless, except when he has just come perspiring from exercise. To blanket a horse when working, even if it is in winter, is not only useless—as his exercise is well able to keep those parts of his body warm that are covered by the blankets, but it is also injurious as it makes him very much predisposed to catching cold. On the other hand a blanket is needed very much when, as it happens very often, horses which, perhaps, have made a long trip and and are perspiring all over are tied to a hitching post or to a fence, and exposed to wind and cold. Such a neglect, and also to great tenderness of the skin, produced by an injudicious use of blankets at a time when they are not needed at all, must be considered as the cause of many rheumatic and catarrhal diseases, especially of the respiratory organs and of the digestive canal.

How to make Poultry-Raising pay.

Mr. Warren Leland, of the Metropolitan Hotel, N. Y., who owns a farm at Rye, N. Y., and is a very successful raiser of poultry, writes the Farmers' Club his experience in the care of fowls:—

"I have found that for every hundred fowls you must give up at least an acre. But rough land is as good as any. Hens naturally love the bush, and to lop young trees, but leaves a shred by which they live a year or more. These form hiding places and retreats for them. In such places they prefer to lay. I have great success, but it depends on three or four rules, by observing which I believe a good living can be made by hens and our eyes.

1. I give my fowls great range. Eighteen acres belong to them exclusively. Then the broods have the range of another big lot, and the turkeys go half-a-mile or more from the house. The eighteen acres of poultry yard is rough land, of little use for tillage. It has a pond in it, and many rocks, and bushes, and weeds, and sandy places, and ash heaps, and lime, and bones, and grass, and a place which I plough up to give them worms.

2. When a hen has set, I take her box, throw out the straw and earth, let it be out in the sun and rain a few days, and give it a good coat of white wash on both sides. In winter, when it is very cold, I have an old stove in their house, and keep the warmth about freezing. There is also an open fireplace, where I build a fire in cool, wet days. They dry themselves, and when the fire goes out there is a bed of ashes for them to wallow in. Summer and winter, my hens have all the lime, ashes, and sand they want.

3. Another reason why I have such luck is because my poultry-yards receive all the scraps from the Metropolitan Hotel. Egg-making is no easy work, and hens will not do much of it without high feed. They need just what a man who works requires—wheat bread and meat. Even when wheat costs $2, I believe in feeding it to hens. As to breeds, I prefer the Brahmanas, light and dark. I change roosters every spring, and a man on the farm has no other duty than to take care of my poultry. I frequently turn off 3,000 spring chickens in a single season."

Whenever you see a flok of geese all standing on one leg, except the old gander, and he chawing his cud, look out for a southwest wind to-morrow, or next day or the day after, or at some fewter time. Whenever dogs are seen travelling around with nothing to do, and old maids refuse their tea, and hop vines won't klimb, and grindstones won't grind, then you may expect a little crop of oats, and beans won't pay for harvesting.

BY-LAW NO.

A By-law to Encourage Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., to increase their manufacturing Establishment for the manufactory of Woolen Goods, and for the maintaining of the same by the grant of a bonus, as herein set forth, and for the purpose of raising money to meet such bonus.

Whereas Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., are possessed of a Woolen Mill, situate upon the Otonabee River, of the capacity known as a Three Set Mill.

And whereas it would be greatly to the benefit and advantage of the Town of Peterborough that the said firm of Paton Moir & Co., should be encouraged to increase the capacity of the said Mill, by the granting to them of a bonus for the said purpose, and for the purpose of maintaining the same when so increased.

And whereas if the said Mill were increased to that extent which would render it what is known as a Ten Set Mill or three times and one-third its present capacity, some two hundred hands would have to be employed in running or working the same, and some sixty thousand dollars would have to be expended in payment of wages and running expenses, annually, all of which would directly tend to add to the prosperity of the said Town of Peterborough.

And whereas it is desirable to extend the limits of the said Town of Peterborough, so as embrace in addition to other territory the said Auburn Mills, and it is desirable also with a like object to exempt the proposed extension of the said Auburn Mills from taxation for the period of Ten Years from and after the completion of such extension.

And whereas by an Act of Parliament of the late Province of Canada, passed in the Twenty-fourth year of Her Majesty's reign, Entituled, "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough, and to authorize the issue of debentures on the security of Town Property and for other purposes" it was enacted that for the purposes and in the manner therein particularly mentioned and set out, and to the amount therein mentioned, it should be lawful for the Commissioners therein named to issue debentures under the seal of the said corporation, to be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Treasurer and the Secretary of the said Commissioners and that the Council of the said Town of Peterborough should annually, upon the application of the said Commissioners, raise upon the rateable property of the Town, the interest and sinking fund requisite for the redemption of the said debentures.

And whereas the Council of the said Town of Peterborough have determined to grant a bonus of Ten Thousand Dollars to the said Paton, Moir & Co., to induce and assist them in increasing their said mill as aforesaid, to a Ten Set Mill, or to three times and one-third its present capacity, to be paid to them as hereinafter set out.

It is therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the Town of Peterborough, as follows:

1. That this By-law and the several provisions thereof shall come into force, and be operative and binding upon the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough from and immediately after the final passing by the said Council, if an Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario shall have been then passed, authorising the same, and a Proclamation of the Lieutenant Governor adding to the limits as aforesaid, of the said Town, shall have issued, and not before,

2 If such an Act of the said Parliament shall not have been passed, and such proclamation shall not have been issued as aforesaid, at the time of the final passing of this By-law as aforesaid, then this By-law and the several provisions therein shall come in force, and be operative, and binding upon the said corporation of the Town of Peterborough, from and immediately after the passing of an Act of the said Parliament, legalising the same, if an Act authorising the same shall not have been passed, and the issue of such Proclamation, adding to the limits of the said Town as aforesaid, whichever shall happen last.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, FEB'Y 1, 1872.

Editorial Items.

The County Council adjourned on Saturday to meet in June next.

THE Rev. Father Kelly, V. G., for many years Parish Priest of Peterboro, died at Kingston last week, aged 56 years.

POSTPONED.—The sale of property in Ashburnham to take place to-day is postponed until further notice.

MASQUERADE.—Dont forget to visit the Metropolitan Rink to-morrow evening, for it is Mr. Rockett's Benefit night, the recipts thereof being the only remuneration for his services during the skating season.

NOTICE.—Messrs Macdonald & Elder are now advertising a clearing sale as three weeks, of the balance of their winter Goods at cost price. Being a first class store and having Goods of the best quality this is a good chance for buyers of Dry Goods, Clothing, &c.

READINGS.—We understand that Mr. Black, Second master of the Peterboro Collegiate Institute, intends giving several readings, at different places through the winter. He is an accomplished reader, and an eloquent speaker.

AUCTION SALE.—The residence of the late Thos. Forty, Esq., is offered for sale on Wednesday the 7th Febuary, at the Cassie House, at 11 o'clock a. m. It is a very commodious and comfortable brick dwelling situated near the station. For terms and particulars see the advertizement in another column.

GALLELY'S CONCERT.—Mr. Gallelly's Concert on Thursday evening was a complete success. The Hall was filled to overflowing and the parts were well sustained throughout. Mr. G. is a very fine singer of Scottish songs. The choruses were well rendered for so many voices, about twenty in all. We intended to give a full report of all the parts but press of matter prevents us, we will do so in our next issue.

THE NEW BRIDGE.—The Iron Bridge across the Otonabee River is very near completion. Messrs. Whyte & Davis had very unfavorable weather for its construction. The Town and County through their Committees did not agree among themselves as to the respective shares of the cost until winter had almost set in. On this account the contract was not let in time to have the work completed before in time. The Committee can, however, take all these things into consideration and make due allowance, which they will no doubt do.

WESLEYAN SOIREE.—The Soiree on Friday evening in aid of the building fund for enlarging the Sabbth School was a great success. The spacious room was well filled, and nothing occured to mar the gladness of the occasion. The music, songs and readings were characterized by good taste and happy rendering. The tea was elegantly served by the fair ones who presided. Indeed take it all in all we have not seen an entertainment where the aim—Christian intercourse and amusment—were more happly effected; while the financial success was such as to assure their laboring in the School that their efforts are appreciated.

OPENING UP THE BACK COUNTRY.—Mr. J. B. McWilliams has a numerously signed petition to the Government, asking for the opening of the road by way of Buckhorn, to the south boundary of Dysart. There was some money spent on this road a few years ago, but not enough to make the road available even for the lumbermen who take out timber in that section of the county. It has been said that there are several tracts of good land in the section of country through which the proposed road would pass. The construction of this road would be the means of rendering it available for settlement, and afford more reliable information in regard to this section of our county. We do not know what action the Government will be likely to take in the matter.

THE "PROTON" OUTRAGE.—Led by the Telegraph, the opposition press is making a great ado about what they style the "Proton Outrage." They assert that a Mr. Lewis, a man of irreproachable character, stated that he was sent to Proton to tell the settlers that if they voted for Mr. Dickey and against Mr. Lauder, the low valuation of their lands would be allowed them, but if not the full price would be extorted. To support this they published several affidavits, and did all they could to prove Mr. Lewis a gentleman of irreproachable character. Mr. Lewis since that, writes to the Globe that the whole thing is false; that he said no such thing, and that he had not, as was alleged, seen Mr. Blake before going to Proton; so that their affidavits are really worthless according to their own showing, as the character of Mr. Lewis is so good, no one will believe those affidavits. What straits they are now driven too. Their Gritrepublican cry is harmless.

"MONTREAL TELEGRAPH COMPANY NEW ARRANGEMENTS.—The Montreal Telegraph Co'y. have lately made arrangements by which Peterboro' Lindsay and other offices in the section of country, which have hitherto been working on a branch line, are to be put into direct communication with Toronto, Montreal and other intermediate offices thus avoiding the transfer and consequent delay of messages to and from the main line, which has hitherto been necessary. The work is to be done during the winter and completed in time for the spring business."

We were glad to notice the above paragraph in the Globe of the 29th inst. This new arrangement places Peterboro', so far as telegraph communication is concerned, in the very same position as though located on the front, thus avoiding the delay of repeating messages at Port Hope, and must therefore greatly facilitate business to and from Peterboro. It is characteristic of the liberal manner in which this enterprising Company carefully studies and promptly meets every public requirement. Although we are sure the people of Peterboro have every reason to be satisfied with the manner in which their business has been attended to in the past, still this will enable the Company to afford even greater satisfaction to their customers.

The Boys' Home at Belleville was consumed by fire on Monday morning about 3 o'clock. At the time the fire commenced there were 11 small boys, 2 larger boys, and 5 adults in the building, all got safely out but one, named Robert Gray, between 6 and 7 years of age, whose charred remains were found in the morning. There was nothing saved—the inmates narrowly escaping in their night-dresses. Miss Lowe, who has been in Peterboro for some time, had assisted Miss McPherson in bringing the boys to Belleville, we believe has lost considerable she stuff left in the "Home."

Rosa D'Erina.

The celebrated Prima Donna will favor Peterboro with one of her Brilliant Musical Treats, on Wednesday, 7th instant, in the Music Hall. The press everywhere speaks of her as an Artiste having few equals, if any.

We clip the following from the Hamilton Times of Jan., 15, 1872:—

For some weeks past the exchanges reaching us from the Western press have been teeming with the highest encomiums written upon the entertainments given by the lyric star, Rosa D'Erina, who is now engaged making a tower of the Dominion. On Saturday evening she rendered her celebrated Malborough House programme at Mechanics' Hall. Punctually she made her appearance on the stage, where stood an organ and piano: she at once addressed herself to the programme, and rendered it as none but a prima donna of the greatest range of study could do.—Her voice is liquid melody as nearly as the human throat can reach it, and that combinded with her gracefulness of manner, brilliancy of acting, and beautiful execution, go to render the entertainment such as probably has never been heard by a Hamilton audience. Her rendering of English, Irish and Scotch airs is superb—"Home sweet home," frequently bringing tears to the eyes of her hearers. Her "Comin' thro' the Rye" elicited the highest mirth; and "Barney O'Hea" simply capped the whole.—Evening Times, Jan., 15, 1872.

The Toronto Globe says: Rosa D'Erina's entertainment last night in the St Lawrence Hall was a Musicial Treat.—The programme being of a most varied character.

Rosa D'Erina has won all hearts by her exquisite rendering of the delightful music of her native land. She is truly marvellous in her repertoire of "Music from many Lands" London Times England.

We trust she will receive a bumper house, as the programme here will be the same as she performed before the Prince and Princess of Walls at Marlborough House. All desirous of hearing her should obtain tickets at once, as that will enable them to chose seats which cannot be done if delayed. They can be obtained at Mr. Kidd's book store, where also a Diagram of the Hall can be seen.

Mdlle D'Erina possesses a voice of power and flexability, united with excellent taste and expression. She appears equally at home in such different morceaux as Cherubini's "Ave Maria" the best thing of the evening, and lovers "Barney O'Hea," "Home sweet home," was also exquisitely sung, and "Le departe de Jeanne de Arc" were deserving of the highest praise.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The New Ministry is gaining strength and favor every day. Mr. John Sandfield Macdonald is rarely hoard in the House, then only asking questions. Mr. Cammorn is also very much changed since his defeat on the enquiry, as to offering Mr. E. B. Wood office to induce him to desert the Patent Combination.

Mr. Lauder was absent from the House when the time came to consider the "Proton Outrage," and it, of course, fell through.

Hon. Mr. Scott said it was not the intention of the Government to ask any special legislation on the subject. They had the power, by the exhisting law, to promote in every reasonable way the settlement of the wild lands, fit for cultivation, and they proposed to do so. In regard to the later part of the question, the rights of parties who had settled on the lands would be respected. In regard to settlers' right to timber Mr. Scott said it was not the intention of the Government to amend the Free Grant Act this session. Some fifteen months ago the late Government had disposed of timber licenses in the Muskoka Territory, and of course the rights of the parties who bought these licenses would have to be respected; but that it was the intention of the Government to repeal the Order in Council made by the late administration, under which squatters who settled prior to the passage of the Free Grant Act would have to pay 50 cents an acre. The present Government felt that these settlers ought to be placed under equally favorable conditions with those who settled after the passage of the Act. Therefore if a settler who settled before the passage of the Act was in actual occupation he would be entitled to his patent free. This remark applied to the fifty-five townships forming the free-grant territory of the Province. So far as regards those who had settled on their lots antecedent to the passage of the Free Grant Act, and who had paid one or more instalments, it was the intention of the Government to give them the balance due to the Crown free upon their complying with the conditions of the Free Grant Act, and the Order in Council issued to carry it into force. This remark applied to all the free-grant townships except Ellice, Wilberforce, Renfrew and Minto.

The New Government has therefore a very liberal policy in reference to the settlers who have located on Free Grants. The policy of the late Government was most illiberal and oppressive. The desire of the present government is to settle the wild lands with a happy and contented people—and hence their intention of moderation towards those men who have gone into the back country to make a home for themselves and family.

Mr. Blake has promised to send the Statutes to Magistrates free, he said the Government is also considering the matter of sending them free to all Reeves and clerks of municipal councils.

Mr. Fairbairn has given notice of a bill to amend and to improve the Common and Grammar Schools of Ontario. He has also presented a petition from Mr. Robt. Romaine for an act to vest in him certain properties of the Peterborough Gas Company. And one from the Town asking power to grant bonuses to manufacturing and other companies.

Mr. Read has presented a petition from the Reeves of the municipalities of the Townships of Otonabee, Asphodel, Burleigh, Harvey, Ennismore and Ashburnham, in the County of Peterborough, that the Bill to repeal so much of sec. 2 of chap. 58, 34 Vic., as effects a by-law of the County of Peterborough, granting aid to Grand Junction Railway may not pass.

Mr. Williams, of East Durham, has presented a petition from the Midland Rail way Company for an act to remove all doubts as to the legality of certain by-laws passed granting aid to said Company. He has also introduced a Bill to incorporate the "Omemee, Bobcaygeon and North Peterborough Junction R. R. Company."

Mr. McLeod opposed the second reading of the Bill on the grounds that other schemes were already in progress. Mr. Fairbairn opposed it on the same grounds.

Several petitions have been presented against the New School Act, and praying for the repeal of certain portions of it.

The teachers every where are petitioning against the clause compelling them to pay $4 a year into the Superannuation Fund.

Mr. Blake informed the House on Monday that the law was under the consideration of the Government. In all probability therefore it will be amended this Session.

The New Ministry are faithfully redeeming their pledges in every particular. Knowing the complaints that have been in reference to not bringing in the public accounts until late in the session, Mr. McKenzie in the short space of three weeks, has submitted the accounts for the year. They consist of 135 pages, giving in detail the whole of the receipts and expenditures which are given below.

THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certain fixed proportions of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combinations. Thus in the preparation of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alcbol is lost in that way, and you get only the smell of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this Pain-Killer of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to bush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have ceen converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' Pain-Killer that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so, much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the Pain-Killer and what more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

LOTS 16 and 17 in the 14th Concession of Chandos are most favorably situated, and considered the best farming lands in the Township. They are almost level, and covered with a heavy growth of Beech and Maple, and the lands surrounding are settled upon, and in a high state of cultivation. These lots are 100 acres each, about one mile east of Talion's Lake, and half a mile east of Mr. Scott's well-known farm. The soil is a fine clay loam, of great depth and fertility, and a Branch Road from the Burleigh Road passes along the southern front of the lots, rendering to them at all seasons, good and easy access.

LOTS 18, 19 and 20 in the 10th Concession containing 173 acre, and 18 and 19 in the 11th Concession, containing 200 acres. These lots form a block of 373 acres, picturesquely situated on the North shore of "Loon Lake" and upon them is a quantity of good pine timber which will be sold with the lots.

MONMOUTH.

LOTS 32 and 33 in the 13th Concession of Monmouth, containing 168 acres of the finest lands in the township. The Easterly branch of Burnt River flows between these lots, offering a fine water privilege either for a saw or grist mill, and they are situate near the centre of a block of splendid land comprising some 30,000 acres in this Township.

TOWN LOTS

Town Lots 7 West of George and South of Rink and 8 North of Perry and West of George Streets, containing Half an Acre each.

LOTS 3, 4 and 5, in the Wase Estate, fronting on the main road, opposite Mr. Thomas Eastlann's New Residence, containing about Two acres.

These lots will be sold en bloc or separately.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. This hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in each great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this noxious and unfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Pile, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Manual Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the resulting poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Address to a Drunken Husband.

When the marriage vows performing,
Oh! how firm and proud you stood,
When you won the name of husband,
And you seemed so brave and good,—
Then you thought that never, never,
Would you leave your gentle bride,
But that you would love forever,
Her who stood there by your side.

Little did you think the wine cup's
Fascinations were so strong,
Little did you think you'd listen
To her soft and siren song,
Little did you think the title
Of a drunkard was your fate,—
Oh! come back and leave the siren,
Ere eternally too late.

Years have passed—you have suffered
You have loved the wine-cup well,
And the partner of your bosom
Suffered more than tongue can tell.
Suffered for life's common comforts,
While your wealth was squandered all,
By the love for the enchantress,
Who enticed you but to fall.

Will you take the crystal water?
Leave the grog-shop-haunt of sin,
Come back to that wife or daughter,
Who has wept her bright eyes dim?
Once a bride she left her household,
Softly whispered "I am thine,"
Now, alas! she finds a rival
In the accurse'd, enchantress, wine.

Once you promised to protect her,
And to love her and your life.
Now, alas! you oft neglect her—
She is but a drunkard's wife.
She is pale, and sad, and weary,
And at night she cannot sleep.
Thinking of her erring husband,
She can only pray and weep.

Bitter tears of heart felt sorrow,
For the one she loves so true—
Even now while you desert her,
She is thinking but of you.
Oh! come back for she is weeping—
Kiss those scalded tears away,
Fold her to your heart and tell her,
You have banished drink for aye.

Come back to that mourning mother,
Fill her sorrowing heart with joy,
Tell her once again to bless you—
As she blessed you when a boy.
Oh, she loves you well and truly,
And amid her soul's deep pain,
She with outstretched arms will clasp you
To her loving heart again.

Dash it down, the fatal wine-cup,
Leave the siren when you can,
Drink no more those vile potations—
Sign the pledge and be a man.
Burst the shackles now around you,
Bid the demon flee away—
Be no more a slave to passion,
Nor to rum a willing prey.

Then there will be glad rejoicing
Round our Fathers "Great White Throne,"
For the inebriate repentant,
Who from Wine to Love has come,
Angels will rejoice in heaven,
In our Father's blessed abode—
That another soul is given,
Back to faith, to love and God.

There Must be Authority.

BY JACOB ABBOTT.

The first duty which devolves upon the mother in the training of her child is the establishment of her authority over him—that is, the forming in him the habit of immediate, implicit and unquestioning obedience to all her commands. And the first step to be taken, or, rather, perhaps the first essential condition required for the performance of this duty, is the fixing of the conviction in her own mind that it is a duty.

Unfortunately, however, there are vast numbers of mothers who do not in any degree perform this duty, but a large proportion of them have not even a theatrical idea of the obligation of it.

"I wish my child to be governed by reason and reflection," says one. "I wish him to see the necessity and propriety of what I require of him, so that he may render a ready and willing compliance with my wishes, instead of being obliged blindly to submit to arbitrary and despotic power.

She forgets that the faculties of reason and reflection, and the power of appreciating "the necessity and propriety of things," and of bringing considerations of future, remote, and perhaps contingent good and evil to restrain and subdue the impetuousness of appetites and passions eager for present pleasure, are qualities that appear late, and are very slowly developed, in the infantile mind; that no real reliance whatever can be placed upon them in the early years of life; and that, moreover, one of the chief and expressly intended objects of the establishment of the parental relation is to provide, in the mature reason and reflection of the father and mother, the means of guidance which the embryo reason and reflection of the child could not afford during the period of his immaturity.

To aid in the development and cultivation of the thinking and reasoning powers is doubtless a very important part of a parent's duty. But to cultivate these faculties in one thing, while to make any control which may be procured for them over the mind of the child the basis of government, is another. To explain the reasons of our commands is excellent, if it is done in the right time and manner. The wrong time is when the question of obedience is pending, and the wrong manner is when they are offered as inducements to obey. We may offer reasons for recommendations, when we leave the child to judge of their force, and to act according to our recommendations or not, as his judgement shall dictate.—But reasons should never be given as inducements to obey a command. The more completely the obedience to a command rests on the principle of simple submission to authority, the easier and better it will be both for parent and child.

Let no reader fall into the error of supposing that the mother's making her authority the basis of her government renders it necessary for her to assume a stern and severe aspect towards her children in her intercourse with them; or to issue her commands in a harsh, abrupt and imperious manner; or always to refrain from explaining, at the time, the reasons for a command, or a prohibition. These things are not good for anything, child," said her mother. "They are nothing but common weeds and trash. Besides, I told you not to run about so much. Why can't you come and walk quietly along the path, like a sensible person?"

Hannah said nothing to this reiteration of her mother's commands, but continued to run about as before.

"Hannah," repeated her mother, "come back into the path. I have told you again that you must come and walk with me, and you don't pay the least heed to what I say. By-and-by you will fall into some hole, or tear your clothes against the bushes, or get pricked with the briers. You must not, at any rate, go a step farther from the path, for a time and then returning towards it again, according to her own fancy or caprice, without paying any regard to her mother's directions.

"Hannah," said her mother, "you must not go so far away from the path Then, besides, you are coming to a tree where there is a wasps' nest. You must not go near that tree; if you do you will get stung."

Hannah went on, looking for flowers and gradually drawing nearer to the tree.

"Hannah!" exclaimed her mother, "I tell you that you must not go near that tree. You will certainly get stung."

Hannah went on—somewhat hesitatingly and cautiously, it is true—towards the foot of the tree, and seeing no signs of wasps there, she began gathering the flowers that grew at the foot of it.

"Aaaaah! Hannah!" exclaimed her mother, "I told you not to go near that tree. You will get stung."

"It was because I heard that there was a wasp's nest under that tree," said her mother.

"A wasp's nest:" repeated Louisa, with a look of alarm.

"Yes," rejoined her mother, "and I was afraid that the wasps might sting you."

Louisa paused a moment, and then, looking back towards the tree, said,

"I am glad I did not go near it."

"And I am glad that you obeyed me so readily," said her mother. "I knew you would obey me at once, without my giving any reason. I did not wish to tell you the reason for fear of frightening you while you were passing by the tree. But I knew that you obey me without any reason. You always do, and that is why I always like to have you go with me when I take a walk."

Louisa is much gratified by this commendation, and the effect of it, and of the whole incident, in confirming and strengthening the principle of obedience in the heart, is very much greater than rebukes or punishments for any overt act of disobedience could possibly be.

"But, mother," asked Louisa, "how did you know there was a wasp's nest under that tree?"

"One of the boys told me so," replied her mother.

"And do you really think there is one there?" asked Louisa.

"No," replied her mother, "I do not really think there is. Boys are very apt to imagine such things."

"Then why would you not let me go there?" asked Louisa.

"Because there might be one, and so I thought it safer for you not to go near."

Louisa now left her mother's side and resumed her excursions, running this way and that, in every direction, over the fields, until at length, her strength beginning to fail, she came back to her mother, out of breath, and with a languid air, saying that she was too tired to go any farther.

"I am tired too," said her mother; "we had better find a place to sit down and rest."

"Where shall we find one?" asked Louisa.

"I see a large stone out there before us, a little way," said her mother. How will that do?"

"I mean to go and try it," said Louisa, and, having seemingly recovered her breath, she ran forward to try the stone. By the time that her mother reached the spot she was ready to go on.

These and similar incidents marked the whole progress of the walk.

We see that in such a case as this firm government and free judgement are conjoined; and that, far from their being any antagonism between them, they may work together in perfect harmony.

On the other hand, there may be an extreme limitation in respect to a mother's indulgence of her children, while yet she has no government over them at all. We shall see how this might be the case of little Hannah.

Hannah was asked by her mother to go with her across the fields to the village under circumstances similar to those of Louisa's invitation, except that the real motive of Hannah's mother, in proposing that Hannah should accompany her, was to have the child's help in bringing home her parcels.

"Yes, mather," said Hannah, in reply to her mother's invitation, "I should like to go; and I will go and ask Cousin Sarah to goo too."

"Oh, no," rejoined her mother, "why do you wish Sarah to go? She will only be a trouble with us."

"She won't be any trouble at all, mother, and I mean to go and ask her," said Hannah; and putting on her bonnet, she set off towards the gate.

"No, Hannah," insisted her mother, "you must not go. I don't wish to have Sarah go with us to-day."

Hannah paid no attention to this prohibition, but ran off to find Sarah: After a few minutes she returned, saying that Sarah was not a home.

"I am glad of it," said her mother; "I told you not to go to ask her, and you did very wrong to disobey me. I have a great mind not to let you go yourself."

Hannah ran off in the direction of the path, not caring for the censure or for the threat, knowing well that they would result in nothing.

Her mother followed. When they reached the pastures Hannah began running here and there over the grass.

"Hannah!" said her mother, speaking in a stern and reproachful tone; "what do you keep running about so for all the time, Hannah! You'll get tired out before we get to the village, and then you'll be teasing me to let you stop and rest. Come and walk along quietly with me."

But Hannah paid no attention whatever to this injunction. She ran to and fro among the rocks and clumps and bushes, and once or twice she brought to her mother flows or other curious things that she found.

"Those things are not good for anything, child," said her mother. "They are nothing but common weeds and trash. Besides, I told you not to run about so much. Why can't you come and walk quietly along the path, like a sensible person?"

Hannah paid no attention to this reiteration of her mother's commands, but continued to run about as before.

"Hannah," repeated her mother, "come back into the pate. I have told you again that you must come and walk with me, and you don't pay the least heed to what I say. By-and-by you will fall into some hole, or tear your clothes against the bushes, or get pricked with the briers. You must not, at any rate, go a step farther from the path, for a time and then returning towards it again, according to her own fancy or caprice, without paying any regard to her mother's directions.

"Hannah," said her mother, "you must not go so far away from the path Then, besides, you are coming to a tree where there is a wasps' nest. You must not go near that tree; if you do you will get stung."

Hannah went on, looking for flowers and gradually drawing nearer to the tree.

"Hannah!" exclaimed her mother, "I tell you that you must not go near that tree. You will certainly get stung."

Hannah went on—somewhat hesitatingly and cautiously, it is true—towards the foot of the tree, and seeing no signs of wasps there, she began gathering the flowers that grew at the foot of it.

"Aaaaah! Hannah!" exclaimed her mother, "I told you not to go near that tree. You will get stung."

"It was because I heard that there was a wasp's nest under that tree," said her mother.

"A wasp's nest:" repeated Louisa, with a look of alarm.

"Yes," rejoined her mother, "and I was afraid that the wasps might sting you."

Louisa paused a moment, and then, looking back towards the tree, said,

"I am glad I did not go near it."

"And I am glad that you obeyed me so readily," said her mother. "I knew you would obey me at once, without my giving any reason. I did not wish to tell you the reason for fear of frightening you while you were passing by the tree. But I knew that you obey me without any reason. You always do, and that is why I always like to have you go with me when I take a walk."

Louisa is much gratified by this commendation, and the effect of it, and of the whole incident, in confirming and strengthening the principle of obedience in the heart, is very much greater than rebukes or punishments for any overt act of disobedience could possibly be.

"But, mother," asked Louisa, "how did you know there was a wasp's nest under that tree?"

"One of the boys told me so," replied her mother.

"And do you really think there is one there?" asked Louisa.

"No," replied her mother, "I do not really think there is. Boys are very apt to imagine such things."

"Then why would you not let me go there?" asked Louisa.

"Because there might be one, and so I thought it safer for you not to go near."

Louisa now left her mother's side and resumed her excursions, running this way and that, in every direction, over the fields, until at length, her strength beginning to fail, she came back to her mother, out of breath, and with a languid air, saying that she was too tired to go any farther.

"I am tired too," said her mother; "we had better find a place to sit down and rest."

"Where shall we find one?" asked Louisa.

"I see a large stone out there before us, a little way," said her mother. How will that do?"

"I mean to go and try it," said Louisa, and, having seemingly recovered her breath, she ran forward to try the stone. By the time that her mother reached the spot she was ready to go on.

These and similar incidents marked the whole progress of the walk.

We see that in such a case as this firm government and free judgement are conjoined; and that, far from their being any antagonism between them, they may work together in perfect harmony.

On the other hand, there may be an extreme limitation in respect to a mother's indulgence of her children, while yet she has no government over them at all. We shall see how this might be the case of little Hannah.

Hannah was asked by her mother to go with her across the fields to the village under circumstances similar to those of Louisa's invitation, except that the real motive of Hannah's mother, in proposing that Hannah should accompany her, was to have the child's help in bringing home her parcels.

"Yes, mather," said Hannah, in reply to her mother's invitation, "I should like to go; and I will go and ask Cousin Sarah to goo too."

"Oh, no," rejoined her mother, "why do you wish Sarah to go? She will only be a trouble with us."

"She won't be any trouble at all, mother, and I mean to go and ask her," said Hannah; and putting on her bonnet, she set off towards the gate.

"No, Hannah," insisted her mother, "you must not go. I don't wish to have Sarah go with us to-day."

Hannah paid no attention to this prohibition, but ran off to find Sarah: After a few minutes she returned, saying that Sarah was not a home.

"I am glad of it," said her mother; "I told you not to go to ask her, and you did very wrong to disobey me. I have a great mind not to let you go yourself."

Hannah ran off in the direction of the path, not caring for the censure or for the threat, knowing well that they would result in nothing.

Her mother followed. When they reached the pastures Hannah began running here and there over the grass.

Hannah went on gathering the flowers it her leisure.

"You will certainly get stung," said her mother.

"I don't believe there is any hornets nest here," replied Hannah.

"Wasps' nest," said her mother; "it was a wasps' nest."

"Or wasps' nest either," said Hannah.

"Yes," rejoined her mother, "the boys said there was."

"That's nothing," said Hannah; "the boys think there are wasps' nests in a great many places where there are not any."

"I told you not to go near that tree," said her mother, reproachfully.

"You told me I should certainly get stung if I went there," rejoined Hannah, "and I did'nt."

"Well, you might have got stung," said her mother, and so walked on.

Pretty soon after this Hannah said that she was tired of walking so far, and wished to stop and rest.

"No," replied her mother, "I told you that you would get tired if you ran about so much; but you would do it, and so now I shall not stop for you at all."

Hannah said that she should stop, at any rate; so she sat down upon a log by the way-side. Her mother said that she should go on and leave her. So her mother walked, looking back now and then, and calling Hannah to come. But finding that Hannah did not come, she finally found a place to sit down her and wait for her.

THE PRINCIPLE ILLUSTRATED BY THIS CASE.

Many a mother will see the image of her own management of her children reflected without exoggeration or distortion in this glass; and, as the former story shows how the freest indulgence is compatible with the maintenance of the absolute authority, this enables us to see how a perpetual resistance to the impulses and desires of children may co-exist with no government over them at all.

Let no mother fear, then, that the measures necessary to establish for her the most absolute authority over her children will at all curtail her power to promote their happiness. The maintenance of the best possible government over them will not in any way prevent her yielding to them all the harmless gratifications they may desire. She may indulge them in all their childish impulses, fancies, and even caprices, to their heart's content, without at all weakening her authority. But without the authority she can never develop in the hearts of her children the only kind of love that is worth possessing—namely, that in which the feeling of affection is dignified and ennobled by the sentiment of respect.—From "Gentle Measures in the Management and Training of the Young."

There is a needle factory in New Haven where the whole process is done by a single machine, without the manual lacor of any person. A coil of steel wise is put in; the machine cuts it off the entire length. It cuts the steel pieces consecutively, punches the eyeholes, countersinks the eye, and grinds the points, and, in fact, does everything until the needles drop, completely formed. Another machine picks them up and arranges them head and points together, and a third piece of mechanism puts them into paper. One of these machines occupies no more space than an ordinary table, and each of them turns one from 30,000 to 40,000 needles. Most of the needles hitherto in use have been imported from England until a few years pas. They are made there mainly at Redditch, in Worcester. The business employs about 4,000 people, chiefly females, who are paid from 36 cents for small children to $9.50 for skilled men

A Melting Story.

One winter evening a country storekeeper in the Green Mountain State was about closing up for the night, and while standing in the snow outside, putting up the window shutters, saw through the glass a lounging, worthless fellow within, grab a pound of fresh butter from the shelf and conceal it in his hat.

The act was no sooner detected than the revenge was hit upon, and a very few minutes found the Green Mountain storekeeper at once indulging his appetite for fun to the fullest extent and paying off the thief with a facetious sort of torture, for which he would have gained a premium from the old inquisition.

"I say, Seth," said the storekeeper, coming in and closing the door after him, slapping his hands over his shoulders and stamping the snow off his feet.

Seth had his hand on the door, his hat on his head, and the roll of butter in his hat, anxious to make his exit as soon as possible.

"I say, Seth" sit down I reckon now on such a cold night as this a little something would not hurt a fellow."

Seth felt very uncertain; he had the butter and was exceedingly anxious to be off, but the temptation of something warm sadly interfered with his resolution to go. This hesitation was settled by the owner of the butter taking Seth by the shoulders and planting him in a seat close to the stove, where he was in such a manner cornered in by the boxes and barrels that, while the grocer stood before him, there was no possibility of getting out, and right in this very place, true enough, the storekeeper sat down.

"Seth, we'll have a little warm Santa Cruz," said the Green Mountain grocer; so he opened the stove door, and stuffed in as many sticks as the place would admit; "without it you'd freeze going out such a night as this."

Seth already felt the butter melting down closer to his hair; and he jumped up, declaring he must go.

"Not till you have something warm, Seth. Come I've got a story to tell you," and Seth was again pushed into his seat by his cunning tormentor.

"Oh! it's so hot here," said the thief, attempting to rise.

"Sit down—don't be in such a harry," retorted the grocer; pushing him back into his chair.

"But I've got the cows to fodder, and the wood to split, I must be going," said the persecuted chap.

"But you must not tear yourself away Seth, in this manner. Sit down, let the cows take care of themselves, and keep yourself easy, you appear to be a little fidgety," said the roguish grocer with a wicked leer.

The next thing was the production of two smoking glasses of hot toddy, the very sight of which in Seth's present situation, would have made the hair stand erect upon his head had it not been well oiled and kept down by the butter.

"Seth, I will give you a toast, now, you can butter it yourself," said the grocer, with an air of such consummate simplicity, that poor Seth believed himself unsuspected. "Seth,—here's a Christmas goose well roasted, eh! I tell you it's the greatest in creation. And, Seth, destroys rats in the shape of butter, and that the cutest."

Poor Seth began to smoke as well as melt, and his mouth was hermetically sealed up, as though he had been born dumb.—Streak after streak of butter came pouring from under his hat, and his handkerchief was already soaked with the greasy overflow. Talking away as if nothing was the matter, the fun-loving grocer kept stuffing wood into the stove while poor Seth sat upright, with his back against the counter, and his knees almost touching the red-hot furnace before.

"Cold night this," said the grocer. Why, Seth, you seem to perspire as if you were warm. Why dont you take your hat off? Here let me take your hat away."

"No!" exclaimed Seth at last. "No, I must go! let me out! I ain't well! let me go!"

A greasy cataract was now pouring down the poor man's face and neck, and soaking into his clothes, and trickling down his body into his boots, so that he was literally a perfect bath of oil.

"Well, good night, Seth," said the humorous Vermonter, "if you must go," and adding, as he started out of the door, "I say, Seth, I reckon the fun I have had out of you is worth three-pence so I shall not charge you for that pound of butter in your hat."

Progress in Manitoba.

The Manitoban of the 1st January, in its review of the old year, thus sums up the progress of the province.

"A year ago it took 30 days to receive from Ottawa a reply to a telegraphic message now as many hours suffice.

"A year ago the nearest communication with the outside world was by the way of St. Cloud. A dreary journey of 400 miles separated Port Garry from the terminus of the railway.

"In one year the iron road has abridged that distance by half, and we are now within 200 miles of the North Pacific Crossing at Morshead, in the neighborhood of Georgetown.

"A little over a year ago the Military Expedition, sent from Collingwood by the lakes, after prodigies of toil and endurance, succeeded in reaching Fort Garry by the circuitous route of the Winnipeg River, after a march of three months. This year, so much is the line improved, that 200 men, at a season when snow and frost had increased enormously the hardships of the route, reached Fort Garry in perfect health, and without an accident, in 20 days from the time they left Thunder Bay.

"A year ago, the question of a railway to the Pacific was a thing of theory. Its practicability was based upon conjecture. The whole country between this and the western frontier of Ontario was unknown. During the past season the intervening space has been divided into sections. An efficient surveying party has been despatched into each, while between Fort Garry and the west a party has been organised to reconnoitre the ground and pursue their explorations, till they shall meet, in the gorges of the Rocky Mountains, other parties sent out from the Pacific Coast. By the time Parliament shall have met, the Government of the Dominion will be in a position to judge of the whole line of country intervening between the Ottawa and the borders of the Pacific Ocean.

"May we not fairly say, then, then this Province has made great strides during the year that is now closing?

"Out of the chaos in which the arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor found us, order and peace have been evoked. The excitement of the times of trouble have passed away. A police has been organised—an enumeration of the inhabitants made—the country has been parcelled off into electoral divisions—elections have been held—an Assembly returned and convened; a responsible Ministry constituted; a code of laws enacted; Courts of justice organised, and put in operation; justice administered, criminals tried, convicted, and sentenced; the Indian title to half a continent released; the public domain of the Province surveyed, laid off in blocks, and made ready for immigration; lines of communication with Thunder Bay by the Lakes, and with Duluth and St. Paul by the United States, improved steamships for the interior in course of construction, and railway explorations across the ocatinent almost complete; mail routes and Post Offices established all over the Province; Custom Houses instituted and duties collected; and last of all, a telegraph line built making us part and parcel of the living world. We may well ask whether the crowding of all these events into a single year, is not a theme upon which we may congratulate ourselves and the Dominion to which we belong. We challenge the world to produce an instance where such an amount of work in any

BY-LAW NO.

A By-law to Encourage Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., to increase their manufacturing Establishment for the manufactory of Woolen Goods, and for the maintaining of the same by the grant of a bonus, as herein set forth, and for the purpose of raising money to meet such bonus.

Whereas Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., are possessed of a Woolen Mill, situate upon the Otonabee River, of the capacity known as a Three Set Mill.

And whereas it would be greatly to the benefit and advantage of the Town of Peterborough that the said firm of Paton Moir & Co., should be encouraged to increase the capacity of the said Mill, by the granting to them of a bonus for the said purpose, and for the purpose of maintaining the same when so increased.

And whereas if the said Mill were increased to that extent which would render it what is known as a Ten Set Mill or three times and one-third its present capacity, some two hundred hands would have to be employed in running or working the same, and some sixty thousand dollars would have to be expended in payment of wages and running expenses, annually, all of which would directly tend to add to the prosperity of the said Town of Peterborough.

And whereas it is desirable to extend the limits of the said Town of Peterborough, so as embrace in addition to other territory the said Auburn Mills, and it is desirable also with a like object to exempt the proposed extension of the said Auburn Mills from taxation for the period of Ten Years from and after the completion of such extension.

And whereas by an Act of Parliament of the late Province of Canada, passed in the Twenty-fourth year of her Majesty's reign, Entitled, "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough, and to authorize the issue of debentures on the security of Town Property and for other purposes" it was enacted that for the purposes and in the manner therein particularly set-bloood and set out, and to the amount therein mentioned, it should be lawful for the Commissioners therein named to issue debentures under the seal of the said corporation, to be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Treasurer and the Secretary of the said Commissioners and that the Council of the said Town of Peterborough should annually, upon the application of the said Commissioners, raise upon the rateable property of the Town, the interest and sinking fund requisite for the redemption of the said debentures.

And whereas the Council of the said Town of Peterborough have determined to grant a bonus of Ten Thousand Dollars to the said Paton, Moir & Co., to induce and assist them in increasing their said mill as aforesaid, to a Ten Set Mill, or to three times and one-third its present capacity, to be paid to them as hereinafter set out.

It is therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the Town of Peterborough, as follows:

1. That this By-law and the several provisions thereof shall come into force, and be operative and binding upon the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough from and immediately after its final passing by the said Council, if an Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario shall have been then passed, authorising the same, and a Proclamation of the Lieutenant Governor adding to the limits as aforesaid, of the said Town, shall have issued, and not before.

2 If such an Act of the said Parliament shall not have been passed and such proclamation shall not have been issued as aforesaid, at the time of the final passing of this By-law as aforesaid, then this By-law and the several provisions therein shall come in force, and be operative, and binding upon the said corporation of the Town of Peterborough, from and immediately after the passing of an Act of the said Parliament, legalising the same, if an Act authorising the same shall not have been passed, and the issue of such Proclamation, adding to the limits of the said Town as aforesaid, whichever shall happen last.

3 Upon the said Paton Moir & Co., entering into a bond or bonds to the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough binding themselves in the penal sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars with two good and sufficient sureties, to be approved of by the Town Council, in the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars each within two months after this By-law shall take effect, conditioned that they will enlarge and increase their said Mill and fully equip and furnish the same with the necessary machinery before the 1st day of December in the year One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-four, to the extent and capacity known as a Ten Set Mill in all, or three times and one-third its present capacity, and shall (unless prevented by unforseen accident, misfortune, or calamity) run and work the same to the full capacity thereof for the period of Ten Years thereafter, and also conditioned as hereinafter set out, the said Town of Peterborough shall be liable and bound to pay to them, the said Paton Moir & Co., or their successors or assigns, owners of the said Mill, the said sum of Ten Thousand dollars of lawful money of Canada as a bonus as aforesaid in the manner following, that is to say, the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars, so soon as they the said Paton Moir & Co., shall have erected and completed ready for the machinery the necessary additions to their said Mills to contain the necessary additional machinery to make the same a Ten Set Mill as aforesaid, the further sum of $2,500 when necessary machinery placed therein and the balance of Five Thousand dollars and interest thereon at the rate of six per centum per annum in manner following, that is to say, the said balance of Five Thousand Dollars in six equal annual payments of Five Hundred dollars each, the first of such payments to be made in one year after the said Mill shall have been fully equipped and furnished as a ten set mill, and the said interest annually on the whole balance thereof remaining due and unpaid at the time of each of such payments such interest to commence and be computed from the time said mill shall be fully enlarged and equipped as aforesaid, such payments however to cease and all liability to make the same to be at an end should the said Paton Moir & Co. or their successors or assign owners of the said Mill be guilty of any breach of their said bond.

4. That the said bonds or bond shall be further conditioned that if said Mill when so enlarged and equipped shall not be steadily worked or run to its full capacity during the said period of Ten years (except stoppages for repairs and other reasonable and unavoidable stoppages for a limited and reasonable time) they, the said Paton Moir & Co., will on demand refund and repay to the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough all the principal moneys which may then have been paid under this by-law, less a sum at the rate of One Thousand dollars per year for each and every year during which the said mill as enlarged and equipped as aforesaid may have been run or worked to its full capacity as aforesaid.

5 That for the purpose of providing and furnishing the moneys necessary for the payment of the said bonds in manner aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the Mayor for the time being of the said Town of Peterborough, to cause to be issued from time to time such debentures not less than one hundred dollars each as may be necessary, and not exceeding the amount of Eleven Thousand Dollars in the whole, and payable within Ten years, which said debentures shall be sealed with the seal of the said Corporation and countersigned by the Treasurer and by the Secretary of the Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust.

6 The said debentures shall be made payable at such Bank or other place in the said Town of Peterborough as the said Mayor may direct, and shall have attached to them Coupons for the payment of interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable on the First days of the months of January and July in each year during the currency thereof.

7 The payment of all such debentures as may be issued under the authority hereof shall be provided for in the same manner as debentures issued under the provisions of the Act aforesaid, intituled "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough, and to authorize the issue of debentures on the security of the Town Property, and for other purposes."

8 And it is further enacted, that provided the conditions of the said bond or bonds be well and faithfully performed, fulfilled and kept, the said intended additions to the said Woolen Mills and machinery shall be exempt from taxation for the period of Ten years from the time of the completion of the said proposed extension thereof.

9 That the votes of the Electors of the said Municipality shall be taken on the proposed By-law on the 27th day of February, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy Two, and in the following places, that is to say in each of the four wards of the said Town, and at the place of polling therein of the last Municipal Election; that the polling shall open at the hour of nine o'clock in the forenoon, and close at the hour of Five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. That John Irwin shall be Returning Officer in the North Ward, James Edwards Returning Officer in the East Ward, Robert Rowe Returning Officer in the Centre Ward, and William Cummings Returning Officer in the South Ward for taking the said vote, and that the said By-law will be taken into consideration by the Town Council of the Town of Peterborough after one month from the first publication thereof in the Peterborough "Examiner" newspaper, the date of which first publication was Thursday, the First day of February, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy Two.

PETERBOROUGH, FEB'Y 8, 1872.

OURSELVES.

In this issue we are enabled to present the EXAMINER in its enlarged shape.—We have experienced considerable difficulty and delay in getting the necessary material at the time promised. A little indulgence yet requires to be granted, as even up to going to press all our new material had not arrived, although ordered some time.

The EXAMINER is now the largest paper in the county. We have added four columns in breadth, and the additional length is equal to four more columns making an addition of about EIGHT columns, so it is about one-third larger than any paper in the county.

Our circulation, too, equals that of any paper in the county. During three years it has been steadily increasing.—Last year our issue reached nearly one thousand, and was read by, at least, 6,000 persons weekly. This year we have had to increase the number, and we expect to be compelled to increase it weekly, during the year. During the period it has been under the present control, it has steadily increased, so that it is now double what it was when the present Proprietor took the management of it.

In the past, even in the cool shades of opposition, during the whole period referred to, the EXAMINER gave no uncertain sound. No matter what party was in power, Reform was our watchword, and it will so continue, even, though it meet not the warmest wishes of some. We believe the principles of the Reform party are just and right, and hence our advocacy of them. We at the same time accord the right to others to think differently.

We take this opportunity of returning thanks to our numerous patrons and friends, who have encouraged us by their support, and we beg leave to solicit a continuance of their favor.

The EXAMINER is the best advertising medium for merchants, as it will be read by not less than 6,000 or 7,000 persons every week, and thus affords ready access to a large number of purchasers.

We have also a large jobbing office, in which every style of printing can be done, and will be done at cheap rates. About two years ago it was circulated that large agricultural show prize lists could not be done at our office. That year, however, our friends succeeded in securing a trial, and even the defamers themselves acknowledged that the work was the best they ever got done. We can, therefore, confidentially solicit a share of public patronage in this line.

We ask our friends to do what they can to extend our circulation. To clubs of FIVE, sending the money, we will send the EXAMINER the remainder of the year for $6.00; and to clubs of TEN sending the money, we will send it for $10.00, or at one dollar each. We will also allow a liberal discount to any one who will get subscribers. To single subscribers the price will be $1.50 in advance.

All information of general or public importance will be thankfully received, and attended to; but personal contentions, not involving matters of public interest, will be eschewed.

The Port Hope and Midland people are making every effort to secure a Charter for a R. R. from Omemee to Bobcaygeon, with a view to going Northward. Among the names of the proposed Provisional Directors we find those of Messrs. C. J. Blomfield, S. S. Peck and A. T. Williams, all Provisional Directors of the Peterboro & Haliburton Co'y. How friendly they must be to Peterboro, and how anxious to promote her interests in building a R. R. from Omemee!

BIBLE CHRISTIAN.—The Missionary Services on Sabbath and Monday evenings, in connection with the Bible Church here, were very interesting.—On Tuesday evening a Temperance Meeting was held, when the Revds. The Rev. J. S. Watson, of Stockwell, England, who murdered his wife, lately, has been found guilty, but recommended to mercy, on account of his age and previous good character. It may be a matter of grave doubt whether it would serve the ends of justice to do so.

The Lumber Merchants of the United States are seeking to have the duties on lumber thrown off, on all lumber entering their country from Canada. The name of the Hon. John Sandfield McDonald, is hardly ever heard of, since his defeat. His friends (?) have deserted him, and left him to reflect on the folly of making an alliance with quondam enemies, even to secure the temporary defeat of a rival. A straightforward, consistent course, even in politics, receives the respect of the people, while a wavering, vascillating and subservient policy, is generally followed by the desertion of the very men who got rich, perhaps, on the bounty secured by the alliance.

BURLEIGH.—The enterprising settlers on the Burleigh Road have organized an Agricultural Society. The following were elected officers, for the ensuing year:

D. Anderson, Crown Land Agent, President.
— Shoen, Vice President.

Messrs. Giles Stone, F. Middleton, M. Walton, J. Young, P. Scott, Harding, W. Wilson, Wright and two others whose names we did not learn, were chosen directors.

The New Bridge is completed and the Committee met on Tuesday to inspect it. We understand that the County Engineer was instructed to examine it and report in two weeks. After which a disinterested Engineer from a distance is to be brought to see whether it is according to contract. The Bridge looks well, and we believe is strong enough to undergo the test required by the contract, but very few men, if any, are prepared to give a report that would be acceptable to all parties, and there is a possibility that the report of an Engineer from a distance might be of very little real value.

HAVE WE A MAGISTRATE?—The good people of Bobcaygeon are somewhat exercised on this important question, just now, and the question is not out of place in reference to ourselves. Some hold that since Mr. Hatton's appointment as "Police Magistrate," no other Magistrate has jurisdiction within the Town limits. Port Hope was in the same position not long since, the Council of that Town refusing to accept the appointment made by John Standfield, and they held out so long that it fell through, and another was made.—But irrespective of who is to be Police Magistrate, to relieve the Town out of its anomalous position, would it not be well to get annexed to Ashburnham? by doing so, the present difficulty could be overcome. Let us get annexed.

The Committee of the Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks, the following donations for January:—Mrs. Mack, a lamp for the hall; from Mr. L. Maguire, Lindsay, a large box of soap; Mr. White, a quarter of lamb and a piece of beef; Mrs. Mackenzan, a parcel of clothing; Mrs. Dr. Taylor, two parcels of clothing; Mrs. Romaine, an apple pie and a dress for Mrs. Lowry; Mr. I. Robinson, valuable parcel of clothing. The committee also beg to acknowledge with many thanks the sum of $20, received from the Gentlemen's Concert, Mr. Thompson, through Mr. Hopper, Esq., Sheriff. Wright, also the handsome contribution from "Another who desires to remain unknown."

Mr. Fowler we believe, is making arrangements to build the road to Mud Lake, the approaching summer, and also to open the Cobourg road to Peterboro. Should the road be built to the Lakes, we have every reason to believe it will soon reach Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls and other important points northward. Lindsay is willing to invest $60,000 to secure a road to the village of Bobcaygeon, believing that by so doing the trade of the back countrywould be secured to that town for all time. If the present opportunity to get a road north be rejected many will live to repent it. In connection with the movement to encourage manufactures, we trust the people of Peterboro will soon be led to see the necessity of securing a low tariff also, and increased trade from the north. Mr. Fowler may have been selfish in what he proposed, but it was most assuredly calculated to build up this Peterboro.

RAILWAYS.—The people of Lindsay are in favour of assisting the Toronto and Nipissing Railway, in preference to the "Grand Junction." A correspondent of the Lindsay Post says, wisely:—"What Lindsay wants is to protect her Back Country. She holds a good position, and $60,000 laid out on a line from here, (Lindsay) to Bobcaygeon would be sure to protect, and thence to the English Company's Townships, viz Minden. Let us at once secure this position and we will be masters. It will form an impregnable line of defence and offence to any scheme that might threaten to deprive us of our resources, which their magnet truly points to." The people of Lindsay understand what is for their own interest, and are united to that end, while Peterboro is divided, and must suffer in consequence.

"BRITISH AMERICAN PRESBYTERIAN."—We have received the first number of a paper with the above title. It is published in Toronto, by Mr. Robinson, lately publisher and proprietor of the Lindsay Post. The British American Presbyterian is creditably got up, consisting of eight pages of neatly printed reading matter of great interest to the general reader. As its name implies, it is devoted to the interests of the large and influential body of Presbyterians in British America, and we trust that they will give it such support as will ensure its success. We gladly place it on our list of exchanges, and as a valuable addition to the religious press of the new Dominion, we wish the Presbyterian a large circulation, and Mr. Robinson success in his new enterprise.

POLICE MAGISTRATE.—The Mayor has received a letter from the Hon. Mr. Gow, Provincial Secretary, stating that the Lieutenant Governor refuses to cancel the appointment of Mr. Hatton, as Police Magistrate.

A letter to the same effect from T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., M. P. P., has also been received by the Mayor. Both the letters state that the difficulty can only be settled in a Court of Law; Mr. Fairbairn's letter intimating that perhaps Mr. Hatton may apply for a mandamus to compel compliance on the part of the Council.

The action of the Council, we understand, has not been through opposition to Mr. Hatton, but because of the underhand way in which the appointment was secured, without letting the Council or any of its members know any anything of what they were endeavoring to accomplish.

THE MCAULAY MURDER.—During the late election, our readers will remember the death of one McAulay, from kicks it was supposed by one Tranchemontagne, a tavernkeeper or bar-tender, where McAulay was electioneering for Mr. Eddy, the Government candidate. Tranchemontagne has been tried and found guilty of only common assault. In reference to the matter the Montreal Witness says:—

The appoplexy theory muddle has, however, reduced Tranchemontagne's offence in the minds of the jury from murder to common assault. Still, if a man assaults another, kicking him in the side and on the head when he is down, he need not wonder if he is suspected of a deadly intent. The jury in the case of Tranchemontagne have, fortunately for him, put the mildest construction on the savage assault on McAulay. And here the question may be asked, why was the latter, a Government officer, taking an active part in promoting the election of Mr. Eddy? Does the Government expect its servants to work as electioneering agents in its interest? Had poor McAulay not been so acting he would, probably, have been alive now. Under the present drinking and treating habits at elections, it is difficult for those taking an active part in securing votes to keep sober. Dearly has the deceased paid for his indiscretion; and if the Government can say that it was no wise at their instance that he so indiscreetly mixed himself up with the, to him, fatal election, it might be well in them to do so. Let them make it known that no servant of their's need count on favor or promotion for so employing himself on such occasions.

Burns' Anniversary and Hogg's Centenary was celebrated on Thursday evening. 25th of January, by a Grand Concert given by Mr. Galletly, assisted by Miss Gerrie, from Guelph, and 30 Amateurs, residents of Peterborough. The Concert, whether considered in reference to the performance of the various pieces on the programme, or to the number and character convened to listen, was a remarkable success.

The Concert opened by the whole company singing Burns' well known song, "Ye banks and brass o' bonnie Doos," as a quartette, which was sung with taste and feeling—'When the kye comes hame," Hogg's masterpiece, was rendered sweetly and effectively by Mr. Galletly. The reading of the "Irish letter" by Mr. Haggart, kept the audience in roars of laughter from beginning to end, and was rapturously encored. Mr. Haggart has the real Irish brogue, and would easily pass as a genuine son of the Emerland Isle. Then followed that gem of a song, "O Nannie, wilt thou gang wi' me," sung by Miss Gerrie with elegance and accuracy, her fine clear violin-toned voice warbling through the Hall like a nightingale. She was deservedly encored, and gave "The Cameron Men" with great effect, fairly taking the audience by storm.—"The Swiss Toy Girl" was sung by our wee' prodigy, Miss Adelina Galletly, with marvellous fortitude for a juvenile, her sweet voice, together with distinct enunciation of words, was fairly charming. "Winking at me" was sung by Miss Johnston, with considerable naivete, eliciting an encore, when she gave that popular Irish humorous song, "Barney O'Hea." Miss Johnston, we could perceive, was labouring under a severe cold, the tones of her voice were not so clear as on former occasions. However, she has greatly improved in style and manner, as well as in voice, since last Burns' anniversary. Mr. Black read "The Burial March of Dundee," composed by Professor Aytoun. Mr. Black has only recently become a resident of Peterboro, and on the several occasions he has appeared before the public, has established himself as a reader of sentimental poems, possessing within himself a true appreciation and just conception of the spirit of the poet. Mr. Telford, our local poet, read an original piece on Burns' and Hogg. The piece was highly woven with shrewd common sense, large hearted views regarding both poets, and displaying originality of thought combined with cunning wit. It was well received by the audience. "Scots wha hae" was sung by the whole company with true martial vigor, displaying much care in training, and giving appropriate expression to the words. "How swore the young days shaded," that beautiful Irish duett by Moore, was sung by Miss Gerrie and Mr. Galletly, with artistic taste, harmony on perfection. Their voices are both rich and mellow, and blended nicely together. The same may be said of the "Messenger Bird" sung by Miss Gerrie and Miss Rush. We wish to hear Miss Rush oftener on our musical platform. "The Little Fairs" by Messrs. McClelland and Galletly created quite a furore, and was loudly encored. Mr. Galletly in response and by desire gave "The Laird o' Cockpen" in his own original way, personifying the Laird and Mistress Jean to perfection. "Tyrol's Lovely Dell" was beautifully sung by Miss Gerrie. "The Bonnie Rows," "Auld Lang Syne," and the "National Anthem" terminated a Concert where there was much to admire and little to find fault with. And if all the Burns' Anniversaries in our Dominion are conducted in a similar manner, they will leave behind them nothing but pleasant memories. We should not forget to say that Miss Gerrie is a pupil of Mr. Galletly's. Some four years ago Mr. Galletly was struck with her remarkable ear for music and wonderful compass of voice, and since that time has occasionally given her lessons.

We understand that at the urgent request of a number of Miss Gerrie's musical admirers she has consented to give a Concert for her benefit, some time in February. Let it be a bumper house.—Com.

Orange Intelligence.

The Annual Meeting of the Peterboro County Lodge was held at Allandale, on Tuesday. There was a very full attendance. The officers elected are:

Bro. J. B. McWilliams, County Master, (re-elected).
Bro. A. R. Anderson, Dep. Co. Master.
" Rev. — McDowell, Co. Chaplain.
" John Smith, County Secretary.
" R. Waram, County Treasurer.
" J. Marshall, Direc'r of Ceremonies.

It was agreed to hold the Semi-annual meeting in Keene, on the last Tuesday of June.

We understand that a resolution was passed to hold the celebration this year in Peterboro, arrangements for which will be announced in due time.

The Grand Junction.

It would be difficult to form an opinion on the present state of progress of this road. In an explanatory letter to our contemporary, Mr. Wood says the "survey was made in the in the interests of the road, not in the interests of any locality." Then why should localities not receiving special benefits be asked for bonuses. In reference to the charge of promising "premiums" he says:—

"Allow me to say in conclusion that the charge of falsehood made by your contemporary against me, deserves this explation. I was not one of the "Provisional Directors" of the Grand Judction Road, and had no personal connection with the arrangements made with Mr. Fowler and did not as I stated before, know anything about five per cent commission as offered to him. After the Bobcaygeon meeting I enquired of the Secretary whether there was any entry in the books to that effect. There was no such entry. My only reason for refering to this charge was to explain what did seem no doubt strange to those who thaught I was a Provisional Director.

My Directorship commenced when the Directors were elected by the Stockholders—I can afford to leave my character for truthfulness with those who have known me for the last 30 years.

"Here Mr. Wood admits the truthfulness of the accusation that the deputation knew a "premium" had been offered to get up bonuses. "After the Bobcaygeon meeting I enquired of the Secretary," he says, "whether there was any entry on the Books to that effect." So Mr. Wood admits it was talked of at the Bobcaygeon meeting. We refer to his communication now merely to show that our report of the Bobcaygeon meeting was correct. Mr. Wood himself directly declaring that "premiums" were spoken of.

Town Council.

The Council met on Monday evening. Present, His Worship Mayor Cox, and Messrs. Toole, Edmison, Stevenson, Doherty, Patterson, Hopkins, Hall, Lundy, Helm, English and Smith.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. Edmison, as chairman of the committee on Appointments to Office read and submitted a report, which on motion was received and adopted.

Mr. Smith, chairman of Finance, read and submitted the following report, which on motion was received and adopted:

The Finance Committee beg leave to report that they cannot recommend the payment of D. A. McDonald's account for board and lodging to Johnston, wife and child, as no member of the Council asked him to keep them, and they further believe that at the time he took them he was of the opinion they were able to pay for their board, as they left Faucher's Saloon, where they were boarding during the Fall.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. SMITH, Chairman.

A memorial to the Legislature of Ontario, praying for an Act to authorise the Cobourg, Peterboro and M. R. and M. Co'y to extend its line of Road and for other purposes was read a first time, and was finally passed, and ordered to be forwarded to Mr. Fairbairn.

Mr. English introduced a motion to grant the sum of $4 to the owner of the teams first found at the Engine House on alarm of fire, to draw the Engine during winter. It was referred to the Fire Committee.

A memorial to the Legislature was also passed, praying for the opening up of the Beaubarn road.

A By-law to appoint Assessors and other Officers was also passed, when the Council adjourned for two weeks.

The Nova Scotia Parliament has been summoned to meet for the "dispatch of business" on the 22nd instant.

Through the recommendation of the Warden, John Creighton, Esq., the Government have lately granted a material increase to the salaries of the guards and keepers of the Kingston Penitentiary.

PARLIAMENTARY

Thursday, Feb. 8th, 1872.

Mr. Blake moved that the third reading of the bill to make further provisions touching the appropriation of the railway fund.

Mr. Blake moved the third reading of the bill to declare the true construction of the Act passed in 13th year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and chaptered five, intitled "An Act against Fraudulent Deed Alienations, &c."

The Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Bill to incorporated the Omemee, Bobcaygeon, North Peterborough Junction Railway Company was read a third time and passed.

On the order for receiving the report of the committee on the bill to further secure the Independance of the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Blake moved that the report be not received, and that the Bill be referred back to a committee of the whole, with instructions to ammend the 3rd clause by adding thereto the words, "But the executive Council shall not at any time consist of more than six members."

Mr. Cameron admitted that under the Confederation Act of Lieut Governor might appoint more than five advisers, ("hear, hear," from Mr. Blake but they were to be appointed in a particular way. Mr. Blake has violated the Constitution in accepting the position of Executive Councillor, and then forming an Administration without being one of the five Executive officers named by the Confederation Act. The ammendment he (Mr. Cameron) would now move was "That in case any member of the Legislative Assembly hereafter becomes a member of the Executive Council, his election shall be void and his seat vacated. "The object of the amendment was this—that his Excellency might appoint more than six advisers, but the affairs of the country should be governed by five executive officers as before; and that any member of this House who become an Executive Councillor should vacate his seat.

Mr. Blake pointed out that, while the member of East Toronto was so anxious not to limit the prerogative of his excellency to appoint as many advisers as he should please, he was anxious to provide that no more than five of these councillors should be responsible to the country by holding seats upon the floor of the House. He was not surprised that the leader of a party that kept a Solicitor General in office for years than could not get a constituency for him should of further,—that a gentleman who had again, and again announced his admiration go the old system of irresponsible goveanment and the Family Compact, should ask them at this time of the day in the year 1872, at the era of constitional progress, to affirm the view that His Excellency should be permitted to chose members of his Council who would not only be required, but would not be allowed to have seats in the chamber. (Hear, hear) What did the amendment of the number for East Toronto mean? It meant that a secret cone clave advising his Excellency in secret, without owning any responsibility to the people, might be blamed, and that this conlave should give whatever advice they pleased, and not be responsible on the floor of the House. (Hear, hear) the measure of the Government was in every respect constitutional, and was intended to embody the spirit of the law in the letter. What did the 92 clause of the Confederation Act say on this subject? words are as follows "In each Provience the Legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to matters coming within the classes of subjects next hereinafter enumerated that is to say, the amendment, from time time, notwithstanding anything in this Act, of the constitution of the Province, except as regards the office of the Lieutenant Governor." (Hear hear.)

In reply to Mr, Ferguson.

Mr. BLAKE stated that his appoint ment was made by His Excellency, with the advice of the whole Council.

Mr. Ferguson, was very glad to hear this statement, for it freed the President of the Council from any violation of the constitution. (Hear hear.)

Mr. Wood was of opinion that the clause in the North America Act which the Premier had read was so plain with reference to the power of the Governor in Council in appointing the Executive Council that a way faring man could not err. His Excellency might appoint five Councillors in the first instance, and other additional officers afterwarns. It could never have been intended that the Lieutenant Governor could appoint Executive Councillors, who were to advise him on the affairs of the Province, who would not be responsible to the House and might be in opposition to the Government of the day. The present number of the Council might be justified on various grounds, but he was in favour of limiting the number to six.

Mr. Ferguson asked the President of the Council what department he presided over.

Mr. Blake said he presided over the Council. (Hear, hear, and laughter.)

Mr. Ferguson said that was no department.

Mr. E. B. Wood asked the member for South Simcoe if he could inform him what department the President of the Council at Ottawa presided over? (Laughter.)

Mr. Ferguson thought the Premier had no more business in the Council than he had. (Laughter.)

Mr. Cumberland agreed with the late Treasurer that it would be undesirable that the Lieut-Governor should have the power to app

Peterboro, February 7, 1872. 6

St. Catharines Times is "down" on the nine hours movement.

The total loss occasioned by the fire at Norwichville is estimated at $50,000, and is only covered by a trifling insurance. The whole village is almost destroyed, and it will be long ere the people regain their wonted vigor and energy.

Uncle Sam does not appear to have acted wisely in the erection of costly barracks at his new possessions in Alaska. For instance at Fort Wrangel the barracks and officers' quarters cost upwards of $100,000—of which amount the Commandant's house swallowed up about $15,000. Mr. Lear formerly of this city, recently brought the entire range of buildings for $920.

Bishop Moriarty, of Kerry, has written a long letter against home rule, and it is said the Roman Catholic bishops will labor to change the purposes of the British Government (as recently explained in reference to education, by Lord Harrington,) though offering in return for priestly control in education, to muzzle the home rule agitation. Papers containing the letters of Dr. Moriarty and the O'Donoghue, were burned publicly in Killarney, on the 11th ultimo, and the O'Donoghue has been asked to resign by his constituents on the ground that his political opinions do not agree with theirs, and also that he does not attend to his parliamentary duties.

A Big Powder Explosion.—Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 6.—The explosion of the mills of the Miami Powder Company, near Xenia, this morning, was one of the most terrible in the history of powder making in the west. The shock was so great that in the adjacent towns and cities much consternation ensued. In Dayton children rushed out of school buildings, fire bells rang, and it was generally apprehended that some great calamity had occurred within the city limits. In Troy and Tippecanoe houses were shaken as by an earthquake. The first explosion occurred in the wheel mill. This communicated with the press mill, where powder was in process of manufacture and was contained in canvass bags. A double dry-house fifty feet square, containing vast quantities of dry powder, came in next for destruction, and from this the flames spread and other mills exploded in quick succession. Two large double dry houses, three glaze mills, one canning mill, two press mills and one packing house were annihilated, while the remainder of the Company's works were more or less injured. Several persons were killed, and others were badly stunned, barely escaping with their lives. From twenty to twenty-five tons of powder exploded. The loss is estimated at $60,000.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1872.

This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. We do not our Canadian homes can find elsewhere, so interesting and so Canadian, and we ask all Canadians to sustain it. Its circulation is 3,500. New Dominion Monthly 1,50 *per annum in advance. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is Thomas' Eclectric Oil, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientic physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certian fixed proportions of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combination. Thus in the preparation, of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alcohol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this Pain-Killer of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to bush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybedys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have been converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' Pain-Killer that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the Pain-Killer and what more be writes that he paid Doctor Squils over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

God Bless Thee.

BY JOHN READE.

God bless thee!—I can say no more.—I
I know not what thy lot may be;
I cannot see the path before
Through which we reach eternity.
'Tis wisely hid from thee and me;
'Tis vain its maze to explore,
And I can only pray for thee,
God bless thee!—I can do no more.

God bless thee!—I can say no more,
Yet I must ask, although in vain.
"Another year will soon pass o'er—
What changes follow in its train?"
For one, I know, a change of pain;
But it it thee to joy restore,
I'll shr re it, too, and pray again,
God bless thee!—I can do no more.

God bless thee!—I can say no more;
The thousand wishes in my breast
In this one fervent prayer I pour—
The granted these hast all the rest.
God knows our needs and gives the best,
If we with faith His aid implore.
The pure in heart are ever blest;
God bless thee!—I can say no more.

God bless thee!—I can say no more;
What matters all my lips would say?
Too poor were all my wordy store
To give the thoughts I feel to day;
Soon thou and I must pass away
Forever from time's shifting shore;
But I will never cease to pray,
God bless thee!—I can do no more,

A Printers Misfortune.

Some years ago, when the writer was a reporter on an Eastern paper, it devolved on him to write for the same edition an account of the presentation of a gold-headed cane to the Rev. Dr. Madge, the clergyman of the place, and the description of a patent hog-killing and sausage machine, that had just been put in operation at the factory. Now, what made Dr. Madge mad was this: The inconsiderate buccaneer who made up the forms got the locals mixed up in a frightful manner, and when we went to press something like this was the appalling result: "Several of the Rev. Dr. Madge's friends called upon him yesterday, and a brief conversation the unsuspecting hog was seized by the hind legs and slid along a beam, until he reached the hot water tank. His friends explained the object of their visit, and presented him with a very handsome gold-headed butcher, who grabbed him by the tail, swung him round, cut his throat from ear to ear: and in less than a minute the carcass was in the water. Thereupon he came forward and said there were times when his feelings overpowered one, and for that reason he would thank those around him, for the manner in which so huge an animal was cut into so many fragments was simply astonishing. The doctor concluded his remarks, when the machine seized him, and in less time than it takes to write it the hog was cut into fragements and worked up into delicious sausage. The occasion will long be remembered by the doctor's friends as one of the most delightful of their lives. The best pieces can be obtained for fifteen cents per pound, and we are sure that those who have sat so long under his ministry will rejoice that he has been so handsomely treated." Mad! Well about nine o'clock that morning the office had been abandoned by every man but the advertising clerk, and he ascended to the roof and robed himself in boiler iron, so that he could watch the venerable clergyman tearing around down there in the street with his congregation, all wearing panoply of war and carrying butcher knives and things. The next day we explained and apologized, but the doctor stopped his subscription and began to take the rival paper.

Medical Declaration Respecting Alcohol

250 of the leading medical men of England, attached to the metropolitan and provincial hospitals, have issued the following document, over their signatures:—

"As it is believed that the inconsiderate prescription of large quantities of alcoholic liquids by medical men for the patients has given rise, in many instances, to the formation of temperate habits, the undersign d, while unable to abandon the use of alcohol in the treatment of certain cases of disease, are yet of opinion that no medical practitioner should prescribe it without a sense of great responsibility. They believe that alcohol, in whatever form, should be prescribed with care as any powerful drug, and that the directions for its use should be so framed as not to be interpreted as a sanction for excess, or necessarily for the continuance of its use when the occasion is past. They are also of opinion that many people immensely exaggerate the value of alcohol as an article of diet, and since no class of men see so much of its ill effects, and possess such power to retain its abuse, as members of their own profession, they hold that every medical practitioner is bound to exert his utmost influence to inculcate habits of great moderation in the use of alcholic liquids. Being also firmly convinced that the great amount of drinking alcholic liquors among the working classes of this country is one of the greatest evils of the day, destroying—more that anything else—the health, happiness and welfare of those classes, neutralizing, to a great extent the great industrial property which Providence has placed within the reach of this nation, the undersigned would gladly support any wise legislation which would tend to restrict within proper limits the use of alcholi beverages, and gradually introduce habits of temperance."

Why Woman are Weak.

When we consider what an intricate system of defiance to all professions laws a woman's dress has become; the tender age at which this defiance begins, and this relentless pressure of it upon the formative and the reconperative energies of the constitution; the murderous thinness and seantiness of her under dress; the effect of the absence of flannels, and the custom of bearing the neck and arms, upon the sensitive thaues of the lungs and heart; the check to all even circulation of the blood and healthy condition of the skin inflicted by the imperfect and composed covering of her feet and hands; the unhealthy heat of the head, consequent on the manner in which custom requires her to collect her hair into a wad of padding at the base of steel and walebone about all the vital organs of the body; the straight-jacket snap with which the seams of her dress meet about her shoulders, arms and chest; the results inevitable upon making the hips the pivot upon which her heavy cloths are hung, and the fulcrum upon which all the motions of her body must swing in walking—if, indeed, we apply that term to the infantine toddle with which women are driven to get about the world; above all the unreasonable and cruel custom which compels her to drop heavy skirts about her lower limbs and feet, thus indangering her life on all occasions, her health on any but a dry summerday, and her self-reliance forever; when we consider the extent to which the common occupations of a woman deprive her of the open air, of exercise and change of scene, and acquaintance with the world; of the extent to which they are adopted to produce all the varieties of cedentry disease; when we consider the unlimited influence of the mind upon the body, of happiness upon health, and the brooding morbidness and acute suffering which the lives of women so largely induce in them—shall we find it a matter of surprise that woman as a race are diseased and feeble, and are bestowing upon the world a future legacy of diseased children? Shall we wrap the ruined creature away in a shawl to die, and say with sorrowfull assurance: Behold woman "as God made her!"

Woman as God made her! As man and the devil and her own cowardice made her! God never made as are cardling the next generation in this land to-day. Side by side with "female illiteracy," female feebleness is running a race among us. Neglected brains and tortured bodies are working their own way upon our actual and possible mothers. Thoughtful physicians are perplexed and alarmed. We are a beautiful useful, and elevated order of animals the world has done the right thing by us; it has stalled and fed us; it petted and praised us, who can complain?

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, but was ever any before so generally and confidently relied on as a reliable purgative, in spite of all decei, as this pill has been, and is, by the most discerning everywhere? The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that if cures them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its compositon. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression, a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

As occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as has our celebrated remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their consideration, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is as the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malacious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in no way injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of any medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected by obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through, miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torridity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

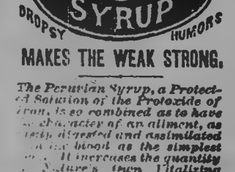
IRON IN THE BLOOD



MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protect- ed Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as readily digested and assimilated into blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's own Vitalizing Fluid in the blood, and carries it, "simply Invigorating and Life Giving" to every part of the body, repairing waste and wear, and thereby nourishing for the growth of the wonderful machinery of this remedy in Liver Complaint, Chronic Diarrhœa, Affections, Fevers, Humors, Constitutional Vigor, Female Weakness and Kidney Complaints, it is unequalled, imparting to the blood, or action of the system. Being free from alcohol, in any form, its effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing health, vigor, and new life into the system, building up an Iron Constitution.

Those who have been changed by this remedy, from sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women, need not be told that it is reasonably hereby recommended to give it a trial.

PRAYER

For the Prince of Wales.

Father of Heaven! hear!
And, if it be Thy will,
O, grant a nation's prayer,
Say to us, peace—be still!
Arise, our Gracious God,
Stay thine afflicting rod—
Save England's future King—
God save our Prince!

Shield Thou the Royal Mother,
Stricken with heartfelt woe;
And Denmark's fairest flower!
So crushed and blighted now,
As stands our widowed Queen
By Albert Edward's bed;
May faith in things unseen
Its heavenly radiance shed
Upon our Queen!

Give her her heart's desire,
Grant her son length of days!
And may he, like his sire,
Live to his Maker's praise;
Thou who alone canst save!
O, Jesus! Saviour! hear!
Redeem him from the grave;
Devote him to Thy fear—
God save our Prince.

O, Holy Spirit! hear;
For Britain intercede;
Plead for Victoria's heir
In this his hour of need!
Succor him! help and strengthen!
Be thou his staff and stay!
Shine on our Prince, and lead him
By a new and living way.
God save our Prince!

A Peep at the East End of London.

F. ARNOLD.

A great deal is talked, especially at this season of the year, about the East End of London, and I am one of those who think that the West should understand the East, and that the half of the world that does not understand how the other half lives should begin to acquire that useful knowledge. The term is often used in a very vague and indefinite way, as if the East End were one dark level of privation and misery.—The fact is, that a large part of the East End is extremely prosperous and respectable, and at the same time, though much is known of the distress of some districts, its most frightful forms of poverty are by no means those with which the public is most familiar. Let us take a glance at what Parson Dale, in 'My Novel,' calls the moral topography of the East End region. A three-fold classification is at once obtained. The dearest part of the East End, where there is most want and recklessness, and from whence East End associations are most readily drawn is, of course, the Bethnal Green and Shoreditch district. Of this we always hear a great deal in very cold weather, and indeed at no time is their obvious appeal for help and compassion silenced or ignored. In fact, it is immensely to the credit of some wealthy West-End district that they have taken some poor eastern parishes under their wing, and as they have little poor of their own do what they can for their adopted brethren of the East End. These extreme poor will therefore make one limb of our classification. But the East End has also its aristocratic side, to which we ought to give the first place of honour. Certain districts in Dalston, Hackney, and Clapton, are, in point of fact, extremely flourishing. The tradesmen make large gains, take their annual holiday by the seaside, and have their comfortable, well-adorned house. This region might almost be called the headquarters of London dissent, and may handsomely don the Protestant dissent. In fact, it is almost a loss of social caste if a man is not a Dissenter.—Whatever disgust their old ancestors may have entertained of 'steeple towers,' the chapels are almost cathedral-like in their splendour and adornments their decorations and amusements. One is extremely glad to hear of this love of music and kindred arts penetrating more and more among the people, because of the lessons of Catholicity and toleration which they everywhere convey. There is an immense amount of truth in Mr. Hawis' work on Music and Morals.

Then there is another part of the East End of London the condition of which is extremely sad, because it is one of deep and deserving poverty. I have especially in view some districts in Dalston and Haggerstone. Their misery is of a type little known and recognized. To the outward eye the streets appear, however humble and monotonous, to be respectable and clean. Perhaps in the whole of such a street there are not two girls-of-all-work to be found; but those small, decent-looking houses are perhaps, warrens, teeming with human life, let off and then re-let. The exterior is respectable enough. The morality, perhaps morality enforced by poverty, is very good. In a parish of six thousand there are only two public houses. Places of amusement there are none. People who have lived in the parish for years have never seen a man drunk here. The energies of the whole people are absorbed in a cruel, unintermitting, hand to hand fight for mere existence. These are the men who do the real work of life, who toil early and late, with no idea of a strike, and with no time to be indolent and sensual. In this district a surprisingly large element of the population consists of people who have seen better days, and who have retired to a locality that convulsively clings to the decencies of life. Like stricken deer they creep into remote corners where they may pine and die. The people who are actively employed are the smallest of small clerks, warehousemen, and the like. Their tending is, however, to be emigratory. If they get on they go to a better neighborhood. If they don't get on, which is quite as likely an hypothesis, they are able to find a lower depth than that in which they are already overwhelmed.

The causes of the cruel poverty, which is chronic horseboots, are various. Any monetary crisis, throwing people out of employment, is at once felt here. Or a man's work may leave him for other reasons, or his health may break down. People are very much given to lying in bed all day, Sunday, and they will be abed week-days as well. They have a great deal of pride, and it is impossible to wish it lessened. And this present pride is sorely taxed in hard times.—When the great disaster comes to a family they are generally able to live on their relations for a time. They may count on the ties of family affection so long as human endurance will extend. Then they will have to fall upon the workhouse. But any extremity will be endured rather than the workhouse.—Men will deliberately starve to death. I know the case of a man who starved that his wife might have the nourishment which the doctor ordered for her. Though the poverty is deep, it is merely abject or begging poverty. The one prevalent type of illness is consumption. Ill-clad, ill-fed, exposed to all variations of weather, they easily fall a prey to the severity of the season. The chances are that when a medical man is called in, it is to some case of decline, which, under the conditions, is hopeless. I do not say that the pestilence and advertised poverty does not deserve much help, but it often gets it exclusive of much more deserving poverty that cannot beg; that cannot find work; that often starves and dies. I know a clergyman in the East that was offered a considerable sum of money for the relief of the poor. He simply refused to take it. He did not wish to be the almoner of funds that were extensively advertised, and to help people already extensively helped to the exclusion of those whose wants were ignored. He said he wouldronly undertake to administer funds, the distribution of which was left to his own discretion. Accordingly, a moderate sum was placed at his disposal. He told me that the good it effected was immense. He gave me an instance. He knew a poor schoolmaster a man of some standing, who had been utterly disabled by disease, and, at the same time, his wife had been confined. This was not the sort of case which should be dragged into the newspapers. My friend paid off some little debts that had unavoidably accumulated, and sent off the poor family for a holiday to the seaside, where they recruited their health thoroughly, and were once more put among the earning classes.

There is no doubt but there is something unsatisfactory in the eleemosynary condition of things. There is a broad, deep undercurrent of liberality in this country, but it is not always easy to get at, nor does it always flow in the proper channel. There are certain things for which it is very easy to get money, and there are other things for which it is at times almost impossible to get money for any material public undertaking; for anything that shall strike the eye and make a show, and have some promise of permanence, of course supposing in every instance that a subscription is printed and published, it is not at all difficult to get adequate funds. But if it is human heart and mind and muscle that are concerned, and not brick and mortar, if it is not the glorification of one individual, but merely the life or happiness of another, then the difficulty becomes very great. It is easy to get money for a church, but very difficult to get money for a parson. The fact is, that, in some districts, there is a great danger of the undue multiplication of churches. I will engage to build an organ, a church, a cathedral, a pagoda, but I should find it extremely difficult to get help for the fatherless and the widow. This is a material age that will attend to make, and not to mass. I saw a splendid church in the provinces the other day that had been erected at the expense of many thousand pounds, and I found the only clergyman was a hard-worked schoolmaster, who could only give the droppings of his time, and was most scantily remunerated with the offertory that had been first skimmed for church purposes In fact, the multiplication of churches that are splendidly built, and parsons that are slenderly endowed, is becoming an opprobium to our little section of Christendom. One other ecclesiastical historian, in noting the declining Christianity of a country from which Christianity subsequently vanished, reckoned up among disastrous signs the useless multiplication of churches. I cannot disguise my contempt for people who will give a hundred pounds to see their name emblazoned in standing advertisements, and will grudgingly dole out or refuse the help, which, if given in plentuous measure, would have borne plenteous results. To bring the subject to a point, help the East End by all means, but especially help the uncomplaining and deserving hard-worked poor.

Alaska.

Sitka (Alaska) Cor. Philadelphia Press.

The village contains forty or fifty houses. The population consists of one thousand Indians and two thousand dogs. Of the dogs all but one are of the same sharp-eared, wolfish type seen among the Indians of the plains. The exception was a bandy-legged lop-eared cur of civilized breed, the only one among the two thousand that showed a lack of civility by barking at our heels. The houses much more resemble the semi-subterranean abodes of the Laplanders and Esquimaux than the wigwams of American Indians. Like the oak described by the American poet, they extended as far into the earth as above it. Some of them are from twenty to thirty feet square, and built of very wide cedar planks, many of them more than four yards across, worked out by these rude people.

We entered several. Creeping through apertures, both square and round, not more than three feet in diameter, we descended flights of steps into the large single room. In the centre of each a fire was built on the ground, and in the centre of each roof a hole out of which passed a small portion of the smoke, the most of it remaining for the benefit of the salmon hanging over our heads, and to make sore eyes for the inmates. The whole inside is floored, except the fireplace in the middle. On both sides are the sleeping places, covered with skins and blankets, and in some instances seperated by low partitions. In the rear, and on shelves below the dormitories, were stored potatoes, and dried salmon in small bales, covered with matting. Their largest potatoes are the size of a hulled walnut.

The women were either cooking or working small baskets and other utensils of dried grass, in the manufacture of which they are surpassingly skillful. The men were building canoes outside, or carving odd images of wood or walrus ivory, for sale to curious voyagers, one of whom is your correspondent. This was indicated by his many pertinent of queer prices, Both their boys, boys and barbed arrows for the slaughter of fur seals and other articles of use, but of no especial utility. As time is of no value to these people, they bestow great labor for small rewards. A grass mat or basket, or an ivory carving that has occupied several days in its construction, can be bought for two or three bits, and a dressed deer skin, tanned as only they can do it, over which some hours of many days have been spent, may be purchased for a trifle.

Their canoe building is worthy of note. Out of a huge spruce or cedar tree they work a vessel of perfect symmetry that will carry from five to ten tons. After roughly hewing it in the forest they tow and drag it to their homes, which are always near the shore, to be finished at their leisure. An Indian does not like to be hurried, and especially by such men as Sheridan and Crook. I saw many of these canoes in process of construction. The most curious operation is that of stretching them apart, when reduced to the proper thinness of an inch or more. Before stretching they may be four feet wide at the top. After it these proportions will be reversed, making the width four feet. To accomplish this the hollow is filled with water, which is raised to the boiling point with heated stones. It is then covered with mats until thoroughly steamed, when the stretching begins. The sides are kept apart by cross-pieces, which serve afterwards as seats for paddlers. But few of them have learned the labor-saving capacity of oars. They use no nails, but fasten their woods with roots and withes.

They make spoons and other useful articles from the horns of the argali and tusks of the walrus. They burn the dead and deposit the ashes in little outdoor structures that look like a cross between an old fashioned bee-hive and a small hen coop. The build a square, hollow pile of logs, and after getting them well ablaze thrust the body in head foremost, whereby the mourning relatives are consoled with the savory odors of roast Indian.

The ladies beautify their complexions with soot and red paint, and still further enhance their charms by wearing a bone through the upper lip, the size of which is increased from year to year until in some of the old ones it attains a width of two inches. An Indian lady thus adorned, with her coarse, black, uncombed locks hanging in matted profusion around her beautiful pig eyes and lop ears, is only resistable to those whose affections are already preoccupied. The delights of courtship must be doubled by the pleasant aroma of salmon which pervades the premises and, as I have heard, their persons.

Among them the crow and the raven are held sacred, and flit around their lodges undisturbed. They live mainly on fish, and have a monopoly of the trapping. There is but one white trapper in the country, and he is at Cook's Inlet, 600 miles W. N. W.

Walking.

An ingenious contributor to the Christian Union recently argued that in the progress of mankind the use of the legs was being evolved out of existence, and by consequence the organs themselves would finally disappear. We are half inclined to favor this theory when we see how little favor the primary method of locomotion finds among many people. A person who walks when he could ride is almost as wonderful in their eyes as a man who could fly. But for ourselves, we hope that legs and the use of them will last at least as long as we shall abide on this planet.

Seriously, we think in the modern rage for artificial modes of exercise too little time is devoted to that which is the oldest, the simplest, and, in many respects, the best. That which is often objected to in it—that it takes time—should be a recommendation. To be kept in the open air for hours every day is itself almost better than any mere use of the muscles. If walking seems tame and wearisome, it is generally a sign for vitiated taste for excitement, or of exceptional bodily weakness. A good walker—and almost anyone may become such by practice—finds a pleasure in the play of his muscles like that which the rider or oarsman enjoys.

In the country, especially, the habit is favourable to the cultivation of that love of nature which gives more pleasure than almost any other taste. There are few finer conditions of body than that induced by a vigorous walk in our bracing Canadian atmosphere. How many of our readers treasure among their choicest remembrances glorious days among the Alps? One great element of the pleasure there was due to the bodily exertion of walking or climbing. If anyone says he enjoyed Switzerland and did no walking, we tell him he missed one of the great sources of pleasure there. The soul is never so sensitive to every form of enjoyment, as when its medium, the body, is tense and clear. It is then that the sense of beauty is keenest, and the play of all the nobler faculties freest. Nothing is at once so conducive to this and so easily within the reach of every well person, as a long free, fast walk.

THE CADI'S DECISION.—A poor Turkish slater, of Constantinople, being at work upon the roof of a house, lost his footing and fell into the narrow street upon a man who chanced to be passing at the time. The pedestrian was killed by the concussion, while the slater escaped without material injury.

A son of the deceased caused the slater to be arrested and taken before the Cadi, where he made the most grave charge, and claimed ample redress.

The Cadi listened attentively, and in the end asked the slater what he had to say in his defense.

"Dispenser of Justice," answered the accused, in humble mood, "it is even as this man says; but God forbid that there should be evil in my heart. I am a poor man, and know not how I can make amends."

The son of the man who had been killed thereupon demanded that condign punishment be inflicted upon the accused.

The Cadi meditated a few moments and then said;

"It shall be so."

Then to the slater he continued—

"Thou shalt stand in the street where the father of this man stood when thou didst fall upon him."

And to the accuser he added—

"And thou shalt, if it so please thee, go upon the roof and fall upon the slater, even as he did fall upon you, and thus Allah is quits!"

The Mutability of Language.

Language shares in all the vicissitudes of man. It reflects all the changes in the character, taste customs and opinions of a people and show how they advance or recede in culture and morality. Often the meaning of a word changes imperceptibly, until it becomes just the opposite of what it once was. To let, in the common version of the Bible, means, to oppose; today, it means to permit. Anecdote means a short, amusing story; etymologically, it denotes something as yet unpublished.—The instant an anecdote is published, it belies its title; it is no longer an anecdote. To prevent, which now means to hinder to obstruct, signified, in its Latin etymology, to anticipate to get the start of, and is thus used in the Old Testament. Girl, once designated a young person of either sex. Widow, once applied to man as well as women. Astonished literally means thunderstruck, as its derivation from astonare shows; Milton speaks of a knave who threw some heavy stones upon a certain king "whereof the one smote the king upon his head, the other astonished his shoulder.," Property and propriety came from the same French word propriete; so that the Frenchman in New York was not far out of the way, when in the panic of '57, he said he 'should lose all his propriety."

Words are elevated and enobled in meaning, and they also deteriorate and degenerate. Humility, with the Greeks and Romans meant meaness of spirit; Paradise, in Oriental tongue, meant only a royal park; of the earth in the spring time and of the recollection of forgotten knowledge; sacrament and mystery are wores "fetched from the very dregs of paganism" to set forth the great truth of our redemption.—On the other hand, knave formerly signified only lad: a villian was a peasent; amenial was one of the many; insolent meant unusual; silly, weak.—the infant Jesus being termed by an old English poet "that harmless, silly babe," officious signified ready to do kindly officers. Homely formerly meant secret and familiar; and brat, now a vulgar and contemptuous word, had anciently a very different signification, as in the following lines from an old hymn by Gascoigne:—

O Israel, O household of the Lord,
O Abraham's brats, O brood of blessed seed
O chosen sheep, that loved the Lord indeed.

Impotence meant graft; Bacon speaks of "those most virtuous and goodly young imps, the Duke of Sussex and his brother." Beldam was originally belle dame fair lady.

Saunterers were once pilgrims to the Holy Land (la Sainte Terre) who, it was found took their own time to get there.—Bit is that which has been bit off, and exactly corresponds to the word "morsel," used in the same sense, and derived from the Latin mordere, to bite. Bankrupt means litlrally broken bench. It was the custon in the twelith and thirteenth centuries for the Lombard merchants to expose their wares for sale in the market place on benches. When one of their number failed, all the other merchants set upon him, drove him from the market and broke his bench to pieces. Banco Rotto, the Indian for bench-broken, becomes banqueroute in French, and in English bankrupt. Caitiff, from the Latin captivus, only another from captive. The French chetif, mean pitiful, has the same origin—both words referring to the moral deradation produced by captivity. Mountebank means a quack medicine vendor—from the Indian montare, to mount and banco, a bench; literally one who mounts a bench to boast of his infallinable skill in curing diseases. Toad-eater is a metaphor taken from a mountebank's boy eating toads to show his master's skill in expelling poison. The proprietory of the term rests on the fact that dependent persons are often forced to do the most nauseous things to please their patrons. Quandary is a corruption in the French "qu'en dirai Ji?" "what shall I say of it and express the feeling of uncertainty that would naturally prompt to such a question. First is from the French se fendre, to pretend: one that originally fainting was pretended weakness or inability. We have on example of the word in the french theatres, where professional fainters are employed, whose business it is to sink to the floor, under the powerful acting of the tragedians. Topsy-turvy is said to be a contraction or corruption of "topside t'other way," just as helter-skelter is from helariter et celeriter, "gaily and quickly."

Wiseacre has no connection to "acre." The world is corruption, both in spelling and pronouncation of the German Weissager, a wise sayer of wise maxims. The frontispiece of a cook is not a piece in front of a book; it denotes a frout view, and is from the Latin frontispicium. Jerusalem artichoke is a corruption of girasol artichoke. Girasol, French, means "turning toward the sun," Shamefaced does not mean having a face denoting shame. Sername is from the French surnom, meaning additional name, and should not, therefore, be spelled surname, as if it meant the name of one's sire. Freemason is not half-Saxon, but is from the French frere-macon, brother mason.—Standard.

The Jews In Jerusalem.

In Jerusalem, as in Rome and elsewhere the Jews are shut up in a separate quarter, that the meanest, darkest, filthiest. One twilight I came unexpectedly into their settlement. It was a mud lane, lined with hovels, through which a funeral procession was slowly moving, the body borne on men's shoulders in the dress of life —a perfect tatterdemalion crew wailing as they followed. Coming to the Land of Promise to die, many are robbed on the way, and all are preyed upon after they arrive, so that, I apprehend, nothing is more real about them than wretchedness. They have no consuls to interfere when a tax is exacted a second time in the same year. If injured, they must suffer in silence, if plundered by the Arabs, they have no hope of recovery. Only conversion would make them outwardly comfortable, and that they hate as perdition. Generous help is constantly sent them from abroad but none too much, although the amusing story is told of Sir Moses Montefiore having spent all his money in alms at Jerusalem and being obliged to borrow at usurious rates of interest from one of the beggars he had relived, that he might get back to London.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Who Should Milk?

I am not a fault finder or at least I have not yet attained that name from my neighbors, and a person is very likely to attain such if he is one; but I do object to women milking, not because they dont do it right, but it is not a womans place to be running after the cows. Women who attend to their household duties rightly have no time to attend to cows, and I believe if they have not the time to attend to them they should not milk. Cows will not do as well when they have two or three persons working with them as when there is but one; and I hold if the woman is not the person to feed the cows, as all, no doubt, will admit, neither is she the one to milk them. I have heard some men say, "My wife says a man is too dirty to milk," and I didn't much wonder at it by the husband That is a very good way to raise dirty boys. Just let them know that they can be too dirty to milk, and they will soon get out of it, for I know it from experience,—and and experience sometimes such as the cow 'a-ding me her foot, kicking the milk all over me, when I had on my Sunday best —there is no fun in milking when it is done right. I would say to my fair readers, for the old rhyme—

"A man's work is from
But a woman's work

Fun in Indianapolis.

From the Indianapolis Journal.

A few days since a ruralist from Anderson or thereboute visited the city on business, and in the course of his peregrinations purchased a package of Roman candles for the purpose of amusing his progeny on his return. His fireworks were carefully deposited in a rear pocket and a short time thereafter he wended his way to the depot to take the evening train. While loitering in the waiting room admiring the stacks of ginger-bread, hard boiled eggs dough-nuts temptingly displayed on the lunch-counter, he carelessly whisked his left coat tail against the red-hot stove, and trouble immediately ensued. The first rocket narrowly missed the face of a native who was in a half comatose condition, caused by much extract of hop, and without waiting to enquire into particulars, he made for the door in two gigantic leaps. All the occupants of the room immediately endeavored to follow his example, and with a worthy determination not to be distanced, the proprietor of the candies forced himself into the midst of the throng, and endeavored frantically to escape. In the meantime, the candies fizzed and popped, giving strength to the evident impression that the party was being bombarded with some sort of an infernal machine; and, strange as it may seem, the innocent cause of all the trouble was the most frightened man in the lot.—Not until fearful holes had been burned in the urodest portion of his neither garments, and the epidermis looked as though mustard plaster had been pulled off volleuly, did he discover the cause of the panic. Order was finally restored, though the effects on the mans coat-tail were damnerous, and we are also informed that his unmentionables required immediately half-soling, as the victim was willing to testify that not one of the candles missed fire.

Robert Bruce's Heart.

History and song have alike made us familiar with the last wish of Robert Bruce, the heroic king of Scotland, when after two years of peace and contemplation he died in the north, at Cardoss. He desired that in part fulfilment of a vow he had made to march to Jerusalem, a purpose which the incessant war with England baffled, his heart should be laid in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, and on his deathbed he besought his old friend and faithful brother soldier, the good Sir James Douglas, to undertake that which was a most arduous journey, and be the bearer of the relic.—"And it is my command," he added to quote Froissart, that you do use that royal state and maintenance in your journey both yourself and your companions, that into whatever lands or cities you may come, all may know that ye have in charge to beyond the seas, the heart of King Bruce of Scotland. Then all who stood around his bed began to weep, and Douglas replied, "Assuredly my leige, I do promise, by the faith I owe to God and other of knighthood."—"Now praise be to God," said the king, "I shall die in peace." It is a matter of history how Douglas departed on his errand, with a train of knights, and choosing to land on the Spanish coast heard that Alphonso of Leon and Castine was at war with Osman, the Morish King of Granada. In the true spirit of the age, he could not resist the temptation of striking a blow for the Christian faith, and so joined the Spaniards.—He led their van upon the plain of Thebes, near the Andalusian frontier. In a silver casket at his neck he bore the heart of Bruce, which rashly and repeatedly he cast before him amid the Moors Crying "Now pass on as ye were wont, and Douglas, will follow thee or die." And there he fell, together with Sir William Sinclair, of Roslin, Sir Robert and Walter Logan, of Restorling, and others. Bruce's heart, instead of being taken to Jerusalem, was brought home by Sir Simon of Lee, and deposited in Melrose Abbey. Douglas was lain among his kindred in Liddesdale, and from thence onward "the bloody heart," surmounted by a crown, became the cognisance of all the Douglasses in Scotland. Bruce was interred Dumfermline; and when his skeleton was discovered in 1818, the breat bone was found to have been sawn across to permit the removal of the heart in accordance with the NEW W. M. CHURCH.—A few weeks ago a meeting of the members of the W. M. Church, at Robinson's, was held to consider whether it would be more advisable to repair the old church or build a new one, when the latter was at once resolved and Mr. John Bell appointed to receive subscriptions. Such was his success, that the Building Committee felt that they could at once proceed with the work. Messrs. Leonard and Stock were awarded the contract last Friday. The building is to be 40 by 30 and 16 feet to square, whether a tower and spire or ornamental front the same as the new W. M. Church in Lindsay has not yet been decided.—COM.

This shows very favorable training in the school, as not very many of them are from other schools, although there are a few.

We understand that it is the intention of the Pharmaceutical Society to grant an annual allowance per capitum for all students pursuing the necessary studies at any High School or Collegiate Institute. Those students to attend only during the hours the particular classes they engage in are being heard. A few of those students have already made application to be admitted on these terms, to the Peterboro Collegiate Institute.

A correspondent writes to us from the northern part of the county, congratulating the county on the election of John Walton, Esq., as Warden, believing, as he says, that Mr. Walton will do all he can to keep down County rates. Our correspondent lives nearly 50 miles from Peterboro, on a wild lot, and yet last year had to pay, he says, $5.39 of county rate, which he holds is very discouraging to those who live so far back, and not on the best land, as is well known. He complains that a great portion of the County apportionment is foolishly spent in buying support for the next election, three times as much as work is worth, he says, is often paid. He speaks of wholesale corruption, but it is easy to make charges, but more difficult to substantiate them.

Our correspondent thinks that the legal statute labor should suffice to keep the roads in repair, and that county money should be spent only on bridges. Perhaps the hint will be useful to the County Council. We give the substance of the communication in general terms, because the charges of corruption are so direct that we believe, to publish the communication itself, would lead to unnecessary trouble, and perhaps without any good results.

The Washington Treaty and the American Claims.

England has been for the past week in a fervor of excitement over the question of the American claims for indirect damages made before the Geneva Conference; while in the neighboring Republic the interest and anxiety cannot have been less intense, though more quietly manifested. The subject is one of the deepest interest to us Canadians, for we well know that should a war break out between Great Britain and the United States our fair country would be the base of operations for the British army and perhaps the scene of many a bloody battle.

Less than a year ago it was announced to the world that a new way had been found to settle the quarrels of nations—that in the future resort should be had to friendly arbitration instead of barbarous war. By the Treaty of Washington it was agreed that the famous Alabama Claims should be referred to certain arbitrators who were to ascertain and determine what claims were valid, and what amount should be paid by Great Britain to the United States on account of the liability of the former country arising from her failure to perform the duty of a neutral power. The American Government taking advantage of the loose wording of the Treaty have prepared a case to be submitted to the Geneva Conference, in which damages are claimed not merely for the direct injury committed by the Alabama and the expense and trouble they were put to capture that vessel and others of her class, amounting to about twenty-five million dollars; but also for indirect and consequential injury in the transfer of their commerce to other nations, and in the prolongation and additional cost of the war. The press of Great Britain flared up at the extravagance of this demand, and such a pressure was brought to bear on the Government that the Premier in the House of Commons declared that "even a nation in the extremity of war could not submit to it," while the American Government was equally determined that in no event would it recede from the position it had taken.

The Government of the United States consider that they are fully justified in making out the strongest case and presenting all their demands for reference to any decision by the arbitrators, and that it is for the arbitrators to determine what claims shall be admitted and what rejected. Great Britain on the other hand believing that she had conceded enough already in offering to pay for direct damages, remembering that the Americans would not allow any mention to be made of the Fenian Raid claims, and considering it absurd to attempt to estimate the damages for the prolongation of the war, is unwilling that such an erroneous demand should even be made before the Conference. Such has been the gloomy state of affairs during the past week, and the solution of the difficulty seems as yet no nearer, though it is hoped that the sword will not be called in to decide it.—Diplomacy can do much; but when we remember on what slight provocation the Franco-Prussian war broke out, we cannot but feel anxiety for the result of the present trouble. May Great Britian and the United States have cooler, wiser statesmen, and more sensible citizens than had unhappy France in 1870. We look with eagerness for what is to follow. We shall be thankful if nothing more precious than ink be wasted in the combat; but should it be otherwise, and should our Fenian neighbors be let loose for the purpose of "annexing Canada and adding Stars to the American banner" (in revenge for "cold Ireland") we are confident that every true Canadian will be found ready to give a good account of himself in defence of his home.

Debate on the Estimates.

On Wednesday Evening, Mr. McKenzie brought down his financial statement. During the debate, he said:—

It was the constant complaint prior to 1867 that we were subjected as a people to unfair influence. We were placed in the position of contributing from two-thirds to three-fourths of the revenue of the country, while we were always unable to obtain for any local purpose, such as we tax ourselves for under the present system one-half of the actual revenue of the united provinces. In this respect he believed the change effected by the confederation of the provinces was extremely beneficial to us as a province; and he hoped to the Province of Quebec also, by stimulating its people to greater exertions in regard to local affairs, instead of depending upon the general resources. He need scarcely refer in regard to this matter to more than a few figures to indicate the position that we were placed in, in regard to local taxation. In so far as he had been able to obtain correct statistics in the few days he had to devote to the subject, he found, for instance, that during the old union of Upper and Lower Canada the expenditure for the administration of justice in Lower Canada cost $7,715,300,26; in Upper Canada for the same period, $5,102,633 79; leaving an excess for the purpose of the administration of justice of Lower over Upper Canada of $2,611,666 47, while the average excess of population was greatly with the latter. For educational purposes the expenditure in Lower Canada derived from the sources of general taxation was $4,309,397 73; in Upper Canada, $3,962,627 55; being an excess in favor of Quebec of $346,770 17. This comparitive statement might be carried out in other matters particularly in regard to the votes for colonization roads and bridges and special works connected therewith. He had not been able to prepare a detailed statement of them for to-night, but could say that the votes for this purpose in Lower Canada were about two millions in excess of those of Upper Canada. These were the three great branches of local expenditure for which local taxation, either parliamentary or municipal, must now be imposed. In Ontario we had perhaps the most complete municipal system in the world. In no country that he was aware of was it so complete or brought the principal of self-government so near home to every one. This enabled the people to carry on local improvements without making constant appeals to the Administration that conducted the political affairs of the country. This fact should be remembered in contrasting our income and expenditure and in speaking of the large surplus revenue that had been accumulated during the last four years. In discussions of these matters in the other Provinces by the press and by the politicians who were not thoroughly informed on the subject, the impression is made that this Province obtained some extraordinary advantage over some of the other Provinces by the Act of Confederation. We are told that while before the Union we were complaining of constant deficits, since that time this Province had waxed rich and had a large surplus; while the real truth is that were we to devote the revenue accruing to the Government of Ontario from general sources to the same purposes that public money is devoted in the other Provinces, we would not only have no surplus, but we would be obliged to resort to direct taxation to a very large extent to meet our expenses. In order to show this clearly, he would submit a statement of the relative amounts paid for local purposes in the other provinces. He took the latest published statement he could find, that of 1870-71. In the other provinces, under the head of education, during that year there was expended from government sources.

In Ontario	$379,305, or 24c per head
In Quebec	311,210, or 26c	" "
In Nova Scotia	165,000, or 42c	" "
New Brunswick	136,711, or 47c	" "

For roads and bridges during the same period the Government of Ontario expended	$60,008 or 4c per head

Quebec	" 150,000, or 12½c	"
Nova Scotia	214,213, or 55c	"
New Brunswick	150,000, or 56	"

It must be remembered that the amount spent for roads in Ontario by the Government was spent entirely upon Colonization roads in these districts where there was either no population, or where the population was so sparse as to be unable to contribute anything for local purposes. In Quebec a very large proportion of the $150,000, considerably more than two thirds of it, was spent in the old settled counties. For the administration of justice there was expended last year by the Government of

Ontario	$197,000 or 12½c per head
Quebec	373,838 or 51c	" "

The local municipalities contributed for the administration of justice $381,188, or about double the amount expended during the same time by the Government for the like purpose. During the excitement consequent upon the passage of the Nova Scotia Relief Bill, as it was called, Mr. Langton prepared an elaborate statement, which he would not read, but would simply give his conclusions as to the extent of local Parliamentary and municipal taxation in the Provinces. Mr. Langton showed that the local Parliaments and municipal authorities in the four Provinces contributed per head for purely local purposes, in addition, of course, to the money received from the Dominion from the two or three sources from which the subsidies are derived, as follows:—

Ontario	$4 01
Quebec	2 69
Nova Scotia	1 83½
New Brunswick	1 81½

Mr. Mackenzie said that it seemed to him that the Ontario delegates who went to Ottawa with Sir Edmund Head, when they found pay for the sum of maintenance of indigent children so afflicted. We had the painful fact before us that a very considerable number of young people who were afflicted were not able to obtain admission to these institutions, because the counties did not choose to make the necessary provision for them. It was the bounden duty of the country, under these circumstances, to see that these children were not left unprovided for. (Applause) This might possibly require some change in the mode of admission, and might ultimately involve some increase in the cost of maintenance. Before leaving the subject of charitable institutions, he desired to refer to that class which comprised hospitals, houses of industry, and institutions for the indigent poor. We were voting for this purpose an annual sum of $42,000. It appeared to him that this sum had been voted on a most vicious principle, or no principle at all—except the capability of a member to procure more monetary aid for one institution than for another. He thought the proper way to do was to form some plan by which aid would be given in a systematic way, the community amongst which these institutions were established contributing their share. He read from the report of Mr. Langmuir to show the defective arrangement of one of these institutions situated at Kingston, and which received an annual grant of $8,400; and yet the community amongst which this institution was established contributed to its support only $36 per annum. If he took another institution of the same kind in Kingston—the Hotel Dieu—it would be found that it received $600 from the Provincial Exchequer, yet provided from its own resources the sum of $1,392. The Government had had before them for the last ten days a long memorial from the trustees of the General Hospital of Toronto, setting forth the condition of that building. Its financial report was extremely unsatisfactory; for while the Province was giving the hospital the sum of $11,000 the city of Toronto only contributed $1,718. The institution had been endowed from the public resources, yet the property appeared to have been squandered. The Government, during the recess, would endeavour to mature some plan by which they could come to the House and ask it to do justice to the different benevolent institutions throughout the country. With regard to the next item—that of Education—it would be observed that the Government had increased the vote over that of last year. He proposed to explain the reasons for that increase. He considered that the education of the people was one of the very first considerations that should actuate a government in preparing estimates of public expenditure. The chief item under this head was an increase of twelve and a half per cent upon the usual grant for distribution among ordinary schools. The late Government last year asked $175,000.—The present Government asked $200,000 for the same purpose. He felt that our Common Schools, which had been lauded, and justly so, had not been in so satisfactory a condition as could be desired, and when we had to compete in the labor market more money was required for salaries. A large number of those employed in teaching only adopted teaching until some other profession offered a more advantageous position. And the young ladies who taught in them only did so until they found engagements of a different character. (Laughter.) It was extremely desirable to raise the profession of teachers as much as possible. They were a most important class of persons, and much depended on the class of teachers that were employed in our public schools. When under the late School Act higher qualifications were demanded of teachers, it would be quite unfair to demand these qualifications without offering a remuneration somewhat larger than before. (Applause.) The item for High Schools was $2,000 larger than the vote of last year, but was required to meet the expenditure necessitated by the increase of High Schools in connection with the item for Depository Libraries there arose a question which he was not desirous to discuss at present, namely, whether it was desirable to continue the system of selling libraries and books by the Education Department. He would not now express an opinion on the matter, for it was one on which public opinion was to a certain extent divided. It would have to receive the attention of any Government that dealt thoroughly with educational matters. For public school inspection, the Government asked a vote of $56,550, instead of $22,000, the vote of last year. The sum of $2,500 of this increase was simply to meet the probable increase in the number of schools to be inspected. Part of this vote he would explain more fully when he came to take the vote in committee.

The Government asked for Colonization Roads a sum considerably in excess of that of last year. He would take up, in connection with this subject, that of immigration. For colonization roads to the Government asked $79,700; for immigration purposes $6,000. The Government had felt that it was extremely desirable to adopt some plan whereby we could direct a larger stream of immigration into the country. The was a large tract of country, bounded by the Ottawa and French Rivers, which contain according to Sir Wm. Logan, between 25 and 30 per cent, of valuable land; or in other words, one-fourth of it was suitable for settlement. Besides there was a large portion which would make excellent pasture-land. This country could only be penetrated by assistance from the Government. One of the difficulties in settling immgrants on wood-lands was the impossibility of finding for them profitable employment. But the Kingston and Pembroke Railroad, the road going to Muskoka—the Midland, Belleville and Peterboro' roads—and other railways projected or building on that quarter, would afford employment for a large number of immigrants; and those railroad companies would find an abundance of labour with which to carry on their operations. The expenditure for immigration last year was $30,000. A large portion of the sum was expended on printing —about $11,000—and on lecturing in Great Britain and Ireland. It was not in his opinion, very desirable that a large class of the city population of the old country should be sent over. We wanted more of the agricultural class. The Government intended to reach this class by means of local societies, and by the distribution of so much per head. The actual mode of arrangement had not yet been decided on, but would be explained on a future occasion. He would add that they had not adopted this policy without careful deliberation, and communication with those societies that had assisted immigrants to this country, some of them had spent more money upon it than the Government had. They had also in view the securing of very considerable assistance from local societies in this country organised for the purpose of promoting immigration. They expected also assistance from railway contractors who would need labour. They would avail themselves of all those agencies, and would distribute the vote of the House to any or all of them. It was but right to remark that in initiating this policy he did not expect any very decided success the first year; but their object was to lay the foundation of a policy that would ultimately be productive of the greatest possible benefits to this country. In regard to the expenses of civil government he did not propose any serious change; but he proposed to have a different system of presenting the expenditure of public money to the public view. In former estimates a large number of the employees in some departments did not appear at all upon the ordinary pay-list of the office. For instance in the department of Public Works over $6,000 was paid for salaries that did not appear as salaries, but as a charge upon the public works, upon which the employees spent more or less of their time. In making up his estimates he had included these services as charges upon the department to which they belonged. Changes had also been made upon some of the departments that were not strictly connected with the civil service. For instance, in the department of Public instruction, the Deputy-Superintendent was paid, apparently, $4,200, although he received in addition to that $680 as editor of the Journal of Education. He was no advocate for low salaries, but thought it right that payments should appear on the votes in the proper place. In preparing his estimates, he showed for what particular service each payment was made. The usual course of the Government had been to submit a report of the Auditor, and to permit that report to be the only information afforded to the House and the country of the Province. The Hon. Mr. Dunkin had been appointed Hon. Wm. McDougall commissioner to make a report upon this subject. This appointment had been continued by the present Government, and as soon as his report was received the Government would adopt such measures as was desirable in the public interest for the settlement of this matter. He also asked a small vote for the purpose of defining the Quebec boundry.—As the House was aware, the boundry between Ontario and Quebec followed the Ottawa River up to Lake Temiscaming. From that point it diverged from the river, but the precise location of the line had not been ascertained. Now that the timber trade was extending so far into that region it was desirable that the line should be determined at as early a day as possible. They also asked a vote of $5,000, to offer a reward for the apprehension of the murderers of Thomas Scott. (Cheers.)

Mr. Cameron—$25,000 you ought to have said.

Mr. Mackenzie asked why the honorable gentleman had not offered $25,000 when he was in a position to do it (Hear, hear.) He believed that this would accomplish the desired result and that the man who had acted in this manner would never again have the honor of shaking hands with Lieut. Governor Archibald. (Cheers.) These items comprised the chief expenditure of the country. They asked for a sum of money to carry out the proposal made by the late Government, as to the award of the arbitrators in carrying it before the Privy Council. The case had been prepared by the hon. member for South Brant. He (Mr. Mackenzie) had no fears for the success of the appeal. The argument prepared by Mr. Wood was so conclusive that it was almost impossible to conceive that the case should not be decided in favor of this Province. But if the Government of Quebec made any proposal, this Government would be prepared to consider it, if it did not involve a great departure from the principle adopted by the arbitrators. The Government also asked for a vote of $90,000 to enable them to make the reduction they proposed in the price of school lands that belonged to Ontario. He would now call the attention of the House to the items of revenue for 1872. The following is the statement:—

He thanked the House and the gentlemen opposite for the courtesy with which he had been treated. In his short experience in this Parliament and Government he had endeavored to present as full a statement as the circumstances would permit to lay before the House and the country. (Cheers.)

Mr. Cameron drew the attention of the Treasurer to the fact that he had omitted to speak of the expenses of legislation.

Mr Mackenzie said that there was a vote asked of $10,000 for an increase of the library. He thought that the whole House would concur in the necessity for that expenditure. It was the intention of the Government to furnish a library, with valuable works of reference on constitutional law, and other kindred subjects absolutely necessary to carry on the work of legislation.

Mr. E. B. Wood thought this Province was still paying in the Dominion exchequer an amount out of all proportion to the sum received back. He believed Ontario paid in customs and excise, four-fifths of the entire revenue of the Dominion. Still, he hoped they would feel that they were building on an integral part of the British Empire, ultimately to eventuate in a nationality that would compare favorably with many of the nations now on the continent of Europe. The Confederation had worked well, in the local and general Governments, and in their relations to one another. The Central Prison was a well considered measure, had been long before the country, and had been the subject of elaborate reports from the Prison Inspector. They had been assured that the prison would not only be self supporting, but would be a source of revenue to the country. He defended the establishment of the Agricultural College. He agreed with the Treasurer that the money had been distributed to hospitals and similar institution without any principle.

Mr. Blake pointed out that the Government had given more particulars than had been given in the past four years, and all they could give under the circumstances in which they took office. The votes for the colonization roads had been hitherto taken en bloc, and the House would be surprised to learn that the votes, which they had supposed were devoted to the colonization roads, had included the salary of the superintendent of the roads, which now appeared in the Crown Lands expenditure. As to immigration they had told the House that upon the vote being moved the plan would be elaborated in more detail, and the House would be put in a position to judge of the question. With regard to naforseen and unprovided contingencies, he had never objected to the vote when in opposition, but had often requested the Treasurer to ask for a larger vote than $20,000 for this purpose. It was necessary to have a sum given as a vote of credit; but Ministers should be held responsible not to expend a single dollar beyond the sum voted. In these estimates they had to ask no less than $59,000 to cover unprovided items in past years including $20,000 voted last year, and $6,000 or $7,000 included in the unprovided for of 1870. The Government proposed to take a vote for such a sum as would enable them to say at the close of the year that they had not exceeded the amount. The year before last $49,000 had been spent without the authority of Parliament at all. The Government considered $50,000 a fit sum to be taken as a vote of credit and expended under that stringent sense of responsibility, which ought to rule in such cases. It would also be incumbent on them not to expend more during the year than they had Parliamentary authority for.

The present Government were placed in the dilemma of being obliged to take votes for the continuance of these projects, without being able, in the short time placed at their disposal, to mature a plan for their management. His own impression was that these institutions would have been placed on a better footing had time been taken for deliberation, and thoroughly competent plans been prepared. The Government was obliged to take a vote for these institutions. The erection of a central prison for the detention of prisoners undergoing a long sentance was practical providing a local penitentary, which it was clearly the duty of the Dominion Government to undertake. In New Brunswick a Dominion Penitentiary was actually used for the imprisonment of offenders sentenced to a few months imprisonment, and he could not conceive it to be the duty of Ontario to commence the erection of such institutions to be so used. Still this building was undertaken; the contracts given out, and the present Government would accept the decision of the former House and endeavor to carry out its decision. The cost of the magnificence of these public institutions—he did not include the central prisons, but the benevolent institutions proper—was threatening to become, before long, a serious tax upon the country. These institutions, however, were necessary, and the unfortunate classes who can immediately be provided for. The charge on the public so impound must be considered as requiring a large portion of our revenues for the future. The cost of their maintenance in 1868 was $146,702; in 1870 it was $207,947; in 1871 it was $171,601. And we were obliged this year to take a vote—as we had one new institution—of $209,861. With regard to the Asylums for the deaf and dumb at Belleville, and that for the blind at Brantford, the Government had to consider whether any change should be made in the method of maintaining pupils. At present it was with Provincial Councils, which compelled pay for the sum of maintenance of indigent children so afflicted. We had the painful fact before us that a very considerable number of young people who were afflicted were not able to obtain admission to these institutions, because the counties did not choose to make the necessary provision for them. It was the bounden duty of the country, under these circumstances, to see that these children were not left unprovided for. Municipal Loan Fund.

The Globe of the second inst., says, the accounts due the Municipal Loan Fund by Brockville and Elizabethtown, for interest will soon be greater than the amount of the money borrowed, and every property-holder in town and township is liable for a proportionate share of the tax, should the government determine to enforce payment:—

Brock rifle borrowed in 1854 $97,292, on which it kept up the payments till July 1864, when the loan was increased to $400,000, all advanced to the Brockville and Ottawa Railway and secured by first mortgage. From that time the payments fell rapidly into arrear. There is no other security but the mortgage, and the mortgagees have not fulfilled their engagements and these interested have not even made claims. The total amount due now is $600,626. The same amount has been $87,594, and Assassination of the Governor General in India.

We may safely say that it is with the most profound regret, perhaps not unmixed with shame, that Canadians have heard of the death of the Governor General of India, at the hands of a wretched fanatical assassin. The particulars already received are but meagre; we only know that on Thursday last, the 8th instant, the distinguished the at last unfortunate nobleman, being on one of the Andaman Islands in the Bay of Bengal, whither convicts are sent, was stabbed by one of the convicts, a Mahometan, and soon afterwards expired. The first reflection with a good many of us will be—how came so valuable a life to be placed for a moment within reach of such a danger! His lordship was probably on a tour of inspection, but it is unfortunate that the particular duty, whatever it was, upon which he was engaged, had not been performed by Deputy, for most probably any deputy would have been comparatively safe, where the Governor-General ran a fatal risk. But speculation as to what might have been done, or what should have been done, is of little use now.

The Right Hon. Richard Southwark Bourke, Earl of Mayo, who before and ever since he succeeded to the higher title was better known as Lord Naas, was the eldest son of the fifth Earl of Mayo. He was born in Dublin, Feb'y 22nd, 1822, and was educated at Trinity College. He was chief Secretary for Ireland in Lord Derby's first administration in 1852, and on that occasion was made a Privy Councillor; held the same office in Lord Derby's second administration in 1866; and again, with a seat in the Cabinet, in Lord Derby's third administration in 1866. He was returned to the House of Commons as one of the members, in the Conservative interest, for the County of Kildare, in August 1847; was member for Coleraine from March 1852 till March 1857, when he was returned one of the members for Cockermouth, in England. He succeeded to his father as Earl of Mayo in August, 1867, and in 1868 was appointed Governor-General of India. He leaves a widow with four sons and two daughters.

The

A Strange Case.

Some time in October, or within three or four days after the Chicago fire was extinguished, says the Detroit Free Press, a respectable-dressed lady, having a child in her arms about a year old and two others by her side, called at the Protestant Orphan Asylum on Jefferson avenue. The hour was seven o'clock in the evening and the lady stated that she must do her errand as soon as possible. She desired to secure admittance for three children, and asked what formality must be gone through with. She was told that she would have to get an order from Mrs. Allen, the first directress. As this would consume at least an hours time, and as the mother was anxious to leave the city on the evening train, she stated that she would get the order if possible, but if she could not get it before the train left, asked that the children might be cared for three or four days or a week, when she would return and either take them away or secure their permanent admission. The conversation between the matron and the old lady did not last over four or five minutes. The lady did not give her name nor the names of her children, did not state where she came from, who had sent her there, nor give any facts which can now be recalled for the benfit of the children. She went away taking the baby, a year old with her and has not been heard of since, a period of about four months. She did not go to Mrs. Allen, applied to no one else, and probably left the city that evening. When the week was up the question what to do with the children came up, and was settled by keeping them in the institution.

Our reporter visited the Asylum on Saturday for the purpose of questioning the children, hoping to establish some clue to their identity. The assistant matron stated that the children were respectably dressed when they came, and their looks and actions show that they came from a respectable and intelligent family. They seemed lost for a month or two, refusing to play with the other children, and all asked after their mother as if much attached to her. The oldest is about six, a girl named Alice. She is very intelligent, although she never remembers going to school or being taught at home. She was questioned for nearly an hour in hopes to find out the position of her parents in society, the cause of the mother's conduct, where she used to live, and other matters, but she seems to have lost her memory just where it is most needed. She cannot remember the name of the town or city, but states that she never saw any policeman there, never saw ships or water, street cars or stone sidewalks. She does remember that a milkman used to bring them milk, and that they got their bread from a bakers waggon. She could not tell the name of their nearest neighbour, did not remember ever playing with any other children, and says that "the grocery where she used to buy candy was down near the end of the railroad track." She remembered seeing she "big cars very often, and is sure that her father worked in a shop where they made a big noise, and where she saw them making engines.

Alice remembered coming away from home. She states that they rode to the cars in a waggon, and that she saw a house on fire. This has led some to believe that her parents lived in Chicago. Talking about her father, she stated that he had kissed them all before the cars started, but he was not to see them any more, because he was going off to work. Alice stated in answer to enquires, that her father and mother never scolded each other; that she never saw her pa strike her ma; that they used to laugh with each other, "and father was good to ma and us." Asked where they were going to, and Alice replied that they were going to England to see her grandmother. She could not remember her grandmother's name, but stated that her father's name was "Jem-Pots," and her mothers name was Elizabeth. The baby was also named "Jem," which she pronounced as if it were an abbreviation of Jesse or Jasper. The boy, aged four and a half or five, is named George Albert, and the little girl aged about three is named Louisa. All the children have light hair, blue eyes, and fair complexion, and looks and language show them to be English or Canadian.

Various theories have been raised to account for the singular conduct of the mother, which is rendered all the more singular by the statement of Alice. It hardly seems possible that a father and mother would make up a plan to rid themselves of three such bright and handsome children in this way. And it is not the natural order of things that the mother, even if she were a divorced wife, would abandon the children without having entered into some explanations. Turn the case over as one will, and there is such strangeness and mystery about it as to call out ones full sympathies for the little ones. While it is believed that their home was in Canada, along the line of some railway, it may have been in this or some other State. In hopes to solve the mystery, the officers of the Asylum ask that this article may be copied into the daily and weekly papers in Canada and the Northern States. There is no other way in which the mystery can be cleared up except through the aid of the press, and is believed this aid will do it.

CONFEDERATION.

LIFE ASSOCIATION OF CANADA.

The very liberal features, and careful, efficient and energetic management of the above Association are very rapidly placing it in the foremostranks of the popular institution of the country. Its success hitherto has been most encouraging and it appears to be steadily gaining the confidence of the people.

We have been informed that at the meeting of the Board of Directors held here on Friday, Sir Francis Hicks (President of the Association) in the chair, Mr. Wm. McCabe, General Manager, submitted applications for Insurance amounting to $131,000. We are glad to learn that the success of this Association is so encouraging.

The chief guarantee of the Life Company is the responsibility of its directorate and the practical advantages in its system; in both these particulars the Confederation—a purely home company—can challenge the closest cruitiny. Both its General Board of Directors and each of its Provincial Boards are composed of gentlemen well known throughout the Dominion as most efficient and successful business men They believe that a society of a national character might be formed upon a plan that would not only afford each Province the general advantage of Life Insurance, but also the greater advantage of having it obsinees done at home, by its own citizens, and its money kept invested within its own limits. The favour with which the Confederation has been received throughout our whole country clearly establishes the correctness of their views. Each Province constitutes a Department, the business transacted within which is under the supervision of Resident Directors. Each Province thus possesses many of the essential attributes of an independent local company, and in addition has the strength and security of a national organization. Each Director must either be a stock holder or a Policy-holder. This pecuniary personal interest causes its directors to exercise a close and scrutinising supervision over the affairs of the Association which cannot fail to be of the utmost benefit and advantage.

The history of Life Insurance has clearly demonstrated the important fact that no companies are so economically and judiciously managed as those in which the control is vested jointly in the stock and policy holders —the two classes directly, interested in the success of this Company. The system of assurance of the Confederation is derived from the most approved and thoroughly tested experience, and it is believed that few companies present a policy so broad and so secure, so liberal in its provisions, and so equitable in all its arrangements for the benfit of the assured.

This is the only Life Insurance Company in the Dominion which pleaces all the practical benefits and advantage, (through its industrial system) of Life insurance within the reach of the clerk, mechanic, and artizan; a priviledge which has hitherto been enjoyed chiefly by his richer brethern. Such excellent features as it possesses must secure the highest, as clearly evidenced by the large amount of business submitted at the above meeting. These facts must be very gratifying to the present policy holders, and will tend to promote still further the success of the Confederation Life Association.

Mr. Wm. Cameron is Agent in Peterboro for the above Company.

The Iowa City Republican reports the following case as now engaging the attention of the court there:—A Bohemian, living in Madison township, was arrested last Sunday to answer an indictment for a murder said to have been committed in this county some 15 years ago. The particulars, as we ascertained them, were to the effect that the prisoner married a widow, with four children, two of whom were little girls, aged respectively seven and nine years. These little girls were sent out on an errand for their step-father, and returned without accomplishing their mission, which so enraged him that he took a club, and with it beat the youngest girl until life was extinct. He threatened the mother and other children with a like dreadful fate if they revealed to the public the fearful crime which he had committed; and thus by threats and intimidation succeded in suppressing for 15 long years, the particulars of this horrible tragedy. It was not until the little girl who accompanied her sister on that ill-fated mission, had grown to womanhood, and felt safe under the protecting arm of a man who had made a solemn vow to cherish and protect her through life, that she appeared before the Grand Jury to make oath to the terrible scene she witnessed when but a child.

Yesterday was St. Valentine's day; a two-bushel basket would have held all the Valentines that passed through the Peterboro P. O.

The Manitoba Liberal states that the Bishop of Rupert's Land has been successful in raising upwards of $5,000 in London, in behalf of St. John's College.

The total number of paupers in London England, last week was 122,647, of whom 36,412 were in workhouses and 87,235 were in receipt of outdoor relief. These figures show a decrease of 37,729, 31,913, and 23,659 respectively, as compared with the corresponding weeks of 1871, 1870, 1869. The total number of vagrants relieved was 787, of whom 631 were men, 134 women, and 22 children under sixteen.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.—In regard to the case presented by the United States to the Arbitrators at Geneva, the London Times thus indicates the British complaint:—"As it was, it seems to have been assumed too readily that a common understanding existed on these points between the contacting Powers, and that no serious conflict would arise, except on the application of the new rules to a given body of facts. Unhappily this assumption, if it was made, has been signally falsified. Those who drew up the cases on behalf of Great Britain and the United States respectively, have evidently been, so to speak, at cross purposes with each other, and the first duty of the Arbitrators will be to limit the issues to be tried."

TUNNEL UNDER THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.—The great enterprise of a tunnel from near Dover to a point near Calais is about to be attempted by a corporation called the Channel Tunnel Company. The capital of the Company is $90,000, which is privatly subscribed, with the immediate object of making a trial shaft and driving a driftway on the English side.

Farmers ought never to cultivate more land than they can keep free from obnoxious weeds. It takes as much manure to grow a crop of black and other weeds as it does a crop of corn or potatoes. Put weeds into the pig-pen and the swine will thrive on them; by that means in a few years your land will be free from these pests, and you will save fifty per cent yearly in manure. In fattening swine, sheep and beeves cook all your food and season it with a little salt, and you will accomplish the desired fatness with one third less material in the raw state; and be sure never to slaughter an animal in a diseased or unthrifty condition.

A New Orleans special says:—Cap. Scott who tested before the Congressional investigation committee that he had bribed almost every prominent member of the Republicans in the Legislature, has challenged State Senator Campbell. This has been accepted, and shot-guns chosen as weapons. The seconds are now busy arranging preliminaries. It is rumoured that Lucien Adams, a prominent Democrat, has challenged Scott, and that they are to fight with swords, Supt. Badger, of the Metropolitan police, has challenged ex-Speaker Carter on an account of an article reflecting on him in the latter's paper.

A Murderer on Oratory.

While still a very young man, on account of his uncommon abilities and legal acquirements, Richard Coleman was made judge of one of the eastern circuits of Virginia in the year 18—. Having hitherto led the life of a student and scholar he had no extended reputation except among his brethern, and had never been in politics. Shortly after he went upon the bench a most cold-blooded and cruel murder was prepetrated in his district by a very notoriously bad man. The murderer was apprehended, tried and convicted of murder in the first degree. Judge Coleman proceeded to pronounce the sentence, the first he had ever to do, which he had prepared with great care, and he himself said, the best of which he was capable, and which he had afterward in similar sentences been obliged to make up the basis of them all. Such was the solemnity of the occasion and the fervid eloquence of the judge, that all who listened to the sentence passed were moved to tears —all except the prisoner at the bar, who was observed to be looking at the ceiling, and to pay no attention whatever appearing wholly indifferent to what was going on. After he had been remanded to jail one of the junior members of the bar having his courisity excited, and Judge Coleman also wishing to know what effect his eloquence had upon the criminal, went into the cell where the prisoner was and inquired of him how he felt when Judge Coleman was passing sentence upon him. "What" said the criminal, "what do you mean?" I mean when the judge was telling you, you were to be hung and urging you to prepare for that awful doom that awaited you. "You mean when he was talking to me?" "Yes." "Oh! I never paid no 'tention to Dick Coleman; he ain't no public speaker nohow."

The Kincardine Reporter, after trying for some years the experiment of issuing a dollar paper, is about to raise the price to a dollar and a half. It declares that dollar papers do not pay, and this is the experience of all who have tried them.

Pierre Marentette, an aged gentleman and an old settler in Sandwich, while performing some office at the altar of the R. C. church in that town on Thursday, at a funeral service being held at the time, fell from a platform to the brick floor, some ten feet, and died within an hour from the effect of the injuries received.

One day last week Mrs. Thomas Hannah, of the 4th line of Garafraxa, went over to visit a neighbor, and carried her child, about three months old, in her arms, wrapped up in a shawl so as to be kept warm. Upon unwrapping the shawl she was horrified to find that the infant was smothered to death.

A man who has been living very comfortably with his wife, for some years, in the township of Southwold, lately became enamored of a young and single lady, the daughter of a neighbor, with whom he has eloped. At last accounts he was in the vicinity of Tilsonburg making arrangements to purchase a farm whereon it was supposed he and his unlawful partner were to take up their abode.

NEGOTIATIONS IN REFERENCE TO WASHINGTON TREATY.—The Times Washington special telegraphs that the friendly communication to Government of the United States regarding the interruption of the treaty of Washington, alluded to in the Queen's speech, consists, so far as this Government is yet advised, of the note from Earl Granville to General Schenck, the substance of which the latter communicates by telegraph. The note is not in the nature of a demand nor even a request that there should be any withdrawl of the claim for indirect damages. It alludes to excitment among public men and the press on the subject and ascribes it to the different interpretation put upon the treaty by the United States from that which it received at the hands of the English Government. This simply gives this Government an opportunity, if it desires, of making an explanation or even of withdrawing that part of the cage which is the subject of misenterpretation, but there is no demand on the part of the English Government that such action shall be taken.

No reply has yet been made. The subject was informally talked overin the cabinet meeting, and the expression of the members of the Cabinet was quite unanimous that the reference of all the claims and questions to the Geneva tribunal and absolute, and that to that body must be left the question of rejecting or allowing claims, known as direct losses. When reply is made there will be a position taken. The President is very firm on this point, and he is unanimously supported by his Cabinet and by all the Republican strength in Congress, including Sumner and General Banks.

The opinion is not entertained here that the British Government will insist on such a thing as the withdrawl on this part of the case of the United States. The feeling is quiet and firm, and there is probably less excitement here over the matter than anywhere else.

We observe that in the Upper Canadian Assembly, on Monday night, a number of gentlemen gave in their adhesions to the Blake Government, at all events to the extent of promising to judge fairly on its merits. This ought to indicate the folly of the merely personal attacks, which have for some time filled the columns of the ex-Ministerial press. They have fallen perfectly flat and useless, except to indicate the unscrupulous nature of their authors. By the by we notice the same kind of attack in now being made by Col. Bergin apparently for the sole office of having been nominated as the opponent of Mr. John Sandfield McDonald at the next election for Cornwall. This gentleman, in one article, is called "a spiteful little Militia bessemer; tipsy little Colonel; scurvy little hedge hog Colonel; the vermint," and so on. We can hardly suppose that the choice names can have any effect with the electors, and if they even carried an election, they would not be less disgraceful to those who made use of them for the purpose.—Montreal Herald.

One hundred and nine years ago last Friday, Canada was ceded to Great Britain. From 1763 to 1872 what a history embraced. What a wonderful story has been told?

It is stated that Hon. Joseph Couchon President of the North Shore Railway, has left Quebec for the purpose of completing arrangements with American capitalists for the construction of the road

FIRE.—About three o'clock on Sunday morning last, the inmates of a house on the Ashford farm, a short distance from Town, were aroused, by a crackling noise as of something burning, and to their consternation found the stable and contents enveloped in flames and nearly consumed. The flames soon communicated with the house, and it was with difficulty that the family escaped with their lives. The morning being extremely cold, and having no clothing, the woman had both feet frozen. The parties are emigrants lately arrived, and had recently expended about six hundred dollars in purchasing an outfit. All was destroyed. The origin of the fire is unknown.—Port Hope Guide.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12. A special to the Herald, from London says: The English Government is earnestly anxious to avoid a misunderstanding with the authorities at Washington, not to render the treaty a nullity, and not to yield a point which the public mind regards as involving the national honor. The possibility of a compromise is contemplated and even hoped for at an early day, when the excitement is less than at present, and when the spirit of mutual conciliation will reconcile points that in the present time of violent discussion appear irreconcilable. The point of least resistance in the English position is the phrase "indirect losses." The English people are not tenacious as to that phrase, and might not object to continue the arbitration with that phrase, retained in the treaty, if it were guaranteed that the award under that head in any case would not exceed certain figures, they would thus yield the principle of indirect losses and meet the views of the American people and the requirements of the American interpretation of the treaty, and in exchange they would get certain known limits, and thus deprive the claims of the alarming character which their indefinite nature now presents to practical minds. Should this idea reach the stage of negotiation it may result in an arrangement to continue three arbitrations proceeding satisfactorily at Berlin, Washington and Canada, as if there were no difference, and to continue the Geneva arbitration with an understanding as to the amount that will satisfy both sides under the head of indirect losses. This understanding might be put into the form of an additional rule or of a supplementary secret article.

Gen. Schenck has communicated a note to the English Government on the recent language of Mr. Gladstone, which is deemed an imputation on the Government of the United States. The note is regarded as a proper assertion of the dignity of his Government, and probably it will be answered in a most friendly spirit, deprecating any diplomatic application to words used in the heat of debate.

Bismark has offered to the Government of Washington and London his offices for the purpose of effecting an agreement in relation to the Alabama Claims in the Geneva arbitration.

IMPORTATION OF SPIRITS.—A friend of the temperance cause asks us to publish the fact that, while in 1870 the importation of spirits into Lindsay was about 72,000 gallons, in 1871 it was only about 62,000 gallons, This is a gratifying reduction, considering that the population of the town is so largely increased.

THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certian fixed proporations of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combinations. Thus in the preparation of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alchol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as sad alike. It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to bush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have been converted so early.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Tretter who Doctor Equills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what's more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

PATON, MOIR & Co

January 10th, 1871. 2-4in

BY-LAW NO.

A By-law to Encourage Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., to increase their manufacturing Establishment for the manufactory of Woolen Goods, and for the maintaining of the same by the grant of a bonus, as herein set forth, and for the purpose of raising money to meet such bonus.

Whereas Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., are possessed of a Woolen Mill, situate upon the Otonabee River, of the capacity known as a Three Set Mill.

And whereas it would be greatly to the benefit and advantage of the Town of Peterborough that the said firm of Paton, Moir & Co., should be encouraged to increase the capacity of the said Mill, by the granting to them of a bonus for the said purpose, and for the purpose of maintaining the same when so increased.

And whereas if the said Mill were increased to that extent which would render it what is known as a Ten Set Mill or three times and one-third its present capacity, some two hundred hands would have to be employed in running or working the same, and some sixty thousand dollars would have to be expended in payment of wages and running expenses, annually, all of which would directly tend to add to the properity of the said Town of Peterborough.

And whereas it is desirable to extend the limits of the said Town of Peterborough, so as embrace in addition to other territory the said Auburn Mills, and it is desirable also with a like object to exempt the proposed extension of the said Auburn Mills from taxation for the period of Ten Years from and after the completion of such extension.

And whereas by an Act of Parliament of the late Province of Canada, passed in the Twenty-fourth year of Her Majesty's reign, Entituled, "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough, and to authorize the issue of debentures on the security of Town Property and for other purposes" it was enacted that for the purposes and in the manner therein particularly mentioned and set out, and to the amount therein mentioned, it should be lawful for the Commissioners therein named to issue debentures under the seal of the said corporation, to be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Treasurer and the Secretary of the said Commissioners and that the Council of the said Town of Peterborough should annually, upon the application of the said Commissioners, raise upon the rateable property of the Town, the interest and sinking fund requisite for the redemption of the said debentures.

And whereas the Council of the said Town of Peterborough have determined to grant a bonus of Ten Thousand Dollars to the said Paton, Moir & Co., to induce and assist them in increasing their said mill as aforesaid, to a Ten Set Mill, or to three times and one-third its present capacity, to be paid to them as hereinafter mentioned.

It is therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the Town of Peterborough, as follows:

1. That this By-law and the several provisions thereof shall come into force, and be operative and binding upon the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough from and immediately after the final passing by the said Council, if an Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario shall have been then passed, authorising the same, and a Proclamation of the Lieutenant Governor adding to the limits as aforesaid, of the said Town, shall have issued, and not before,

2 If such an Act of the said Parliament shall not have been passed, and such proclamation shall not have been issued as aforesaid, at the time of the final passing of this By-law as aforesaid, then this By-law and the several provisions thereis shall come in force, and be operative, and binding upon the said corporation of the Town of Peterborough, from and immediately after the passing of an Act of the said Parliament, legalising the same, if an Act authorising the same shall not have been passed, and the issue of such Proclamation, adding to the limits of the said Town as aforesaid, whichever shall happen last.

Choice Poetry.

SUE SAUNDERS.

Sue Saunders was a country lass,
With eyes as brown as bees,
And cheeks that held the peachy bloom
Of eighteen summers' rose.

She never owned a silken dress,
Nor dreamed of Brussels lace,
Yet wore her tidy home-spun gown,
With such bewitching grace.

That scarce the merchant's gayest goods
Had made her seem more fair,—
No princess with a sweeter grace
A royal robe could wear.

One day there came a city man,
With wealth and honors rife,
And asked sweet Susy Saunders soon,
If she would be his wife.

Now Sue a country laddie loved,
With scarce a dime to show;
But Susy loved him none the less,
And so she answered "No!"

The rich man left his bearded lip,
And beat his haughty head;
But, hoping by his wealth to win,
He waited still and said:

"Your country lad is rude and rough,
With brawny sun-browned hands,
And others with his clownish name,
Nor gold, nor goodly lands.

While wealth and fame, a stately house,
And sense of ancient pride,
Are mine to offer to the one
I ask to be my bride."

Then redly blushed her rounded cheek,
And like a queen she said:
"To plough and sow, and reap the field,
And earn one's daily bread,

I think it nobler than to sit
Content life's cares to shirk,
And ne'er a jeweled finger lift
To any other work.

To me my Willy's toil-worn hands,
Bronzed by the summer sun,
Are dearer far than if they had
No dash of labor won.

And pray, good sir, have you not learned
Love is not bought or sold?
Where'er I wed, I'll wed a Man,
And not his hands or gold."

With sullen brow the suitor grand,
Rode fiercely back to town,
And one May morn Sue wedded Will,
Clad in her home-spun gown.

An exchange says it looks as though a man was ashamed to publicly show himself in company with a lady when he hangs about the church doors on Sunday evenings, waiting and watching for her to make her appearance, so that he may sneak up to her in the dark and offer his escort.

These ministers are now and then dreadful inconsistent. We heard one them preaching against marrying for money the other day, and that very evening he married Bob Smith, and never said a word against taking twenty-five dollars for the job.

At the late Plymouth Church gathering, Mr. Beecher was asked why he did not dance. "There is only one reason," he replied—"I don't know how. The only dancing I ever did was when my father furnished the music and used me for a fiddle. I took all the steps then."

A demure-looking chap hailed a charcoal pedler with the querry, "Have you charcoal in your waggon?" "Yes sir," said the spectant driver, stopping his horses. "That's right," observed the demure chap, with an approving nod; "always tell the truth and people will respect you!" And he hurried on, much to the regret of the pedler, who was getting out of the waggon to look for a brick.

GOT TIRED OF IT.—"Mister how do you sell sugar to-day?"

"Only twenty cents a pound, sir."

"Can't give it. I'll drink my coffee without sugar, and kiss my wife for sweetning. Good day, sir."

"Good day. When you get tired of that kind of sweetening please call round again."

"I will."

He called next day.

In a suit brought against a life insurance company in St. Louis to recover $10,000 insurance, which was tried last week one of the grounds of defence was that the insured had been addicted to drunkenness, while he had stated to the company's examiner that he was sober and temperate in his habits, and had always been so. The question of what constitutes a drunkard having thus been raised, Mr. Francis Garvey, an attorney was put on the stand to enlighten the court and jury as to this point. Mr. Garvey tested that a man who drinks after dinner or at night is not a drunkard, A drunkard, said Mr. Garvey, is a man who gets drunk or drinks whenever he can get at liquor.—If a man gets drunk in the daytime he is a man of no character; but if he drinks in his own house all night there can be no objection to it. As a legal defination of what is St. Louis is considered to mark the distinction between temperance and drunkenness, Mr. Garvey's opinion is of interest.

A good thing happened not long since which is strickly private and must not be mentioned to anybody as it was told us in confidence. A worthy citizen who sometimes makes mistakes with his surprises was too busy to go home to dinner, and sent his office boy for a lunch. The boy returned with a very nice lunch, one of the articles being an ample selection of mince pie. Our friend thought this would be nice if warmed, and told Mike to take it to the stove and heat it. Mike overjoyed, did as he was bid, and in about half a minute that pie dissolved, left not a crust behind.—"Now bring the pie," phoned our friend, a few minutes later "The pie is it?" answered Mike. "Yes the pie fetch it along "Shure, then I ate it" said Mike—"Wasen't it to eat it ye towld me?" "You young villian" shouted the irate master. I told you to 'ate it, not to eat it" "Well, thin eguerul," replied Mike. "I didn't heat it, for I ate it cowld, so I did" Mike has lost his situation, and he can't for the life of him guess why.

A singular suit has lately been tried in London. A gentleman appeared before the Lord Mayor on a summons taken out at the instance of the Metrophtan District Railway Company, charging him with unlawfully, leaving a carriage of the train at the Mansion House Station while in motion. The defendnant pleaded not guilty. On the 19th of December the defendant was seen to leave a car at the station before it had stoped, and by doing so he came in collision with an Inspector of the line, who was about to enter a train which was on the point of starting. The Inspector was nocked down, dragged for some yards along the platform by the train, and at length only saved by clinging to the buffer. Next morning the defendent met the Inspector, asked how he was and apologized for the accident, stating that he was running at the time to meet a friend. A porter who saw the affair stated that many other persons left the train before the defendant did, and that the collision with the Inspector was an accident. The Lord Mayor fined the defendant the nominal sum of half a crown.

The following anecdote is given as authentic: Soon after Horace Greely had made his mark on the register of a hotel in a certain place visited by him during his fall lecture tour, a rather aged countryman came into the office, and after examining the register asked if Dr. B——was in. "There is no such person here," said the gentlemanly clerk. "No such person here?" echoed the venerable rustic, taking off hisspectacles and gazing into the face of the clerk with much incredulity and astonishment. "No such person here," firmly re-echoed the clerk. "Young man," exclaimed the other with a solemn expression of countenance, "Young man, don't lie to me. It won't do. You can't fool old Gill Parks. Dr B——'s been here as sure as guns, and pretty drunk too, I reckon—for he's left one them ar Latin prescriptions of his on the register?" And the doctor's friend gazed down at Horace's improved Arabic with a look of triumphant recognition.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The composition that we embody in this extract has long been known to the public as a remedy of extraordinary virtues. Its wonderful cures of the following class of complaints, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination more or less universally diffused through the blood, have made it known to almost every section of the country, and the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or name.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this venom and wasting taint of the organism undermines the constitution, and in vain the assault of pulmonary or kindred disorders, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, as some favorable occasion, rapidly develops into one or other of its hideous forms, on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the commonness of a terrible list of distressing maladies, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other symptoms or visible forms of scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Pile, Kidney, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing those obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammations of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears; or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Choice Poetry.

A Welcome Back to John Bright.

We are glad to see you back, John,
Good men are not so rife,
But the Comm'ners feel the lack, John,
Of a leader in the strife—
A leader big of brain, John,
And strong and straight of stroke,
Whose breath's not spent in vain, John,
Whose bullet is no joke.

Sore, sore, we feel the need, John,
Of pioneers like you,
Who onward while they speed, John,
Secure the ground goes through;
Whose eyes have got a cast, John,
That front and back takes in—
And by the distance passed, John,
Can gauge the height to win.

Who though to progress vowed, John,
Yet Precedent can weigh;
As bad as clique think crowd, John,
Not haste as dull delay,
Who the Odgers and the Dilkes, John,
Can measure to a hair;
Can trounce the knave that milks, John,
The fool that's milked can spare.

Whose tongue will never stick, John,
Mum-begs, bum-bags to call;
Whose hand can wind-bags prick, John,
Until small men sing small;
Now the press that should cut short, John,
To folly gives full flow,
Till in its loss report, John,
Our dwarfs as giants show.

We want you, John, we want you
To lesson each young fool,
Who flourishes, to daunt you,
His red-cap raw from school.
We want you, John, to teach lads
The worth of what they've got,
And with your rod to reach lads
Whose lessons learn will not.

We want you, John, to beacon
The ship from shoal and rest,
Whose risks wise pilots reckon,
Fools scorn and come to grief.
In short, we want your aid, John,
In steerage more than steam—
And the longer you have stayed, John,
The welcomer you seem!

—Punch.

Selections.

The Model Wife.

The following is a confidential letter sent by the better half of a dissipated lawyer in a large city to her affectionate aunt in the country:

MY DEAR AUNT,—Although you told me when I invited you to my wedding, that I was too young to marry, and not capable of choosing a mate properly and with due consideration, I know that you may now feel that I was much wiser than you thought. In selecting dear Orlando I have gained a most affectionate husband, and one who has neither a fault nor a vice.—Heavens! What must a girl suffer who finds herself united to a dissipated person, neglecting her, and disposed to seek the society of unworthy persons, who drink, smoke and do all sorts of dreadful things!

Thank Heaven, Orlando is perfection.

To-day is my eighteenth birthday, and we have been married a year. We keep house now, and I can make a pretty good pie, only the under crust will be damp. However, I think it must be the oven. Once I put peppermint in the pudding sauce instead of lemon flavoring, but then Orlando was trying to kiss me right before the girl, who didn't much like either of us going into the kitchen at all.

The flowers are coming up beautifully in the back garden. We sowed a great many seeds, but hardly expected so many plants. Among the most numerous is one variety with a large leaf, that scratches one's fingers, and don't smell nice. I wonder what it is Orlando frightens me by talking about weeds; but seeds always come up, don't they?

Dear Orlando! I come back to him again so excellent, temperate and clear. Tell the girls to marry as soon as they can, if they can find a husband like mine.

I have but one trial—business takes him so much away from me. A lawyer must attend to business you know and sometimes they carry on the business until two at night. Often and often he has examined witnesses until past twelve and come home perfectly exhausted. And the nasty things will smoke, so that his coat quite smells of it.—And as it makes him as ill as it does me, I have to air it, and sprinkle cologne on the lining before he dare put it on again.

I had a terrible fright the other night—dreadful. Orlando told me that business—I think he said it was a case of life and death—would detain him late. So I sat up as I usually did with a book, and did not worry until about one o'clock. After that I was a little anxious, I confess, and caught a cold in my head peeping through the upstair blinds; for, dear aunt, it was not until three o'clock that I heard a cab driving up the street, and saw it stop at our door, then I thought I should faint, for I was sure some dreadful accident had happened to Orlando.

I ran down to open the door, and Mr. Smith, a friend of Orlando's who is not, I confess, very much to my taste—such a redfaced, noisy man, was supporting my dear boy up the steps.

"Oh, what has happened?" cried I.

'Don't be frightened, Mrs. White!' said Mr. Smith. "Nothing at all; only White is a little exhausted. Application to business will exhaust a man and I thought I'd bring him home."

"All right, Belle," said Orlando. 'Smith tells the truth—I'm exhausted.

And, dearest aunt, he was so much so that he spoke thick, and couldn't stand without tottering. Mr. Smith was kind enough to help him up stairs and laid him upon the bed. so prostrated that I thought he was going to die. Then I remembered the French brandy you gave me in case of sickness. I ran to get it out.

"Have a little brandy and water, dear?" I said.

"The very thing. Smith is exhausted, too. Give some to Smith," he said.

And so I reproached myself for not having thought of it before Mr. Smith was gone.—But I gave a glass to Orlando, and under Providence I think it saved his life; for, oh, how bad he was.

"Belle," said he quite faltering in his speech, "the room is going around so fast that I can't catch your eye.—And besides there are two of you and I don't know which is which.'

I knew these were dreadful symptoms.

"Take a drink, dear," said I, "and I'll try to wake Mary and send for the doctor!"

"No," said he, "I'll be all right in the morning. I'm all right now. Here's your health. You're a brick. I—" And fell over asleep.

Oh, why do men like to think so much of money making. Is health better than anything else?

Of course as he laid down his hat, I took that off first. And I managed to divest him of his coat. But when I came to his boots—dearest aunt, did you ever take off a gentleman's boots? Probably not, as you are a single lady—what a task! How do they get them off? I pulled and pulled, and shook and wriggled, and gave it up. But it would not do to leave them on all night; so I went at it again, and at last one came off so suddenly; and over I went on the floor, and into his hat which I had put down for a minute. I could have cried.—And the other come off the same way, just as hard and just as sudden as last. Then I put a soft blanket over Orlando and sat in my sewing chair all night. Oh, how heavily he breathed. And I had, as you may fancy, the most dreadful fears. He might of killed himself by his over application to business for all he knew. The perfect one goes first, it is said. Oh, how differently should I have felt had any thing happened to my dear Orlando. He has not had so exhausting a day since, and I think he sees the folly of over-work; though if courts will keep open so late, what can poor lawyers do? I think it is very inconsiderate to the Judge. I wonder if he has a wife—the mean old thing.

A Greenland Parliament.

In the middle of the one room, or hall, stood a plain pine table, with a plain bench on either side of it, and on each bench sat six paliamentarians, dressed in seal-skin pantaloons and boots and Guernsey frocks, across which there was a very large display of suspenders. Each parliamentarian head was covered with a cap composed of the brightest kind of scarlet cloth, ornamented with a broad gilt band. The royal emblems were embroidered in front, and above these there was a golden bear, with a golden crown on his head, standing uncomfortably on his hind legs to typify Greenland. There was a thirteenth cap at the head of the table, and this was worn by Mr. Anthon, pastor of Julianshaab and president of the Julianshaab parliament ex officio.

The first business was in form of a petition for relief. The petitioner stood there in person, looking the very picture of forlorn destitution. He stated that he had lost his canoe (kayak), and he produced evidence enough to show, without any swearing, false or otherwise, that it had been crushed or lost in the ice. The man, who had hardly clothes enough on his back to hide his nakedness, showed further that he had a wife and family who had no friends to assist them, and were entirely dependent upon himself for support. I thought it had a doubtful support at best, and so appeared to think the parliament, for they voted an order for a certain daily allowoance. The next case was of a young hunter, whose kayak had been crushed by the ice, and who had not the means to build a new one. They voted him a loan. A third case was an old man, who received one dollar to buy a spear with; another was partly a loan and partly a gift to a man who had a family of girls, and required materials for an oomiak. Still another made application to bury a dead husband.—Harpers Magazine.

The Dog Who Rang For His Supper.

In France there was once a little dog whose name was Fido. He belonged to a poor woman who did not always have food enough to give him.

Fido must have thought it over to himself in this way: "My mistress loves me; but she is so poor, that often she does not have food for her own dinner. How, then, can she afford to give me mine? I am a strong dog, and wise dog too; and I must get my dinner without troubling my good mistress."

Not far from the place where he lived, there was a convent, which was a home for some good nuns; and one day, as Fido sat near in the sun, he saw a beggar go and ring the bell of the convent door, and soon a woman came, and brought a bowl of soup and meat, and gave it to the beggar.

Fido trotted up and looked in the beggar's face, as much as to say, Could not you spare one of those bones?' But the beggar did not see things in the light that Fido did. "Go away sir!" said the beggar; so Fido trotted back to his place in the sun, and lay down.

But he was very hungary. He had not had anything to eat for twelve hours. The beggar over the way, as soon as he had eaten his food, put the bowl in a hole over the door, and then walked off.

"Those must be good women to give food to beggars," thought Fido. "I wonder if they wouldn't give me a bowl of soup. There's nothing like trying."

So Fido trotted across the street, and putting up his paw, rang the bell. 'Ding dong, ding!' 'What a noise he made!'

"There's another beggar after food!" thought the good nun, and she came with a plate of boiled meat, and looked around.

"There's nobody here, after all!" said the woman, shutting the door.

"She calls me nobody," thought poor Fido. "I must try again." So he jumped up, and rang the bell once more. "Ding, dong, ding, dong!" It made a much louder noise than before.

But nobody came. The woman stood watching at the back window to see who was ringing the bell. Fido waited a while; and then jumped up again, and gave the bell a good pull.

Then the woman came out and laughed to find that a dog had been ringing the bell. "What do you want sir?" asked she. "Bow, wow, wow!" said Fido. "I know what that means said the woman; "you want some dinner."

So she gave the the dog some dinner, and every day after that he would come at a certain hour, and ring the bell, and the woman would feed him and one day she put some food in a basket, and said, "Now, sir, take that home to your mistress."

And the dog took it home safely; and his mistress had a good dinner that day as well as Fido himself. Fellin would come from a distance to see him ring the bell for his dinner. I would like to end on a high note, so as Fido would; only not—there is no dinner.

The Relations of Forests to Rain-fall.

Professor Henry, of the Smithsonian Institute, is represented as questioning the alleged effect of the clearing of forests in diminishing the amount of rainfall. If he is rightly reported, he is of opinion that there is not sufficient evidence to establish the fact as claimed. No doubt it is difficult to make a demonstrative proof, for a demonstration would require a series of exact observations upon the same tract of country under the successive conditions of the presence and absence of forests. We are, as yet, without such exact observations. Yet many scientific men have, after much investigation announced the effect of forests upon rain supply as very perceptible. Mr. Marsh in his valuable volume on Man and Nature, quotes Sir John Herschel as expressing the opinion that "the absence of vegetation in warm climates, and especially of trees, is unfavorable to rain. This is no doubt (he states) one of the reasons of the extreme aridity of Spain. The hatred of a Spaniard toward a tree is proverbial. Many districts in France have been materially injured by denudation, and, on the other hand, rain has become more frequent in Egypt since the more vigorous cultivation of the palm tree." M. Blanqui, as cited by Dr. Marsh, gives the fact "that at Malta, rain has become so rare since the woods were cleared to make room for the growth of cotton, that at the time of his visit, in October 1861, not a drop had fallen for three years." While giving full faith these and other statements of eminent scientists, Mr. Marsh concludes that though "the arguments of the advoctes of this doctrine are plausible, not to say convincing, their opinions are rather a priori conclusions from general metrological laws than facts of observation, and it is remarkable that there is so little direct evidence upon the subject." It is to be hoped that the necessary evidence may be gathered.

The effect of the clearing away of forests in drying up springs, and rendering the temperature of a country more unequal, is indubitable. The entire question is one of great importance to the central region of our continent. We have seen the statement that the prairie States east of the Mississippi have, since the establishment of civilization, increased their area of forest. The effect of this increase, if any, on the amount of rain-fall, is not made known.

There are, however, vast tracts of prairie in Illinois still bare of trees, and subject at times to terrible droughts. One sees in the State painful attempts to obtain enough tree-shelter for the protection of farm-houses. The trees stand as closely together as the stakes of a palisade; in much-exposed places, it is with difficulty that they are kept alive. In the trans-Mississippi region, the need of tree culture is, for many reasons, most urgent; it would seem to be a proper subject of legislation. With such magnificent opportunities for the experiment as we have, it will be easily possible for us to ascertain with accuracy the relation between forest growth and rain-fall. On the plains of the west, trees must be cultivated for shelter and wood supply; we may, therefore, if we will, settle all the scientific questions that relate to forests.

ABOUT ADVERTISING.—You can't eat enough in a week to do you a year and you can't advertise on that plan either. People that advertise only once in three months forget that folks cannot remember anything longer than about seven days. No bell can ring so loudly as a good advertisment. People will believe what they see rather than what they hear. Quitting advertisments in dull times is like tearing out a dam because the water is low. Either plan will prevent good times from ever coming. An Indian once tried the softness of feathers by laying one on a rock and stretching himself on it. There are some who try the virtue of advertising on the same plan. It's as true of advertising as of anything else in life, that if it is worth doing at all it is worth doing well. Bread is the staff of human life, and advertising is the life of trade. A simple "card" may profitable stand years without changing; but a sensation advertisment should be changed as often as you can get the printer to do it. We don't reccomend advertising as the best way to get a good wife; but we can recommend it as the best way to get a good trade. Small advertisments are worth more in proportion than large. If all people were deaf, loud advertisments might be expected to win. A heavy advertisment once is more than quadrupled in value by a small card published for a few months after giving your address. Beware of prosy advertisments. If you want people to read them have them "short and sweet." Judicious advertising always pays. Large type is not necessary to an advertisment. Blind folks don't read newspapers. Never run down your opponents goods in public. Let him pay for his advertising.

PRESERVING FARM TOOLS.—Every farmer should have a can of linseed oil and a brush on hand, and whenever he buys a new tool he should soak it well with the oil, and dry it before the fire or in the sun before using. The wood by this treatment is toughened and strengthened, and rendered impervious to water. Wet a new hay-rake, and when it dries it will begin to be loose in the joints; but if well oiled, the wet will have but slight effect. Shovels and forks are preserved from checking and cracking in the top of the handle by oiling; the wood becomes as smooth as glass by use, and it is far less liable to blister the hands where long used. Axe and hammer handles often break off where the wood enters the iron; this part particularly should be toughened with oil to secure durability. Oiling the wood in the eye of the axe will prevent its swelling and shrinking, and sometimes getting loose. The tools on a large farm cost a large sum of money, they should be of the most approved kinds. It is poor economy at the present extravagant price of labour to not seek to work with ordinary old-fashioned implements. Labourers should be required to return the tools to the convenient places provided for them; after using they should be put away clean and bright. The mould-boards of ploughs are apt to get rusty from one season to another, even if sheltered; they should be brushed over with a mixture of oil and tar, or oil and lamp black, or some other composition of oil.

THE GREAT AUCTIONEER.—The most efficient auctioneer that ever lived, probably, was George Robins, of London, who flourished about thirty or forty years ago. His advertisments were marvelous peices of composition, which none of his successors in the same business have ever succeeded in imitating. He was a very "Admirable Crichton," a man of universal knowledge, never at a loss; and with a power of magnifying the good qualities of the wares he was selling, such as no autioneer, before or since his day, has ever possessed. It was a literary treat to see and hear him sell a library; but the place best fitted for the display of his ability was the sale of a fine country house. In 1820, the magnificent Fonthill Abbey, owned by the brilliant Beckford, came to the hammer. That it would be knocked down for a quarter of its real value, seemed inevitable: Robins was qual to the emergency. Taking advantage of the great fame of Beckford, and the rumour which described the house as surpassing the grandest palaces of the East in sumptuous elegance, he announced that no one would be admitted to visit the house who did not purchase a catalogue—price one guinea. The result fully vindicated his sagacity. The fashionable world felt bound to see these wonderful sights and rushed in crowds to buy catalogues. Eight thousand of them were sold, and people journeyed from all parts of the kingdom to feast their eyes on the marvelous Fonthill. In the height of the furore the sale began, and lasted thirty-three days. The Abbey was knocked down for £330,000—a third more than its worth. Pictures, furniture, &c., brought fabulous sums. Raphael's Saint Catherine sold for £5,250; and the contents of the house realised the enormous sum of £1,000,000. Once Robins had to sel among the effects of a deceased merchant, silver ware amounting to over six hundred ounces. Duplicates of the pieces had been made in Sheffield ware for daily use, and by some accident, the real silver ones, the first day of the sale, was knocked down as plated. The next day, the Sheffield ware being put up its real character was at once discovered. The purchasers of the silver had disappeared, and Robins promptly paid the loss out of his own pocket.

RAIL INTO CENTRAL AFRICA.—While people are talking of a railway to India direct, to accomplish the passage from London to Calcutta in five days, the Viceroy of Egypt has actually commenced one of the most gigantic undertakings ever attempted in his territory—that of connecting Upper and Lower Egypt by rail. At the terminal point of all ancient and modern conquest, where the mighty Persian and Roman invaders found the desert an impassible barrier, the Khedive, assisted by an army of English engineers and navvies, will, unless stopped by the jealousy of the Sultan, drive an iron road and a team of iron horses, not only to the very confines of Nubia, but into the heart of Africa, opening up new fields for commerce, and perhaps bringing home Livingstone first-class. Twenty of the engineers for the above undertaking passed through Malta a few days ago on their way, and will be followed by the remainder of the staff in a short time. When it is considered that the line, commencing at the Second Cataract, is to be 600 miles long, some idea may be formed of the amount of labour required to complete the work. We learn that several Maltese have been engaged to assist as interpreters, or dragomans, and we should be delighted to hear that a few hundreds of the superabundant population of these islands have found profitable employment in the same direction.—Malta Times.

CARE OF HORSE'S LEGS.—Few men who handle horses give proper attention to their feet and legs. Especially is this the case on farms.—Much time is spent of a morning in rubbing, brushing and smoothing the hair on the sides and hips, but at no time are the feet examined and properly cared for. Now be it known that the feet of a horse require more care than the body. They need ten times as much, for in one respect they are almost the entire horse. All the grooming that can be done won't avail anything if he is forced to stand where his feet will be filthy. In this case the feet will become disordered, and then the legs will get badly out of fix; and with bad feet and bad legs there is not much left of the horse fit for anything, stable prisons as generally are terribly severe on the feet and legs of horses; and unless these buildings can afford a dry room, where a horse can walk around, lie down, roll over, &c., they are not half so healthy and comfortable as the pasture, and should be avoided by all good hostlers in the country.

In addition to the above, we would remind all who would have the care of horses of the importance of freeing the feet and ankles from snow and ice when they come into the stable. Some are very particular to rub down horses when they come in, but give no attention to their legs, and ankles, and the consequence is they suffer much and often take cold. A word to the wise is sufficient.

PHYSICS OF ARCTIC ICE IN SCOTLAND.—Mr. Robert Brown, in a paper on the "Physics of Aretic Ice," especially as relating to Scotland, sums up as follows:—First after the tertiary period the country was covered with a great depth of snow and ice, very much as in Greeland at the present day, but possibly some of the mountain-tops appeared as islands. During this and the subsequent period glaciers plowed their way down from the Island ice, and icebergs broke off and reached the sea through the glens, then ice floods.—Second, after this the country sank gradually as Greenland is now sinking, to the depth of several hundred feet; and during this period most of the laminated lossiliferious clays were formed. During this period boulders were deposited from the icebergs, and other floating ice drifted both from the north and south, as was also the case during the former period. Third, the country seems to have then emerged from the water, but doubt slowly, until the glaciers finally left the country. Fourth, by this time the country was much higher than now, and the land being connected with the continent, the belt of the present Gorn and Solway crept into it from various quarters, though the Alpine plants still kept possession of the higher mountain regions during a great portion of this epoch. Fifth a depression took place, and the estuarine beds, or carses, of the Scotch rivers were formed. Much of the lamellibrous boulder clay, formed as he has described it, is now under the sea. of the ocean remains of its fauna being scattwoully dredged up. Man had also by this time got into the country. Sixth, the land after this seems to have risen, in all probability, to its present altitude, for we have no certain evidence since the dawn of history there was a continuance of level.

The Queen's Decision.

BY REV. JOHN TODD, D. D.

Once upon a time, long ago, the Queen of Language went forth a proclamation that on such a day there would be a convention of all classes of people, who might take her trusty servants, the alphabet, consisting of twenty-four letters, and the one who should form the sweetest word should be seated next to the Queen and receive a crown of gold. Far and wide the proclamation went, and multitudes began to study what word they would form. But least somebody else should select his chosen word, every one kept silent and only looked wise, as much as to say: 'I know something if I only chose to tell.'

At length the day arrived, and there was the Queen, and the crown and the alphabet and all the multitude. The question now was, who should first spell what he considered the most beautiful word in the world. So the Queen told them all to carefully write their word, and fold it up and cast it into a box which she had prepared. She would then draw them out by lot, read the word aloud, call upon the writer to stand up and she would then decide upon each.—So she drew all the multitude close around her, and all were hushed and silent, when she put in her hand and drew out a paper. On opening it she read aloud MONEY!

"Whose is this?" asked the Queen.

"It is mine," said an old, hard-faced miser.

"And why do you think this is the sweetest word in the human language?" she said.

"Because, madam, money is what all want, all toil for, and all rejoice over.—It will buy anything, do anything, and, as the good book says 'money answereth all things.' It is the sweetest word ever spoken"

"I beg leave to differ with you, sir You prevent the meaning of the good book. You say money will do anything, and procure anything. Is that so? Will it raise the sick man from the bed of pain? Will it cheer or save the dying man? Will it heal a wounded conscience? Will it restore the dead babe to its mother's arms? Will it open the door of heaven to the soul, or make immortality blessed? No! It is a slippery servant to minister to the wants of the body, or to raise the pride, pamper the appetites, or a hard master to grind the poor. It is anything but the sweetest word."

She then put her hand again into the box and drew out a paper, on which was written the word 'HONOR.'

"Who claims this?"

"I do," said a fine looking young man, dressed in splendid military garments.

"And what is your plea for your favorite word?" said the Queen.

"Why, madam, it seems too me too plain for argument. The child at school, the boy at the play ground, the parent in planning for his child, the scholar in wasting life over his books, the sailor risking his life on the stormy ocean, the politician in wrestling for position, and the soldier rushing up to the cannon's mouth, all are witnesses that honor is the word, above all others, that is the sweetest to the human ear."

"You plead well," said the Queen, "but I cannot agree with you. Honor is a powerful instrument with which to move men to effort and action. But you will notice that it appeals to and cultivates supreme selfishness in the heart, shuts out domestic affections, tramples on the most sacred rites of others, seeks its place through fields of blood, and often fills nations with wailing. I cannot allow you the premium, sir."

Again the fair hand of the Queen drew from the box, and on the paper was written the word 'LOVE.'

"Whose may this be?" asked the Queen in a softened voice.

"Mine, madam," said a young man, whose face was glowing with excitement, while a thousand youths around him, and as many bright-eyed maidens seemed ready to shout,

"And your reasons, sir?"

"It is not a matter of reason, madam, but it is the verdict of the mother over her babe, of that babe as soon as he can return her smile, of the child longing for home, of the widow in her desolation, of youth seeking the dearest friend the earth knows, of age leaning upon the child for support. It is sung in the songs of the birds, echoed in the notes of the mourning dove, and it thrills in the language of every living thing. We have reason to believe that it reaches the angels in heaven."

"A strong plea, certainly," said the Queen; "but I must have time to think further upon it before I decide."

Once more she drew from the box, and the word was read amid great silence, 'JESUS.'

"Whose is this?" said the Queen, in a low, soft tone.

"I wrote it," said a sweet little girl, almost sinking under the eyes that were turned upon her.

"And can you, my child, tell me the reasons why you think Jesus the sweetest word in the world?"

"No; I only feel

MR. MORRISON, M. P. for North Victoria is dangerously ill.

SMALL POX.—There were eight cases of small pox last week in Toronto.

LORD DERBY has given a qualified assent to the proposal for life peerages.

MR. SPURGEON is in Rome, he has preached several times since his arrival at that place.

MR. JAS. MILLAR paid during the last two weeks, $14,500, for wheat delivered at Keene.

FALL WHEAT at Keene last week brought $1.19 to $1.25. Spring wheat $1.14. but very little was offered.

FALL WHEAT is now $1.32 at Cobourg and Port Hope, spring wheat, $1.20 to $1.22.

Mr. Robert Romaine's Private Bill to get the Gas Works vested in himself, was lost in committee.

Prof. A. Mellville Bell gave a series of interesting readings in the Music Hall, on Tuesday evening, to a very fair audience.

Principal Dixon will deliver a Lecture in the Music Hall, on Friday, 23rd inst. Subject—"Plato the Thinker." Admission, only 10 cents.

Messrs. M. Boyd, A. H. Campbell, G. Hilliard, J. Ludgate, A. Smith, and N. Shaw have applied for an Act to incorporate them under the name and title of the "Gull Waters Improvement Co'y:"

BELLEVILLE markets last week. Spring wheat $1,00 to $1.25, Fall wheat no quotations; oats 40 to 42c; peas 68 to 70c; beef per cwt. $3.50 to $5.00; potatoes, 50 to 60c; wood $2.50 to $4.00.

SEVERAL horses and dogs are in training for the races that are to take place on the Little Lake next week. Mr. Bergh and his Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, would find a good field for exercising their good offices in behalf of the poor dogs of Peterboro.

The Town of Peterboro has applied for an Act to enable the Council to grant aid to Manufactures to the amount of $40,000. Also to enable them to spend to the amount of $40,000 in aiding or building Water Works.

The Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora R. R. and Mining Company have obtained an extension of their Charter, and by virtue of a clause in it, the town may grant $100,000, subject to a vote of the ratepayers, to aid in the extension of that road.

PRESBYTERIAN ANNIVERSARY SERVICES. We regret that absence from town prevented our being present at the Anniversary Services of the Canada Presbyterian Church. We understand they were very successful.

A large block of 11 stores on Front Street in Toronto, was consumed by fire on Wednesday night last. It cost $121,000 to erect it. It had a beautiful front chiefly of cast iron, and was an ornament to the city. The loss is not less than $500,000, taking buildings and goods into account.

BUCKHORN ROAD.—The Commissioner of Crown Lands has agreed to open up the Buckhorn road this season, as far as the Monck road, a distance of over sixteen miles. If application had been sooner made it might have been opened to the southern boundary of Dysart. The proposed distance will take it to the centre of Glamorgan.

THE Bill to repeal the Act of last session legalizing the County By-law for $100,000 was killed in the Railway Committee. The Committee consists of a large Railway "ring," banded together to secure as much for certain Railway companies as possible. Messrs Graham, Corby, Lauder, Jones, Ferguson, E. B. Woods, Gibson, C. Wood, Carling and several others are evidently in league in railway matters, and pay little regard to the justice of any private Bill.

THE Monck road will be opened this season to the Burleigh road. A good plan for the present, would be to spend a small sum annually on the Burleigh and Bobcaygeon Roads, so as to keep them in a fair state of repair, and that would do away with the necessity for large grants which are too often wasted on superintendents and overseers. It certainly is the duty of the Government to see after these roads, as they draw large revenues from the timber dues paid in this county.

The Globe of Tuesday contains a very severe criticism on Dr. Ryerson's Book on "Christian Morals." The critic proves it is made up of incorrect spelling, violation of grammatical rules, inelegancies of style, inaccuracies in expression, and is unfit for being an elementary work in Canadian schools. We have not yet seen it, but if one half what is written about it be true it deserves to be condemned. The Council of Public Instruction does not exercise due precaution in recommending school books.

THE $100,000 BY-LAW.—The Bill to repeal that portion of the Act of last Session of the Ontario Legislature legalizing the By-law which the County Council refused to read a third time, was lost in the railway committee on Thursday. Our readers will remember that this By-law proposed granting $100,000 to the Grand Junction and Haliburton Railways. The Belleville people were in Toronto in force against the Bill, and succeeded now as they did before in getting it legalised, by lobbying, and through the influence of other members who want railway legislation. The County of Halton was in the same position as Peterborough, and was defeated also. The vote in the committee stood 19 to 6 on the Peterborough Bill.

ORANGE DINNER.—The members of the Orange Lodges of Peterborough had a Dinner on Friday evening. About 125 sat down to a well loaded table. The whole thing was got up by a committee of the brethren; Mr. Marshall being the principal member of the committee. Bro. J. B. McWilliams, County Master, presided. After demolishing the good things provided, there were short speeches by the Chairman, Messrs. Stratton, Croly, M. Hall, and Mr. Marshall; reading by Mand G. Hall, and songs by several of the brethren present. At the close a vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. Marshall for the satisfactory manner in which the Dinner had been provided, and to the Chairman for the able manner in which he had filled the Chair. The meeting was a very pleasant one, so much so that hopes were expressed that the committee would have several social gatherings during the season.

The Robinson Bridge.

The Joint Committee of the Town and County Council took the new Iron Bridge off the hands of the contractors, Messrs. White & Davis, on Saturday last. We believe the committee as a whole were satisfied that the work was performed according to contract, and consider the bridge fully meeting their expectations. It is a very handsome structure, and will be a credit to the County and Town, and to the contractors, no doubt. Being the first Iron Bridge erected in the County, and being done entirely at the Messrs. White & Davis' Foundry and work shops, it would be to their interests to see that every portion of the work was properly done, according to plans and specifications and to the satisfaction of the committee. And we doubt not but that they have faithfully performed their part.

The Committee, we believe subjected the bridge to a test by drawing heavy loads on it, and then getting teams loaded with cordwood to trot scores it, yet this caused no visible deflection anywhere, nor unsual shaking of the structure. There is not a doubt but that it will bear more than the stipulated test of a ton to the linear foot. The unavoidable delay was caused by the severe cold weather. In fact, when the weather is taken into account the wonder is that the contractors got along so well. Mr. Boyd who built the temporary bridge in the summer, and who was employed by Messrs. Whyte & Davis to supervise the putting of the parts together, did much to harry the work through.

We cannot but congratulate ourselves in having such men as Messrs. Whyte & Davis in our Town, who have so successfully completed their first contract of the kind, but which will not be the last we are sure.

Fashionable Wedding at Omemee.

Thursday last with its suite en scene of smiling sunshine, snow-white wintry landscape and bright and gorgeous exteriors of welcome to a happy pair on their entrance, in the rustic little parish church, upon the drama of domestic life, was a day of village interest. Weddings since the time marriage was first ordained until the present, have been always considered by most people occasions of good feeling, and rejoicing and gathering of friends; eminently so the occasion to the good people of Omemee of the wedding day of the young and accomplished daughter of their time-honored and worthy Reeve and patriarch of the district for the past thirty years, Lt.-Col. Cottingham. And the crowded concourse of joyous faces within the church to honor the day, their gaiety and subsequent hearty merrymaking and genial episodes of enjoyment, genuine as general, were but in perfect correspondence with the esteem and regard entertained in the community for one who sprang up in her circle a lovely flower, and from which she was being picked away a lovely blossom. In manner and style the wedding was fashionable and select. At 11 o'clock precisely entered the happy groom—George Cluxton, Esq., a young gentleman of position and parts—with his "valiant three," and advanced to the foot of the altar. Accompanied by her bridesmaids and leaning upon the arm of her father, a few moments after followed the bride to the left. In bridal costume, her brilliancy blended into elegant simplicity, composed entirely of white, the entire in all essentials was of course comme il faut, of the richest fabric, richly and elaborately trimmed. The sash was of the same material. She wore few ornaments. The head-dress consisting of the flower wreath and the nuptial veil completed a costly toilette. Second in interest only to the fair bride were her bridesmaids—three in number—in favorite array. They wore no veils. The groom in black coat, white vest, and the "dark-tinted" trousers seemed as much at ease as his companion The service was short, the Rev. W. Henry Jones, M. A., assisted by the Rev. Rural Dean Allen of Durham and Victoria, officiating. After breakfast, without which and the cake and the customary complimentary speeches and church going and ceremony would have been nothing at all, the happy couple started on their wedding tour. Lindsay Post.

The Member for the West Riding.

During the first Parliament of Ontario, we had occasion on more occasions than one, to regret the legislation that was enacted, as detrimental to the well being of the whole province, and also detrimental to particular localities. The wisdom of County Councils was completely ignored in too many cases, on account of the superior argument of railway rings, regardless of the interests of the people as a whole. Every-thing was being legalized to such an extent, that wise men dreaded the results of such reckless legislation, and yet the then Member said not a word against it. John Sandfieldhad lost all sense of right, and not a few of his followers were fast following in his footsteps

The friends of justice and equal rights succeeded in electing a representative, Mr. Fairbairn, whose only aim is to do what is just and right, and as a consequence we hear his voice raised in our Legislative Halls against railway jobs; and railway legislation, calculated to ruin the Country, and sink Counties and Townships in debts they may never be able to pay, and that without the consent o their Councils.

On the discussion on the Credit Valley Railway:

Mr. Hodgins moved the third reading of the Bill to amend the Act passed in the thirty-fourth year of her present Majestys reign, chaptered thirty-eight, and intitaled "An act to incorporate the Credit Valley Railroad Company, and to extend the powers conferred upon the said Company."

Mr. Fairbairn said he had given notice of an amendment he wished to propose in respect to this bill. Last session a charter was granted to this company by which they were enabled to get bonuses from the municipalities lying along this line of railway. The municipality of the county of Halton was interested in the meaning of the 19th, 20th, and 51st sections of the Act, and had taken the best legal advice on them. The county council had submitted the by-law, without the by-law being preceded by a petition, therefore it was necessary the majority of the ratepayers of the section should vote approval of it. The bye-law was carried by a majority, but the number of the majority was considerably less than the majority of the ratepayers in the section. The county council had not proceeded further with the by-law, for it had not received sufficient sanction. But this Bill sought to interpret the Act in a different manner from that of the county council. This was a species of legislation that ought not to take place here; for the county council acting on the law as it stood, ought to be protected; and the House should not declare the Act passed last session to have a different meaning from what the Council supposed it to have when they acted under it. If this act were passed it would override the county council, and allow the company by a writ of mandamus to force the council to carry the by law into effect. He moved that the Bill be referred back to the committee of the whole, with instructions that all the words "to be affected thereby," in the 6th clause of said Bill be struck out, and the following words inserted: "Provided that nothing in this Act shall effect any by-law heretofore submitted."

Mr. Boultbee, in seconding the amendment, considered that the principle of the proposed legislation was wrong, as it proposed to legalize what had been wrongly done. He had been pressed to withdraw his opposition to the Bill, but he was not interested in it, and hoped it would not pass in its present form.

Who Was Right.

Those who were present at the late annual meeting of the West Riding Agricultural Society, will remember that the Secretary stated that Mr. Walton was elected in 1869 by the casting vote of Mr. Carling, Minister of Agriculture and Public Works, on account of a "tie" between Mr. Walton and some other person Mr. Walton denied that there had been a "tie," to which the Secretary answered, "but I know it to have been so."

Mr. Walton, to satisfy his friends wrote to the Secretary of "Agriculture and Arts Ontario," and has received the following official statement.

The Queen's Speech.

THE FULL TEXT.

The following is the speech in full as delivered by the Lord Chancellor, on behalf of Her Majesty, on Tuesday:—

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN: I avail myself of the opportunity afforded by your reassembling for the discharge of your momentous duties to renew the expression of my thankfulness to the Almighty for the deliverance of my son from most imminent danger, and my lively recollection of the profound universal sympathy shown by my loyal people during that period of anxiety and trial. I suppose that on Tuesday, the 27th inst., conformably to the good and becoming usuages of former days, the blessing thus received shall be acknowledged on behalf of the nation, by thanksgiving in the Metropolitan Cathedral. At this celebration, it is my desire and hope to be present. Direction has been given to provide the necessary accommodations for the members of Parliament.

The assurances of friendship that I receive from foreign powers continue in all respects satisfactory, and I need hardly assure you that my endeavors will at all times be steadily directed toward the maintenance of these friendly relations.

The slave trade and practices scarcely to be distinguished from slave-trading are still pursued in more than one quarter of the world, and continue to attract the attention of my Government. In the South Sea Islands the name of the British Empire is even now dishonored by the connection of some of my subjects with these nefarious practices; and in one of them the murder of an exemplary prelate cast fresh light upon some of the baneful consequences. A bill will be presented you for facilitating the trial of offences of this class in Australia. Endeavors will be made to increase in other forms the means for the contraction of the evil.

Various communications have passed between my Government and that of France on the subject of the commercial treaty concluded in 1860. From the divergence in the views respectively entertained in relation to the value of protective laws, this correspondence has not brought about any agreement to modify that important convention. Both sides, however have uniformly declared their earnest desire that nothing shall occur to impair good feelings between the nations. The papers relating to these subjects will be laid before you.

The Arbitrators appointed pursuant to the Treaty of Washington, for the purpose of amicably setting the Alabama claims, held their first meeting in Geneva. Cases were laid before the Arbitrators, on behalf of each party to the Treaty. In the case so submitted by the United States large claims are included which are understood on my part not to be in the province of the Arbitrators. On this subject, I have caused a friendly communication to be made to the United States. The Emperor of Germany has undertaken to arbitrate on the San Juan water boundary, and the cases of the two Governments have been presented to His Imperial Majesty. The Commission to sit at Washington has been appointed and is in session. The provisions of the treaty which require the consent of the Parliament of the Dominion of Canada await its reassembling.

Turning to domestic affairs, I am glad to apprise you that, with a very few exceptions, Ireland has been free from serious crime. Trade in that part of kingdom has been active, and the advance in agricultural industry remarkable. I am able also to congratulate you, so far as present experience allows judgement to be passed, upon the perceptible diminution in the number of both graver crimes and habitual criminals in Great Britain.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE COMMONS: —The principle estimates for the coming year have been prepared, and they will at once be laid before you. I trust you will find them suitable to the circumstances of the country. The state of the revenue affords favorable indications of the demand for employent and of the general condition of the people—indications which are corroborated by a decline of pauperism not inconsiderably.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN:—Your attention is invited to several measures of acknowledged national interests. Among these are bills for the improvement of public education in Scotland, for the regulation of mines, for the amendment of the licensing system, for fixing the relations of the superior courts of justice and appeal. In particular a bill having for its main object the establishment of secret voting, together with a measure relating to the corrupt practice at Parliamentary elections, will be immediately presented. Several measures of administrative improvement in Ireland will be laid before you, likewise legislative provisions founded on report of the Samitary Commission.

You, my Lords and Gentlemen, will, I am confident, again apply your well known assiduity to the work of legislation, which, from the increasing exigencies of modern society, still seems to grow upon your hands; and I shall continue to rely, under Providence, alike on the loyalty of my people and your energy and wisdom to discharge the duties, uphold the rights, and defend the honor of the Empire

It appears there is to be another distribution of knightly honors among Canadians. But the favor does not come this time from the Sovereign of the British empire. The King of Spain is the donor, and Lord Lisgar, Sir J. A. Macdonald, Sir Georg E. Cartier, Judge Coursol and Judge Ducot the recipients. The first three are to receive the Order of Knight Commander of Isabella the Catholic, the fourth the order of Knight of Charles the Third, and the fifth the Order of Knight of Isabella the Catholic. The particular service for which the gentleman named are to receive these distinctions was their prompt action last summer in suppressing the expedition which was being fitted out in Montreal and Quebec to assist the rebellious Cubans in their attempt to overthrow the authority of Spain. This early recognition of the action, while it shows that King Amadeus is not insensible to the importance of the service rendered him, must be very gratifying to those who receive the honor.

THE NEW REGISTRY OFFICES.—The Chicken New Era says:—"The general feeling among members at Toronto is that the recent Riding Registry offices are not called for by the people for whose benefit they are presumed to be established, and if the people thought their representatives position against them, that they will be abolished, and the registrars' fees finished and a fair salary paid to them. The County Council of Simcoe has petitioned against the Fifth Registry Office, and several municipalities have done the same. All the powers of the Country strongly protested against it, and it is doomed."

Miss McPherson's Manchment House which was resided by the County Council of Hastings, to enable her and her co-laborers to carry on their charitable work of emmigrating destitute children from London, and other places in England, to our country, and from which, within the past two seasons, over 700 Boys and Girls have gone out to find homes in this and other counties of our New Dominion, has been destroyed by fire, together with nearly every vestige of its contents, and sad to relate, one little boy, Robert Gray, some six years old, lost his life by wandering back into the burning building after having been rescued.

The fire took place on Monday morning, the 29th January last, about two o'clock, amidst a heavy gale of wind and severe snow storm. Had not the fire been discovered by one of the inmates, no doubt every soul (18 in number) would have perished within ten minutes from the time of the first alarm.

To begin the work anew, a suitable house had to be obtained, and this was supposed to have been accomplished, but after waiting for ten days we found ourselves disappointed, and had to look anew for another; this we found could be accomplished best by making a purchase for a permanent distributing home instead of again trying to rent. We found a house in a pleasant locality on Yeomans' hill, north of the late home; the house, with some alterations, will make a more suitable home than the one which was burnt, and by purchase, the improvements will not be lost.

The ground contains about 3½ acres, and has three leading streets, so that the buildings are isolated and stand no risk of fire from other buildings. The house is a two story one, with a story and a half kitchen, with still another of one story, used as kitchen and woodhouse, all rough-cast outside and well finished within. Also barn, stable, and other suitable outbuildidgs of wood, at proper distance from the house. This property has cost us $3,000, and is considered by good judges very low, as the buildings must have originally cost $3,000 independent of the land itself.

To secure this property for our new home we have paid down out of our contributions the sum of $750, or one-fourth of the purchase, and hope to raise still a larger sum in this County. We also have on hand about $500 in money, furniture, &c., to aid and assist in refitting the building, and for furniture, &c., all of which have come in spontaneously since the fire.

Our object is not to relax our exertions in obtaining all we can within the County of Hastings, but while we do this we desire to make our appeal to our Protestant brethren and sisters of the various Christian Churches of Canada, as also to our numerous Protestant benevolent societies in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, for aid to help us to pay the balance on the purchase and to complete the furnishing of the home. We feel we cannot accomplish our object short of $4,000, all told, so that our friends and well-wishers will see what is yet required in order to pay for and to furnish, and make the requisite repairs, and leave the whole property free from debt. We have already insured the house for three years for $2,000, and shall insure the furniture so soon as we get in; we do this for safety, having had no insurance before.

We desire to make this home a real Canadian one, bought, fitted and furnished purely and solely from Canadian funds. We do not desire to call on our English friends for anything for the home, but leave to them the work of sending out the children to be here distributed to various parts of Canada, and from our experience in the past we believe the young children under the proper traing they receive in our homes, will, in the end, make the best settlers for our New Dominion.

By dividing up this work in our cities, towns, villages, and amongst our farming population, the amount will be easily raised to relieve us, and to give to Miss McPherson and her co-workers a permanent home wherein to carry on their work of charity and labor of love in rescuing young immortals from starvation, and placing them in comfortable homes in this land of peace and plenty.

We wish, if possible, to close off the debt by the first of May next. Who will begin the work?

All sums sent to Miss E. A. Billbrough or myself, at Belleville, will be thankfully received and gratefully acknowledged. By united effort in each locality we have faith we shall succeed.

May we no task of the various Protestant newspapers in Ontario and Quebec who take an interest in Emigration, and more particularly in Miss McPherson's work, to give our appeal one or more insertions gratis, in order to help on the work.

BILLA FLINT.

Belleville, 14th February, 1872.

PARLIAMENTARY.

Mr. CORBY enquired of the Ministry if it was their intention, during the present session, to devise any scheme to enable parties who have erected or now own saw mills on streams in lumbering districts—said mill supplying a great want to the inhabitants of the districts, but owing to the present timber policy of the Government, in granting large timber limits to the exclusion of the small mill owners the said grants seriously retard the local improvements of the country.

Mr. Scott said the Government would endeavour, as far as possible, to meet any local wants in the districts in question, in respect to sawmills.

Mr. Read enquired of the Ministry if the Government intended to set aside or reserve a portion of the pine in free grant districts for the supply of the local wants of the country.

Mr. Scott said it was not the intention of the Government the present session to bring down such a scheme.—But the subject would receive the consideration of the Government after recess. In reply to Mr. Ardagh

Mr. Scott would have no objection to furnishing the return. He pointed out that the Government had pursued a most liberal policy towards the settlers in free grant territory. They had brought down a measure remitting to them any balances which they owed to the Government, and had asked for a very large vote for colonisation roads. But the Government could not undertake the acts of former Governments. He found that $319,000 had already been spent in that territory, a much larger sum than the country had dreamed of by way of bonuses and steamboats.

Mr. Wood (Cornwall) thought the Government would be willing to build the roads and steamboats themselves, and then sell them to the settlers.

THE $10,000 BY-LAW.

The Review in last Friday's issue labors hard to show the many advantages to accrue to the Town from the proposed extension of the the Auburn Factory and argues that they are of such a character as will warrant the ratepayers in passing the By-law, about to be submitted on the 27th instant for their approval or rejection.

In examining the arguments made use of, and the ground upon which they are based, I can only arrive at one conclusion, and that is, that the writer of the article in the Review must be laboring under some strange delusion, or that his old malady of "building castles in the air," has become chronic, and, it is therefore unwise to be guided by such visionary advantages as he so eloquently urges in the article referred to.

While I admit that the interest of the Town would be greatly advanced by a proper and well digested plan for the encouragement of manufactures, and hold that the whole community would be more or less benefited thereby, yet I object to the plan proposed as unsound and untenable and calculated to be burdensome and vexatious to one portion of the community, while those who are so urgent to force it upon us would derive the principal benefit.

For example—the Grocer, Dry Goods Merchant and Hardware dealer would pocket the lion's share of the $60,000 proposed to be expended, and could therefore well afford to pay their share of the Taxes imposed upon them; but the laborer or mechanic, who through industry and thrift has possessed himself of a house and lot to be a home for his family, and who never handles a cent of the $60,000 has to pay his full share of the taxation necessary to raise the bonus and as his share of the advantage derivable from the "Operation" is told very patronizingly indeed, that his property has become so much more valuable that it is quite sufficient to compensate him for any amount of taxation to which he may have to submit. I question very much whether the Freeholders upon whom the burden will fall heaviest will see it in the light urged by the Review or by the store keepers or Machinists, who expect to manipulate the large expenditure anticipated.

But even the amount to be expended in "the erection of the additional Mill accommodation" is grossly exaggerated. Who will believe the Review when it states that a bare building of the dimensions stated will cost the enormous sum of $25,000. Why, Sir, I have no doubt that the contract could be let at one-fourth that amount. The only thing not moveable connected with "the additional mill accommodation" being the walls, and floors, and yet the Review tells us that the work will cost $25,000. Verily, the stones on the Douro side of the Otonabee River must be much more valuable than that on the Peterborough side.

But great stress is placed upon the extension of the limits of the Town so as to embrace the Auburn Mills. Yet if we look at what that extension necessarily entails, we will see that the advantage is on the wrong side. The Auburn Mill property I am told contains some six or seven acres of ground—and I believe cost less than the amount of Bonus proposed by our "wise men" to be given—and if the limits of the Town are extended as proposed, and the bonus granted, the next demand will be a bridge across the Otonabee, which to be at all permanent will not cost less than $5,000 more. This together with the additional road making and building of side walks will necessarily increase our taxes to an extent far beyond what we at present calculate. This is faintly hinted at by the Review when pointing out "to our friends outside the limits," that the advantages are not all on the side of the Town—and this part of his article is the only correct and honest statement made. He says that the money is to be expended in their immediate neighborhood. The twenty-five or thirty houses to be built upon their lands, and they will have sidewalks, &c., built for them instead of having to build them themselves, as they now have to do. Now, Mr. Editor, this is the very thing we fear. We know something about the insatiability of the outside portions of the Corporation as it now stands—as regards the building of bridges and sidewalks, without the &c., which implies a great deal. And when we find men whose excessive modesty will permit them to ask for a bonus to an amount exceeding in value the property they own, and find among ourselves men capable of advocating the granting of such a sum. What are we to look for when it becomes a part and parcel of the Constitution? Verily, I fear that their modesty would have no bounds.

But the principle of giving bonuses is wrong: it opens up the flood-gates of temptation and establishes a precedent for the whole of the other parts of the Municipality to demand the same favors. Let us look at the matter as it may, it is a direct tax upon the whole community for the benefit of a few, and as such is unjust and unfair. Let us look at the matter as it may, it is a direct tax upon the whole community for the benefit of a few, and as such is unjust and unfair.

Mr. Mackenzie thought the Government should not be asked to build roads and steamboats, but should only grant aid to the settlers.

Mr. Scott said the Government had no intention of building roads and steamboats, but only to grant aid to the settlers.

Mr. Read

gestion of Kidney, to whom we are principally indebted for the handsome testimonial, we tender our grateful thanks. Nor can we forget some upon whom more especially devolved the burdensome labor of collecting subscriptions from friends, to get up the testimonial. Mrs. Plunkett and Miss M. Neilson, laboured most in the matter, and no doubt had to endure some repulses, and some unkind words, but they put on zeal as a cloak, and carried out their purpose nobly.

Hats off to them and all, then, who in the generous presentation sought to heap some honor on the servant of that Master whom he professes to serve, and whom they profess to have bought them with His blood, we again tender our grateful thanks, and may He who does not forget even a drop of cold water, given to a disciple, in his name toward Him openly.

AN ASHBURNHAM LAD ABROAD :—Stand back outside the ropes, give Brockport the ring. The other day a young third of this village, named Alexander McDonald, lifted a man weighing two hundred and forty one pounds, on a chair, by taking hold of the front round with his righthand. McDonald is of Scotch decent, of but ordinary stature, but inherits from his ancestors muscular power, extraordinary. A brother of this gentleman, residing in Canada, once lifted over a ton, with the aid of a harness over his shoulders.

PETERBORO' EXAMINER.—The Peterboro' Examiner has come to hand this week in an enlarged and improved form. THE PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER.—We are pleased to notice that that good staunch Reform journal, the Peterborough Examiner, has enlarged its borders to 36 columns, and is now one of the best-looking and ablest conducted of our provincial papers.—Lindsay Post.

A DESPATCH from Bombay informs us that the assassin of Eral Mayo has been tried, convicted, and sentenced to be hanged.

AN American paper, speaking of the rice crop, says :—"We imported in 1865 no less than 76209,397 pounds of rice, and the first quantity sold 13½ cents per lb. We have imported a less amount in each subsequent year, because our home product which was 24318,600 pounds in 1866, has raised rapidly and pretty steadily since, till it amounted in 1871, 92,000,000 pounds. Meantime, the price of the first quantity has fallen to 9c per pound. Our rice is grown by the sea-coast negroes of South Carolina Georgia, and Louisiana, who are charged with inveterate idleness and beggary. They grow this important crop where little if anything would be produced if rice were not. Can't congress be persuaded to leave them alone ?'

CANADIAN SILVER COIN.—Mr. W. Weir of Montreal, announced that by arrangements with the Government, he is prepared to distribute the new silver coin to the public at par in such sums as are wanted, from one dollar upwards. Mr. W. also states that arrangements are in progress for the distribution of the coin in places which, owing to want of Bank agencies, have hitherto had considerable difficulty in obtaining a supply. The receipts of silver coin this week amounted to $50,000, and each succeeding steamer is expected to bring a further supply untill the demand for the coin has been freely met, Care will be taken at the same time against an over issue of the new coin. This week's receipts consisted of halves and quarters only, an accident to the machinery at the mint having delayed the coinage of the smaller pieces, a quantity of which, however, is expected by the next steamer.—Star.

The prospectus of a new paper to be published in Toronto will be out in a day or two it is to be called the Mail, and is to be owned by a company which now gives notice of application to the Dominion Parliament for an act of incorporation, under the style of "The Mail Printing and Publishing Company, of the Dominion." Its headquarters are to be in Toronto, but it asks power to establish branch offices throughout the Dominion. Whether it proposes to start other papers than the one at Toronto is not known. The company consists of six members, namely: Sir Hugh Allan, J. S. Macdonald, King, of the Bank of Montreal; C. J. Bridges, John Sheddon, of the Grand Trunk, and Gooderham, of Gooderham & Worts. Capital, $150,000. Patterson, late of the Provincial Secretary's Department, is to be manager; Gregg and Belford, late of the Leader, and Kingsmill, late of the Telegraph, are to be on the editorial staff. The company offers to buy out the Telegraph and give Robertson a good position on the newspaper, but Robertson so far holds out against them. It is probable, however, that the company will ultimately absorb both the Leader and Telegraph.

Once in a Century.

Executinn of a Man and Woman at St. Johns, Newfoundland.

St. John, N.F., Feb., 8.—An excution for the first time in one hundred years has produced a universal feeling of awe throughout every town and settlement of this quiet island. Patrick Gehan, a fisherman, murdered his brother-in-law, Garrett Seyers, an old man, and his wife, Mary Gehan. The one he wounded with a pistol bullet and beat to death with a mattock; the other he smothered with a large feather bed. Living in Gehan's house was a beautiful girl named Johannah Hamilton, who assis ed Gehan in removing Seyer's body to an ash heap. The body of Mrs. Gehan was removed to a lonesome portion on the Spaniard's Bay road, and left there. The blood was then washed off the floor of the room in which the tragedy was enacted, and every other vestige of the crime destroyed. The body of Mrs. Gehan was found as it was laid upon the road; a coroner's jury sat upon it, and returned a verdict of "accidental death from causes unknown."

The verdict not satisfying the Chief of Police, he made strict investigation, and discovered the mutilated body of Seyer in the ash heap. This led to the arrest and imprisonment of Gehan and the girl. In spite of the advice of her counsel, Johannah made a full confession. On the 24th of December they were brought up for trial. The council for the accused had solely to depend upon pathetic pleadings and legal technicalities. On the 6th of January the prisoners' counsel made his last appeal to the jury. The Chief Justice in his charge said that the jury had no alternative but to accuse the murderer and his accomplice of murder in the first degree.

The jury retired, and after a brief absence of ten minutes returned to their seats. Great excitemen prevailed through out the court-room. The murderer and his beautiful accomplice sat pale and trembling in the dock. Her face turned snow white during the mvments preceding the reading of the verdict. The terrible word "Guilty" being uttered, the young woman sobbed aloud, but her companion hung his head sulkily.

His Lordship committed them to the gallows to be hanged in the north-east yard of the court house of St. Johns. The woman refused to retire, and walked too and fro in her cell with her face buried in her handkerchief. When spoken to she rarely answered. Her profuse raven hair fell dishevelled over her magnificent shoulders. She wore a neat black dress, a narrow white collar, and plain brooch. Gehan sat upon the pallet in his cell with an air of callousness and nonchalance, smoking a pipe and talking freely with the warden. On being questioned concerning his chances of being reprieved, he replied in a surly manner, and all he said to me was, "I'll give no one any satisfaction about it; it's all over now and they did their best." At midnight he retired but first inqired after Johannah, his accomplice, and begged that some would tell her that he had asked for her, and that he hoped she would die game beside him. Here the priest, who had arrived a little before twelve o'clock, interposed and told Gehan that he wished to communicate with him. Gehan submissively consented to receive the advice of his spiritual counsel, after which he retired for the night. At five o'clock he was aroused from his fitful sleep and recommended to prepare himself for the last offices of the church of which he declared himself to be a member. He then ate some mutton chops, toast and coffee, with great reliah, after which he said that he felt plucky.

But the more worthy object of human sympathy in this case was the frail but lovely creature who sat wearied yet sleepless upon the miserable pallet within her last abode on earth. Her tears had steadily fallen during the night; but when the priest announced himself to her she cried aloud for many moments before speaking to him. At length he succeeded in calming down her grief, but only to hear from her the distracted and plaintive appeal, "Oh, Father, for the love of sweet Jesus, save me! save me!" But it is the policy of religion not to offer reprieve to men under sentence of death for murder. The priest then gradually led her thoughts away from earth. She slowly grew resigned to her fate.

At 6.30 a company of policemen marched into the yard, and upon hearing them the doomed woman shuddered involuntarily, and had now recourse to tears. On leaving her cell at the request of the sheriff she drew back and sobbed hysterically. Being quietly pressed to move on, she advanced a step and again shrunk from the terrible journey. At length it was found necessary to employ force in removing her from the cell; but at the request of the assisting clergymen she was allowed to remain quiet for a few minutes until he found means to persuade her to obey the sentence of the law. The priest finally succeeded, and taking her by the hand he led her out into the passage way where her dress was looped, her arms pinioned, and the fatal noose adjusted. In the meantime Gehan, dressed in a suit of black, had been fitted out for his leap into death, and he stood beside his beautiful accomplice.

"Poor Johannah," said Gehan aloud: but the condemned woman did not even raise her eyes towards him. She hung down her head meekly and seemed fully to realise her shame. But her tears had all tried up and sobs hushed; nothing save an occasional sigh was left of the grief and distraction of her last night upon earth.

"Are you ready ?' asked the Sheriff, and Gehan answered promptly, "Yes sir."

Gehan then received the black cap, as did also the unfortunate Johannah. Gehan accompanied by a clergyman and two deputy sheriffs, led the way to the cortile of the court house. Approaching the platform upon which the fatal trap bars were, the doomed woman again shrunk back and cried bitterly. But again encouraged by the counsel of her spiritual adviser she went courageously up the steps and on to the platform. There she knelt and prayed ardently. Their prayers being finished they arose, and the black caps were drawn over their eyes by deputy sheriffs and the noose of each adjusted to ropes which dangled from two protruding beams. The fatal trap doors suddenly fell soon after, and Gehan and his accomplice were swinging between earth and sky. Great sympathy was felt for the girl, and it was hoped by many that the Governor would relent before the sentence had been fulfilled. But no parion came.

The bodies were claimed by friends and buried decently.—N. Y. Herald Cor.

Sketches of Dead Leaders.

THE ELECTIONS OF 1844—HENRY SHERWOOD ON THE RAMPAGE—THE GALWAY ATTORNEY.

Two gentlemen in the summer of 1844 had just voted in St David's Ward, Toronto. The Ward then composed the whole three wards of St. James, St. Lawrence and St. David. The polling booth was held in the "Black Horse" Inn, a wooden building, long since departed to the bourne whence old and faded houses —especiall wooden houses— never return. Two gentlemen were standing under the friendly shelter of an umbrella. Beside them a young school boy, radically inclined, and having a great interest in reform, who had, in fact, sacrified his game of ball after school hours, to come and see how the Reform candidate was getting on. I wouldn't care to say who the young gentleman was. One of the two parties under the umbrella, however, was lawyer Blake, afterwards Chancellor of Upper Canada.

"Well, Joe," said Blake, "how goes the polling ?' At this time Henry Sherwood (whose remains now lie buried in the Necropolis) and W H. Boulton were fighting a combined fight against the Liberal candidate, ex-Receiver-General Dunn, father of Col. Dunn, so gallantly known since in connection with the 100th regiment. "Why," said the friend, "there is only a quarter of an hour more, and Dunn is 110 behind." "Oh," answered Blake, Dunn by name and DOWN by nature." At which they passed on.

Mr. Blake was father to the present Premier. An Irishman by birth, at least as far as that fact could be stated of a Connaught man, he was remarkable for pluck and somewhat choleric, as became a gentleman with whom the pleasures of the table were by no means the least consideration in life. His hospitality was boundless, and he could fight a foe as well as entertain a friend. Indeed, it was whispered that he had pulled a trigger in old times, and when the bottle had gone round a dozen times or so, "fireball" Macnamara himself appeared in the distance. But he was a genial man and thorough Reformer, and we kindly remember him. "Nil de mortuis val bonum."

It was in the year that Baldwin was Rimouskied. "Honest Robert" had an undoubted majority of the electors. But in those days majorities did not elect members always. The polling resembled more our "nomination" days, with, perhaps, this important exception. In our time, if excitement runs high, the candidate may get his frontispice altered from a dead cat or other missile, heaved at him from the midst of the crowd. But in those days a candidate was safe inside the canvas tent, and dammage was done to the persons of his supporters as they came up to vote for him. To the election of the Tory candidate, it was necessary to get up a first-class row. To get up a first-class row excitement was absolutely necessary; and it was, of course further necessary in the premises, to flood the country with stump orators—not in the Yankee sense, however. The barristers of both parties were finished orators in those times. Now in the election of '44, the Berefords, Davidsons and Gambles were spouting from King's Corners to Markham. Except old David Wilson, of Sharon, Baldwin had no assistant, and those who are acquainted with the weak physical constitution of the great Reformer, will understand the force of this fact.

Henry Sherwood—the Chevalier Bayard of the Conservative party before the era of coalitions—had just arrived in North York In every direction he scattered the "rebels" before him, and Baldwin, in a panic, sent to Toronto for some one to assist him. The Reform Committee immediately pitched upon Blake, who, in company we believe with one of the McDonagh family of the township of Mara, started through York. Never did the haunts of Toryism get such a stirring up. Phillippic after phillipdic was hurled at the leaders. With the light of illegal, unconstitutional experience in Ireland, the eloquent barrister showed to his fellow countrymen the fraud that was being played upon them in the name of loyalty, by the codfish aristocracy of the Family Compact. Sherwood, touching on the contshirts of Blake's circuit, heard of him with astonishment. Upon being challenged with an assertion of Mr. B.'s, he asked, contemptuously, "Who the devil is Blake ?" and alluded to his Irish origin. The expression was soon reported, and Blake, late in the afternoon, started on a 30 mile drive, bursting with passion and lashing the horses, determined to come up with Henry Sherwood before night. Sherwood that evening addressed a meeting of electors in King, at a place where the mixed character of the population ensured a fair hearing. He had just wound up, when the identical offensive expression came from his lips, and his antagonist entered the room.

Blake took the platform, and, in a mixture of argument, ridicule, invective and satire, in which he appeared to surpass even himself, completely overturned Sherwood. Henry endeavored to bear up against his drollery for awhile, but he was not ready enough at repartee, and at length retired crestfallen from the room, under the plea that he had an engagement elsewhere. As he retired, the delighted North York farmers threw after him his taunt, "Now, who the devil is Blake ! The late Chancellor concluded by expressing his conviction that he had satisfactorily answered that question. which was also the general opinion. Sherwood never ventured to attack Blake again, and he was frequently taunted with his fear of the "Galway Attorney."—Windsor News.

THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it ? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientefic physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certian fixed proporations of greater power and producesing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combination. Thus in the preparation, of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alchol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

PAIN KILLER

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to hush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybody's house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have been converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whthin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what's more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

BY-LAW NO.

A By-law to Encourage Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., to increase their manufacturing Establishment for the manufactory of Woolen Goods, and for the maintaining of the same by the grant of a bonus, as herein set forth, and for the purpose of raising money to meet such bonus.

Whereas Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., are possessed of a Woolen Mill, situate upon the Otonabee River, of the capacity known as a Three Set Mill.

And whereas it would be greatly to the benefit and advantage of the Town of Peterborough that the said firm of Paton, Moir & Co., should be encouraged to increase the capacity of the said Mill, by the granting to them of a bonus for the said purpose, and for the purpose of maintaining the same when so increased.

And whereas if the said Mill were increased to that extent which would render it what is known as a Ten Set Mill or three times and one-third its present capacity, some two hundred hands would have to be employed in running or working the same, and some sixty thousand dollars would have to be expended in payment of wages and running expenses, annually, all of which would directly tend to add to the prosperity of the said Town of Peterborough.

And whereas it is desirable to extend the limits of the said Town of Peterborough, so as embrace in addition to other territory the said Auburn Mills, and it is desirable also with a like object to exempt the proposed extension of the said Auburn Mills from taxation for the period of Ten Years from and after the completion of such extension.

And whereas by an Act of Parliament of the late Province of Canada, passed in the Twenty-fourth year of Her Majesty's reign, Entituled, "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough, and to authorize the issue of debentures on the security of Town Property and for other purposes" It was enacted that for the purposes and in the manner therein particularly mentioned and set out, and to the amount therein mentioned, it should be lawful for the Commissioners therein named to issue debentures under the seal of the said corporation, to be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Treasurer and the Secretary of the said Commissioners and that the Council of the said Town of Peterborough should annually, upon the application of the said Commissioners, raise upon the rateable property of the Town, the interest and sinking fund requisite for the redemption of the said debentures.

And whereas the Council of the said Town of Peterborough have determined to grant a bonus of Ten Thousand Dollars to the said Paton, Moir & Co., to induce and assist them in increasing their said mill as aforesaid, to a Ten Set Mill, or to three times and one-third its present capacity, to be paid to them as hereinafter set out.

It is therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the Town of Peterborough, as follows:

1. That this By-law and the several provisions thereof shall come into force, and be operative and binding upon the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough from and immediately after its final passing by the said Council, if an Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario shall have been then passed, authorising the same, and a Proclamation of the Lieutenant Governor adding to the limits as aforesaid, of the said Town, shall have issued, and not before.

2 If such an Act of the said Parliament shall not have been passed. and such proclamation shall not have been issued as aforesaid, at the time of the final passing of this By-law of aforesaid, then this By-law and the several provisions therein shall come in force, and be operative, and binding upon the said corporation of the Town of Peterborough, from and immediately after the passing of an Act of the said Parliament, legalising the same, if an Act authorising the same shall not have been passed, and the issue of such Proclamation, adding to the limits of the said Town as aforesaid, whichever shall happen last.

3 Upon the said Paton Moir & Co., entering into a bond or bonds to the Corperation of the Town of Peterborough binding themselves in the pehal sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars with two good and sufficient sureties, to be approved of by the Town Council, in the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars each within two months after this By-law takes effect, conditioned that they will enlarge and increase their said Mill and fully equip and furnish the same with the necessary machinery before the 1st day of December in the year One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-four, to the extent and capacity known as a Ten Set Mill, in all, or three times and one-third its present capacity, and shall (unless prevented by unforseen accident, misfortune, or calamity) run and work the same to the full capacity thereof for the period of Ten Years thereafter, and also conditioned as hereinafter set out, the said Town of Peterborough shall be liable and bound to pay to them, the said Paton Moir & Co., or their successors or assigns, owners of the said Mill, the said sum of Ten Thousand dollars of lawful money of Canada as a bonus as aforesaid in the manner following, that is to say, the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars, so soon as they the said Paton Moir & Co., shall have erected and completed ready for the machinery the necessary additions to their said Mills to contain the necessary additional machinery to make the same a Ten Set Mill as aforesaid, the further sum of $2,500 when necessary machinery placed therein and the balance of Five Thousand dollars and interest thereon at the rate of six per centum per annum in manner following, that is to say, the said balance of Five Thousand Dollars in ten equal annual payments of Five Hundred dollars each, the first of such payments to be made in one year after the said Mill shall have fully equipped and furnished as a ten set mill, and the said interest annually on the whole balance thereof remain due and unpaid and the sums of each of such payments as such interest to commence and be computed from the time said mill shall be fully enlarged and equipped as aforesaid, such payments however to cease and all liability to make the same to be at an end should the said Paton Moir & Co. or their successors or assigns owners of the said Mill be guilty of any breach of their said bond

4. That the said bonds or bond shall be further conditioned that if said Mill when so enlarged and equipped shall not be steadily worked or run to its full capacity during the said period of Ten years (except stoppages for repairs and other reasonable and unavoidable stoppages for a limited and reasonable time) they, the said Paton Moir & Co, will on demand refund and repay to the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough all the principal moneys which may then have been paid under this by-law, less a sum at the rate of One Thousand dollars per year for each and every year during which the said mill as enlarged and equipped as aforesaid may have been run or worked to its full capacity as aforesaid.

5 That for the purpose of providing and furnishing the moneys necessary for the payment of the said bonus in manner aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the Mayor for the time being of the said Town of Peterborough, to cause to be issued from time to time such debentures not less than one hundred dollars each as may be necessary, and not exceeding the amount of Eleven Thousand Dollars in the whole, and payable within Ten years, which said debentures shall be sealed with the seal of the said Corporation and countersigned by the Treasurer and by the Secretary of the Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust.

6 The said debentures shall be made payable at such Bank or other place in the said Town of Peterborough as the said Mayor may direct. and shall have attached to them Coupons for the payment of interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable on the First days of the months of January and July in each year during the currency thereof.

7 The payment of all such debentures as may be issued under the authority hereof shall be provided for in the same manner as debentures issued under the provisions of the Act aforesaid, intitled "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough, and to authorize the issue of debentures on the security of the Town Property, and for other purposes."

8 And it is further enacted, that provided the conditions of the said bond or bonds be well and faithfully performed, fulfilled and kept, the said intended addition to the said Woolen Mills and machinery shall be exempt from taxation for the period of Ten years from the time of the completion of the said proposed extension thereof.

9 That the votes of the Electors of the said Municipality shall be taken on the proposed By-law on the 22nd day of February, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy Two, and in the following places, that is to say in each of the four wards of the said Town, said at the places of polling therein of the last Municipal Election, that the polling shall open at the hour of Nine o'clock in the forenoon, and close at the hour of Five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. That John Irwin shall be Returning Officer in the North Ward, James Edwards Returning Officer in the East Ward, Robert Rowe Returning Officer in the Centre Ward, and William Cummings Returning Officer in the South Ward for taking the said vote, and that the said By-law will be taken into consideration by the TOWN Council of the Town of Peterborough after one month from the first publication thereof in the Peterborough "Examiner" newspaper, the date of which first publication was Thursday, the First day of February, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy Two.

Wot' Has a Something

"What thou knowest not now, thou shalt know hereafter."

Wo a' has a something, be't grit or be't sense,
To rich an' to puir there's a something to a';
Yer gear may be ride, or yer gear may be scrant,
Yo'll aye has a something yo'll think ye ou wast.

It's whiles a bit thing o' tasie bather than grief,
Like a jag i' the thoom, or a need i' the teeth
An' whiles it's a something o' sorrow an' care,
That wearies the spirit an whitens the hair,

But, though ye be weary, though sair and unseen,
The most silent tears fa' like peace free yer een;
Be still! an' free virtue an' faith dinna scorn,
For yer sorrow has some hidden purpose to serve.

For just as the insect, who's sting is nae mair
Consumes a' thing deadly that poisons the air;
The sorrow ye suffer, though deep be its scene,
Has saved ye free something a thousand times mair.

Then dinna be faithless I for, eh, if ye trust,
Yer heart will be glad tho'ye dine on a crust—
The wealth o' the wilderness little we prize,
When the heart has a home for awa i' the skies.

An' sorrow brings sympathy under its wings,
For sorrow aye saft'eas the heart that it wrings;
O let my tears fa' though they fa' like the rain,
On the breast that had bled wi' a grief o' its ain,

Our thochts an's our feelings it serve to refine,
An' gies them a touch o' the bricht an' sublime;
For spirit ne'er springs to the place o' its birth
Till stang by the sorrow that saddens the earth.

The cauld-hearted warl' aye meets wi' a smile,
For tho' yer heart's breakin' an' bleedin' the while,
When somath the tempest, when strong is the tide,
Ye a' all fad there's no Angel o' Strength by yer side.

Then bear wi' yer something, whatever it be,
Wi' the courage that Heaven's eye waitin' to gie;
An' think o' His words to the children o' men,—
What ye dinna ken here, ye hereafter will ken.

MRS JAMES MORTON.

A Heavy Swindle.

The St. Paul Press has the following account of the operations of a swindler in that city:—

"Mr. E. Little, of Chicago, registered at the Merchants', last Saturday evening on the arrival of the Eastern train. Mr. Harry Shaw, having, as usual, an open eye to the comfort of his guests, noticed the retiring modest appearance of the man, and concluding that he spent his Sabbath mostly in his room, had an especially pleasant apartment assigned to him. An officer of the Hudson Bay Company, who had spent some years in the "North Countree," was also spending the Sabbath at the Merchants'. The retiring Mr Little cultivated the acquaintance of the Hudson Bay man He claimed to have studied medicine, and volunteered the information to his newly made acquaintance, that said acquaintance was badly afflcted with liver complaint, and proved his case by examinations in the vicinity of his friends inside pockets—and was satisfied. The Hudson Bay man was going to Ottawa, Canada. By an extraordinary coincidence Mr. Little was going to the same place, but could not go until Tuesday, as neither his vast amount of merchandize, which was in the cars at the St. Paul depot, nor the two ladies accompanying him and who were stopping elsewhere in the city, would be ready before that time. It would be "so nice" if his friend would wait one day and go in his party. The friend waited. On Monday evening the friend, by request, visits Mr. Little's room to complete the preparations for their journey. Mr. L was communicative, and informed the friend that he had with him, in a valise then in charge of the ladies of his party $40,000 in gold, which he should soon bring to his own room, to be in readiness for the morning journey. He went out and soon returned with the heavy baggage, well strapped and tacked. His next business was to attend to his freight bills, and, leaving the treasure in charge of the freind, he went out. but soon returned, and was about to open the valise when he found that he had forgotten to take the key from the ladies. Here was a quandary; the freight office would soon close, and if the bill was not paid that night, forty eight dollars would be charged him for further use of the cars. He needed fifteen hundred dollars, but could make the matter right with six hundred; had the friend any money that he could spare for a few hours? The gentleman from Hudson Bay was entirely ignorant of confidence operations, having lived for years, a retired life, as his business required him to do, so he kindly counted out the six hundred, and consented to watch the forty thousand until Mr. Little returned. Mr. L. completely sealed the eye of his friend by handing him back twenty dollars, remarking that the sum was miscounted. The retiring capitalist stepped out, and the friend began to watch, which he continued until two o'clock Tuesday morning, when he went below and stated his position to the night clerks, who when morning dawned, informed Mr. Shaw of the matter. The heavy valise was immediately searched, and found to contain a fine collection of geological specimens from our limestone quarry and a stick of wood, and the other bag and hat box were empty. No clue had, last evening been obtained of the swindler. Whether he is in retirement in the city or is travelling is a question yet to be solved.

A DEFINATION OF LOVE.—Many women suppose they love their husbands, when, fortunately, they have not the beginning of an idea of what love is. Let me explain it to you, my dear lady. Loving to be admired by a man, loving to be petted by him, loving to be caressed by him, and loving to be praised by him is not loving a man. All these may be when a woman has no power of loving at all—they may simply because she loves herself, and flattered, praised, caressed, ceazed; as a cat likes to be coaxed and stroked, and fed with cream and have a warm corner. But all this is not love. It may exist, to be sure; where there is love, it generally does. But it may also exist where there is no love. Love, my dear lady is self-sacrifice; it is a life out of self and in another. In every essence is the preferring of the comfort, the ease, the wishes of another to one's own, for the love we bear them. Love is giving not receiving. Love is not a sheet of blotting paper or a sponge, sucking in everything to itself; it is an outspringing fountain, giving from itself. Love's motto has been dropped in this world as a chance gem of great price by the lowliest, and fairest, the purest, the strongest of lovers that ever trod this mortal earth, of whom it may be recorded that He said:—It is more blessed to give than to receive." Now, in love, there are ten receivers to one giver. There are ten persons in this world who like to be loved, and love, where there is one who knows how to love.

PIES.—Pies, as are commonly made, are any thing but wholesome; they form inferior kinds of food. Made as they should be, they are both wholesome and delicious. The best of all pies is made from the apple. The crust should be thin, the fruit good pie-apples, and plenty of them, put between the crust. Where the two crusts meet on the edge of the dish, care should be taken to have the apples pressed out, so that there shall not be a wide strip of crust with no apples near them. An apple pie should be eaten just after it is cool. If eaten while hot, it is apt to go down only half masticated, and the effect of the heat on the tongue tends to destroy the finer sense of taste. After an apple pie is one day old it begins to grow stale, unless it is kept with great care. Soyer, the famous London pie-maker, thinks that if the apoilt pies made in London on one single Sunday were placed in a row beside a railway, it would take an express train an hour to pass them in review. In cities many pies are spoilt, mainly because badly made. Whoever will induce bakers to improve their methods of making them, will be a public benefactor. The usual price for a pence of pie in a New York restaurant is ten cents. They could be made for half that price, at a fair profit too, if there were no spoiled pies.

A Man with Three Arms.

A man with three arms was among the passengers on the train bound south from Williamsburg (P.a.) a few days ago. He was born and reared in the country of Otsego, N. Y. His name is William Jacobs. His pride himself on three well-developed arms and hands, the member extraordinary having grown above the shoulder-blade. It hangs suspended down the back, and can be raised and lowered at will. In length it is shorter than the arms proper, but possesses extraordinary muscle, which he displays when ever occasion demands it. No person passing through the railroad car, or meeting him upon the street would observe any deformity; but after becoming cognizant of this singular case, would perceive a spasmodic fit of his cost. He states that he has often been questioned as to why he does not place himself upon exhibition, or make use of Barnum's permanent [illegible] the miserable reply is, that [illegible] exhibition. His [illegible] farmer, he had always [illegible] to remain at home, and was the most active and profitable of farmer's help. He would assist in loading hay in the same time holding securely the [illegible] On several occasions he came near breaking the unnatural member by sudden jerks, and at one time suffered the pangs of a full-sized felon upon the forefinger. On one occasion, when about 18, the village boys thought they would have a little sport at "three arms" expense and commenced a system of blackguardism followed by bold attacks upon his person. Forbearance ceased to be a virtue, and throwing off his loose garments he went at them in true pugilistic style, arm 3 performing his duty nobly; and apparently out living numbers 1 and 2. At the end of the skirmish, six prostrate villagers told with a force opponent they had met "Three-arms" gained a notriety, and never afterwards was persecuted on account of his deformity. At the outbreak of the rebellion he joined a New York regiment, and so distinguished himself by bravery, that he was finally promoted to captain, and ranked as the best drill officer of the regiment to which he was attached. At the close of the war he turned to the farm, and has since remained there. He is now en route for the South, to visit a sister somewhere in the interior of North Carolina. It may be a query with some how he could use his arms with the proper clothing upon his body. All his garments intended for laboring suits were so made as to open upon the back, and closed by buttoning, the same as a childs apron. He is truly a wonder. Being a man of fine conversational powers, an interview with him is especially agreeable, and he relates many pleasing anecdotes of himself with great relish.—Williamsburg Gazette.

Anecdote of Rowland Hill.

Rowland Hill was once driven by a storm of rain into a village inn, and compelled to spend the night. When it grew late, the landlord sent a request by the waiter that the guest would go to bed. Mr. Hill replied "I have been waiting a long time, expecting to be called to a family prayer." "Family prayer! I don't know what you mean, sir; we never had such things here." "Indeed! then tell your master I cannot go to bed until we have had family prayer." The waiter informed his master, who, in great consternation, bounded into the room occupied by the faithful minister, and said, "Sir, I wish you would go to bed. I cannot go till I have seen all the lights out, I am so afraid of fire." "So am I," was the reply, "but I have been expecting to be summoned to family prayer." "All very good sir, but it cannot be done at an inn." "Indeed! then pray get me my horse. I cannot sleep in a house where there is no family prayer." The host preferred to dismiss his prejudices, rather than his guest, and said: "I have no objection to have prayer; but I don't know how." "Well, then, summon your people, and let us see what can be done." The landlord obeyed, and in a few minutes the astonished domestics were upon their knees, and the landlord called upon to pray. "Sir, I never prayed in my life. I don't know how." "Ask God to teach you" was the gentle reply. The landlord said, folding his hands, "God, teach us how to pray." "That is prayer, my friend," cried Mr. Hill, joyfully; "go on." "I am sure I don't know what to say now, sir." "Yes you do; God has taught you how to pray. Now thank him for it." "Thank you God Almighty for letting us pray to you!" "Amen! Amen!" exclaimed Mr. Hill, and prayed himself. Two years afterwards, Mr. Hill found in that village a chapel and a school, as the result of the first effort of family prayer at the "Black Lion"

Our Master.

Who knows not the beautiful group of babe and mother, sacred in nature, now sacred also in the religious associations of half the globe? Welcome to the parents is the puny struggler, strong in his weakness, his little arms more irresistible than the soldiers, his lips touched with persuasion which Chatham and Pericles in manhood had not. The small despot asks so little that all nature and reason are on his side. His ignorance is more charming than all knowledge, and his little sins more bewitching than any virtue. All day between his three and four sleepers, he coos like a pigeon-house, sputters and sporns, and puts on his faces of importance; and when he fasts, the little Pharisee fails not to sound his trumph before him. Out of blocks, thread spools, cards and chequers, he will build his pyramid with the gravity of Palladio. With an acoustic apparatus of whistle and rattle he explores the laws of sound. But chiefly, like his senior countrymen, the young American studies new and speedier modes of trasportation. Mistrusting the cunning of his small legs, he wishes to ride on the necks and shoulders of all flesh. The small enchanter nothing can withstand—so seniority of age, no gravity of character; nuiess, aunts, cousins, grandsires, grandames—all fall an easy prey; he conforms to nobody, all conform to him; all caper and make mouths, and bebble and chirrup to him. On the strongest shoulders he rides, and pulls the hair of lauretled heads.—Emerson.

A Desperate Fight in Nevada.

The latest advices from the headquarters of the Kern River, where the fight between Charles Jones, the escaped convict from the Nevada State Prison and Francis S. Armistead, who was pursuing him, occurred, confirm all the particulars at first received. Armistead was one of the foremost in the capture of Roberts, Morton and Black. He found the track of Charley Jones about 50 miles from the head of long Valley, on the San Joaquin River, and trailed him to Slawson's sheep camp in Visalia, where he was stopping. Armistead told that he wanted to engage a man to drive horses to Arizona. Jones hired to him for the trip, and thus matters rested till morning.

In the morning, Armistead told Slawson what he was after, and said he expected to have a hard time of it, for while the two men were talking he went to the house, took Slawson's Henry rifle and when he come out and said:

"Here, you d————, I know your business. You want to take me back to Nevada: but I will die first."

With these words he drew up and fired at Armistead. The fire was instantly returned, the shot taking effect in Jone's breast. The fight now began in dead earnest, and both men being armed with Henry rifles, it was fearful. There was almost a constant stream of fire, and it seemed that nearly every shot took effect. The men were about thirty steps apart. Jones giving away and Armistead followed him up till he fell from loss of blood. Jones then rushed upon him, but Armistead raised his gun again and fired shooting Jones through the head and killing him instantly,

Armistead had fired fifteen shots, hitting his mark twelve times, while Jones had fired eleven shots, nine of which took effect, in the body of Armistead, and either of the wounds would probably have proved fatal

Armistead lived about two hours after the fight. He was perfectly cool, and said that if he had killed Jones he was willing to die. He requested Slawson to write an account of the fight. When he first fell he spoke of Aunt Sallie and Charley. His last words were; "Tell her I love." The fight is considered the most desperate on record.

The field of Bannockburn was formerly pointed out to visitors by a nailer who resided on the spot. An English gentleman, much pleased with his intelligent description, offered him half a crown. "Pit it back, sir?" said the nailer, "your countrymen have paid dearly enough for seeing Bannockburn"

Things W[illegible]

PERSONS [illegible] winter should plunge their hands in water for a few minutes upon rising, then wipe dry, rubbing vigorously. At night, hold your feet to the fire for ten minutes.

WARTS.—Wet the warts on the hands a few times with black ink and see if they will not disappear.

HORSES.—Sneezing is a splendid thing for a heavy horse. For a colic give him one to three drams of the oil of anise. It is said that a cabbage leaf given to a horse will greatly relieve him of the staggers

A FELON.—When the pricking painful sensation of a felon begins to be felt put on spirits of turpentine plentifully, heating it so. A few applications will generally effect a cure.

CASTOR OIL.—Rub up to drops of the oil cinnamon with an ounce of glycerine and add to it an ounce of castor oil. It will effectually disguise the unpleasant taste of the medicine and not its virtue as a medicine.

An experienced housekeeper says that the best thing for cleaning tinware is common soda. She gives the following directions: "Dampen a cloth, and dip in soda, and rub the ware briskly; after which wipe dry. Any blackened ware can be made to look as well as new.

REMEDY FOR WORMS IN HORSES.—Put a handful of sifted wood ashes in a quart bottle, and fill the bottle with cider vinegar. It will form like a glass of soda and it should be given to the horse that has worms the moment it foams. Two bottles will cure the worst attack of worms. For forty years I have not known an instance of failure were the remedy was applied as over.

HAM TOAST.—Chop some ham (which has been previously dressed) very small, and to a large tablespoonful of it, add an egg well beaten, a small bit of butter, and a little cream. Mix together over the fire till quite hot. Have ready some neatly cut pieces of bread, about the size of a crown piece but a little thicker, fried in good butter, spread the mixture on those, and serve them on a napkin.

BLACK COPYING INK, OR WRITING FLUID.—Take 2 gallons of rain water, and put in gum arabac ½ lb., brown sugar ½ lb., mix and shake occasionally for ten days, and strain; it needed stronger, let it stand in an iron kettle until the strength is obtained. This ink will stand the action of centuries if required.

A French chemist asserts that if tea be ground like coffee before hot water is poured upon it, it will yield nearly double the amount of its exhilarating qualities.—Another writer says:—"If you put a piece of lump sugar, about the size of a walnut, into the teapot, you will make the tea in fuse in half the time.' Persons who have tried this last experiment say that the result is satisfactory.

CHARLOTTE RUSSE.—Place a pan containing one cup of boiling water on the fire, and dissolve in it one ounce of isinglass or gelatine; let it simmer until it is reduced one half; sweeten and flavor with vanilla one and a half cups of sweet milk, and add to the above; let it boil slowly for ten minutes; add the beaten yolks of four eggs, and let it thicken; lastly add one quart of sweet cream beaten up with the white of four eggs; let it cool; line the bottom and side of a deep glass dish with sponge cake, and pour the russe over it. Make it at six o'clock in the morning if wanted for tea.

JELLY FOR MEATS.—Put to boil four calves feet, two onions, one dozen cloves, pepper corns, one tablespoonful of salt, two nice carrots, and a head of celery, in six quarts of water; boil six hours.—Strain this into an earthern pot to cool. When wanted take off the fat, put the rest into a preserve kettle, with two lemons cut up, and the whites and shells of six eggs; let it boil fifteen or twenty minutes. Take it from the fire, set where it will keep hot, turn in a cup of cold water, let it stand fifteen minutes, then strain it through the jelly bag; when it has all run through clean, put what you require in the mould; let the rest cool in a dish to cut small for garnishing the meat. If the jelly is not of a good bright colour, add a tablespoonful of Indiasoy.

Meat for Fowls in Winter.

Nature has provided for wild birds an abundance of easy digested food at the time they need it most, for when nesting, at the begining of warm weather, the army of insects that keep pace with the new vegetation supplies every element needed in the formation of eggs. As hens whether wild or domesticated, are no exceptions to the general law, their laying depends very much upon the amount of animal food they eat, and when the ground is frozen, or when they are kept shut up either in summer or winter, they must be given butcher's meat of some kind, Calves' plucks and the plucks of sheep and lambs, with the heart and livers attached, are the best for the purpose. The mode of preparation is important. We have seen such things thrown whole and uncooked into the poultry yard, but there is much waste because the firmer tissues cannot be pecked to pieces so as to be swallowed by the fowls, and cats, dogs, and rats prey upon what is left over night, besides raw meat makes hens quarrelsome among themselves. A proper way is to boil until tender, and run through a sausage machine and the absence of bones facilitates the later operation, on which account we do not procure beeves' he ads when the plucks are to be had. It not convenient to use a mincing machine, then take for a small quantity of meat an ordinary chopping knife and wooden bowl, or for larger operations, a box, such as is used in mixing cut feed for horses, and a good steel blade ground to a keen edge. After chopping, add to the mass the liquor in which it was boiled, thickened with meal, and seasoned with cayenne and salt, and feed warm. If it is too much trouble to provide for your fowls in winter an equivalent insect forage, then give only grain; but expect to procure your eggs of somebody else who makes an artificial summer for his poultry as to diet, and, as far as possible, temperature also.

LABOR.—"Labour," says the Rev. Newman Hall, "as a mighty magician, walks forth into a region unhabited and waste; he looks earnestly on the scene, so quiet in his desolation; then waving his wonder-working wand, those dreary vallies smile with golden harvests—those barren mountains slopes are clothed with foliage—the furnace blazes—the anvil rings—the busy wheels whirl round—the town appears—the mart of commerce, the hall of science, the temple of religion rear high their lofty fronts—a forest of masts, gay with varied pennons, rises from the harbor—the quays are cowded with commercial spoils, the peaceful spoils which enrich both him who receives and him who yields—representatives of far of regions makes it their resort science enlists the elements of earth and and heaven in its service—art, awaking, clothes it strength with beauty—literature, new born, redoubles and perpetuates its praise,—civilization smiles—liberty is glad—humanity rejoices—piety exults, for the voice of industry and gladness is heard on every hand; and who contemplating such results, will deny that there is dignity in labour.

CUSTOMS COLLECTOR OUTWITTED.—A few years ago a butcher of Caen bought a calf of a cattle-jobber in the environs. Half a gallon of cider was to clench the bargain, and the butcher joconely observed, in conversation among other things, that he meant to smuggle the calf into town in broad daylight, and to pass the octroi, or custom barrier, publicly without paying. The cattle-dealer declared this to be impossible, and a wager was accordingly laid between him and the butcher, who merly made his condition, that the dealer should lead him his dog for half an hour. He put the dog into a large sack, which he threw over his shoulder, and away he trudged to the city. On reaching the octroi he declared he had nothing to pay, as there was only a dog in the sack, which he had just bought and shut up that he might not find his way to his former master. The officers of the octroi would not take this story on trust, but insisted on seeing the dog. The butcher was therefore obliged to open his sack, and the dog naturally availed himself of the opportunity to run away. Off scampered the butcher after him, scolding and swearing all the way. In a quarter of an hour he was again at the octroi with a sack on his shoulder as before. "You have given me a pretty chase," he said, pavviably walking through. Next day he invited the officers to partake of the veal cutlet, to which, having won the wager, he treated them and the cattle-dealer.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. In varieties of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, many have been entirely cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous constitution and they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in the most severe cases, by this powerful antidote. Even those apparently beyond the reach of medicine, where the system seemed literally poisoned with the virus of scrofula, have been restored to health and soundness. Other, this nauseous and unfelt agent of loathsomeness undermines the constitution, and invites the assault of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed in the blood throughout the body, and there, as humor, or in [illegible] ulcers, or [illegible] into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, its presence may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcers fastened on some part of the body. Where the accepted cure of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is not available, even whenused after years of other treatment, appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Ulcerous, Old Sores, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Diseases, Pits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various grievous affections of the mercurial and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Obstructions, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great remover for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Irresolute, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glow and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Don't Let Mother Do It.

Daughter, don't let mother do it,
Do not let her slave and toil,
While you sit a useless idler,
Fearing your soft hands to soil.
Don't you see the heavy burdens
Daily she is wont to bear,
Bring the locks upon her forehead—
Sprinkle silver in her hair?

Daughter, don't let mother do it,
Do not let her bake and broil
Through the long bright summer hours
Steam with her the heavy toil;
See her eye has lost its brightness,
Faded from her cheek the glow,
And the step that once was buoyant,
Now is feeble, weak and slow.

Daughter, don't let mother do it;
She has cared for you so long;
Is it right the weak and feeble
Should be toiling for the strong?
Waken from your listless languor,
Seek her side to cheer and bless,
And your grief will be less bitter
When the sods above her press.

Daughter, don't let mother do it,
You will never, never know
What was home without a mother
'Till that mother lieth low—
Low beneath the budding daisies,
Free from earthly care or pain
To the home so sad without her,
Never to return again.

An Historical Night In The Old Canadian Parliament

BY S. J. WATSON.

In the Canadian Monthly.

At three o'clock, on the afternoon of Wednesday, June the 15th, 1864, Mr. Wallbridge, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada, took the chair. Before he declared the sitting of that day to be closed, an event took place which delivered the deathblow to the system of Government under which that Legislative Assembly was authorized to exist as representing the people of the provinces of Upper & Lower Canada. The weather that afternoon was warm even for the City of Quebec. The rock, on which the Parliament House stood, was hot to the touch; the sky above was without a cloud to break the eye-paining monotony of its burning blue; the streets were airless and sultry and on the great river there was scarcely a breath of breeze to entice a ripple into play. The sultriness outside could be borne; inside the Parliament House, the sense of heat was almost overpowering. But, in spite of the oppressive atmosphere, the great majority of the members were in their places; for the current of politics at that time was turbulent. The opposing parties were almost equally balanced; and in case of battle it was difficult to guess the result.

As soon as the preliminary outline business was finished, the Hon. A. T. Galt at that time the Minister of Finance, rose to move that the Speaker should leave the chair, in order that the House might go into Committee of Supply. This proposition at once brought to his feet the Hon. A. A. Dorion, one of the leaders of the Lower Canadian Opposition. He stated that during the last night on which the Committee of Supply sat, some curious revelations were made concerning a sum of one hundred thousand dollars advanced by the Province in 1859 to redeem bonds of the City of Montreal, but, in reality given to the Grand Trunk Railway Company. The Financial Commission (a Committee of Investigation appointed by Parliament), had elicited the particulars of this transaction, but on account of the manner in which the liability had been transferred from one account to another, no opportunity had been afforded of bringing the whole matter before the representatives of the people. He argued that the provinces was in serious danger of losing this sum, unless instant measures were taken to recover the money from those on whom the responsibility should be placed. He informed the House that in the year 1859, the City of Montreal had issued, to the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railway Company, bonds to the amount of $100,000. Owing, however to an arrangement between the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Railway and the Grand Trunk the latter corporation assumed the task of paying the bonds.—It failed in its engagement, and the Province redeemed them out of its own exchequer. This payment had for its sole authority an Order in Council, had for its foundation a report of the then Finance Minister—the Hon. Mr. Galt. This report recommended that the bonds should be redeamed by the Province, and should be held by the Receiver-General until Montreal should make good its indebtness to the Municipal Loan Fund. In the month of September following the issue of the bonds by the City of Montreal, although the city had only fulfilled its obligations as to the Loan Fund indebtedness, the bonds which the Government were bound to retain, untill its advance was repaid, were handed over by the Receiver-General to the Treasurer of the City of Montreal. In December, 1859 the Hon. Mr. Galt, being in England, wrote to one of the officers of his department, stating that the financial agents of the province had acceded to his desire to charge the Province with the sum of $100,000. After this time, the sum was not mentioned in the communications of the financial agents. Further, no action was taken by Hon. Mr. Galt, up to the time when the Ministry with which he was connected, resigned their seats, May, 1862, to put this matter right. But in the December of 1862, Mr. Galt's successor, Hon. Mr. Howland, the present Lieu-Governor of Ontario, finding that the accouts of the Provincial agents did not agree with those in the Receiver-General's office, called the attention of the financial agents to the fact. They answered, stating that they knew nothing of the transaction. In his evidence before the Financial Commission, Hon. Mr. Galt stated that he had made the arrangement, previously referred to, when in England, and that Mr. Baring—one of the financial agents—and Mr. Blackwell, Managing Director of the Grand Trunk, were present. The Hon. Mr. Helton, who was Finance Minister, at the time the Financial Commission was in session, transmitted to Baring and Glyn, a copy of the evidence given by the Hon. Mr. Galt. They replied that no member of their firm had any recollection of authorising the payment in question. They further added that as Hon. Mr. Galt was very methodical in conducting all business matters with them, they had no doubt that had there been any such agreement as was alleged, it would have been reduced to writing. Mr. Dorion observed, in conclusion, that the question now was whether the Province should lose the $100,000; and it had also to be decided upon whom the liability rested, and what steps should be taken in order to recover the money. He laid particular stress on the fact that the money had been given away without the authority of Parliament, and finished by moving an amendment to the effect that the Speaker should not leave the chair.

This amendment was seconded by Hon. Wm. McDougall. The seconder sat, of course, on the Opposition benches. He was regarded by the House as a good debater, and as an aspirant for political fame, there were few of his compeers who seemed destined for much higher sucess. The Reform party regarded him as a man who in the future, might win way to one of the grades of leadership. And the Government side feared his facility of declamation and rapididy of attack—even though one of the members of the Administration, Hon. T. D. Mckee, not very long before, had styled him, in the course of a caustic speech, "one of the most overrated men in the house." On this occasion, Hon. Mr. McDougall did not make a speech; but merely contented himself with seconding the motion.

The Government, though taken by surprise, at once saw the full scope of the amendment; and accepted it as a resolution of want of confidence. And so the debate began, and continued all that sultry afternoon. The discussion was dry by nature. There was no opportunity for brilliant speech-making; for Demosthenes himself could not wax eloquent over the multiplication table. Very few of the best speeches are ever heard in Parliament during the proxy interval that comes between three and six o'clock. Sunshine and eloquence seem, in our age to be antagonistic to each other. One might as well try to make Hamlet and his fortunes appear to advantage on a stage without gaslight as to evoke eloquence out of Parliament ary speakers before the evening lamps are burning. Hamlet must have the footlights blazing, and the back-ground in shadow, before he can "sport his suit of stables."

Though well acquainted with the modes of Canadian Parliamentary warfare, and having had his full share of experience in receiving and delivered assults, Hon, Mr. Galt addressed the House with more than ordinary manifestation of feeling. In the first portion of his remarks, he boldly took up the gauntlet that had been flung at his feet. He said that, from the manner in which the motion had been brought, it might be judged that the intention was anything but friendly; and he would meet the intention in a like spirit. The mover of the motion had spoken as if a discrepancy between the accounts of the Financial agents and the accounts of the Province, had been first discovered by Hon. Mr. Howland in September 1862. But this was not correct; as he (Mr. Galt) had stated in his evidence before the Financial Commission, the information as to this discrepancy had reached him a few days before he left office. On learning it, he requested the Auditor-General Mr. Langton, to draw the attention of his (Mr. Galt's) successor to the matter, as it was a thing that required immediate action. He regretted deeply that any misunderstanding should have arisen whith reference to what took place in London between the Financial Agents and himself. If the motion were carried, how would it affect the Government? He asked the House if it supposed that an attack on one member of the government would affect them all? If he were the objectionable individual in the government, he would call upon his opponents to take the manly ground and declair that his presence made the Ministry unbesirable to the House and to the country.

Hon. Mr. Holton then took the floor. His long Parliamentary practice enabled him to perceive that what had at first appeared to promise nothing but a skirmish, was about to develope into a pitched battle; and he knew well how to accelerate that result. He began his remarks by denying that the motion of his friend, Mr. Dorion, was in the nature of a personal attack. But he (Mr. Holton) would ask the House, nevertheless, to pronounce its condemnation on the Ministerial act of Mr. Galt, when that gentleman was formerly in office. Mr. Galt in order to defend himself, had made a charge of dilatoriness against his successor, Mr Howland. This charge implied laxity with regard to this whole transaction; and afforded ample justification for the motion. In respect to Mr. Galt's complaint, that the act of a Government should be converted into an attack upon the present Government, he (Mr. Holton) held that the present one was, in every respect, merely a resuscitation of the Cartier-Macdonald Coalition. Mr. Holton proceeded to say that this was the first time, since the facts were ascertained, that the matter could be brought before the the House. The transaction did not appear in the Public Accounts of '59 '60 and '61; its true character lay concealed until the Financial Commission had commenced their labours.

Hon Mr. Howland next addressed the House. He could always, on such occasions, plead with full justification the excuse of Marc Antony—as to his being no orator. He was barely audible in the back benches; in the public galleries, his utterances were only heard in broken whispers. Still it was necessary that he should meet the charge of negligence implied in the speech of the ex-Finance Minister. Mr. Howland assured the House that Mr. Galt's charge that he (Mr. Howland) had not acted with sufficient promptness in ascertaining all about the $100,000, was unfounded. He then proceeded to show that, as soon as the matter came under his notice, he prosecuted inquiries with the utmost diligence. He asserted that the of dilatoriness came with bad grace from Mr. Gal; who, from the 1859 to 1862, when he left office, was not aware of the discrepancy between the books of the Province and those of the Provincial Agents, with reference to an item so large as $100,000. It was unfair in Mr. Galt to cansil his successor for not having collected the money, when he (Mr. Galt) had left no evidence against the parties who were liable to pay it. He remarked that the City of Montreal, for which the payment was made, was well able to pay it; yet the Government had released that city from its responsibilities. The only other party from whom the Grand Trunk could be held responsible was Mr. Galt himself. He (Mr. Howland) would not say that Mr. Galt was under the influence of liquor when he left office, but he was not in a condition to transact business. He (Mr. Howland) had been informed that Mr. Galt had been drinking for three days before he left office. He (Mr. Howland) would not say that Mr. Galt was drunk, but he was not in a condition to transact business. He (Mr. Howland) had been informed that Mr. Galt had been drinking for three days before he left office. He (Mr. Howland) would not say that Mr. Galt was drunk, but he was not in a condition to transact business.

The House had scarcely risen for recess when it was known over the city that a motion of want of confidence in the Government was under consideration. Half past seven arrived, and the public galleries are filled to overflowing. The members are in their places. Most of them wear an air of seriousness; the banter and jocularity, which usually prevail before the Speaker enters the House, are not apparent to-night. There seems to be general presentiment that the vote will lead either to a "deadlock" or a dissolution of Parliament.

While the Speaker is yet absent, let us see who are the principal personages in the House. Sitting behind the first desk, on the front row at the right hand of of the Speaker's chair, is the Hon. John A. Macdonald, the leader of the House. His face always mobile, is if taken for a mirror of what he experiences to-night, an index of something more serious than usual. His action is partly nervous and partly constrained. He is not engaged, as is his wont, in chatting with his colleague, the Hon. G. E. Cartier. There is no member in the House more capable of concealing behind a careless exterior the responsibilities of government than is the Hon. John A. Macdoald; but to-night he looks grave; his face is pale, and its expression anxious. He keeps darting rapid glances over the House; and, at intervals of seconds, looks nervously towards the door through which the Speaker will enter.

To the right of the Hon John A. Macdonald sits the Hon. George E. Cartier. As regards the number of his followers, he is the strongest man in the House. On other occasions he seems to know it; but to-night he is not in his usual merry and conversational mood. He has a face indicative of power, and one looking at it, even in its repose, can see that it is expressive of purpose and strength of will. There is little about it to connect it with the faces of Southern France; it has neither their fulness nor their weakness. It is a Breton, square-formed physiognomy, an excellent type of that hard-headed Northern French sea-faring race which first colonised Canada—a race akin to our own, not only through origin, but also through love of adventure and stubborn tenacity of purpose. The Hon. Mr. Cartier does not seem at ease. The resolutenss of look which always marks him is changed to anxiety. His manner, however, is not so nervous as that of his colleague. Instead of turning himself in his chair to see how his supporters muster in the back benches, he rests with his arms on his desk, and remains gazing fixedly accross the House at the seats occupied by the leaders of the Opposition.

Hon. A. T. Galt sits to the right of the Hon. Mr. Cartier. In the Legislative Assembly there is no face to be compared with his for wearing a perpetual smile; but, to-night, it is evident that he considers himself deeply aggreived personaly by the motion now under discussion, and his looks are clouded. He has numerous sympathizers amongst his friends on the Government benches. He appears to be aware that the political fate of his colleagues depends upon his own. He evidently intends to deal his heaviest blows before the vote is taken. He is a fluent speaker, and in the gift of language the equal of most debaters.

Beside Hon. Mr. Galt sits Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee. His strongly marked features are lit up with the excitement of the coming battle. He leans back in his chair, gazing up at the ceiling, and seems unconscious of the crowded galleries, and inattentive to the conversation going on around him. He is expected to speak to-night; for he is the oratorical bulwark of his party. In quickness of reply, in impromptu discussion, in dexterity in the lesser combats of his Parliament, his own leader, Hon. John A. Macdonald, is his superior; so also is the Hon. A. T. Galt. The same may be said if he is put in comparison with the Hon. Geo. Brown or the Hon. Mr. Holton, both of whom are masters of all the tactics by which an Opposition is allowed, by rules of Parliament, to defend itself against the power of a majority. But the Hon. Mr. McGee, in a set speech, where he is not obliged to enter into details, or to weigh down the wings of his imagination with the burden of statistics, need fear no man in Parliament or out of it. He is master of four weapons of an orator—memory, fancy, humour, sarcasm. He is always pleasant to hear; his voice is well managed, and ever under his control. In a debate suited to the range of his powers, which are better displayed in generalizing than in analyzing, the subject fairly absorbs the orator, and possesses him as the god was wont to possess the Pythoness.

On the first seat, in the front row to the left of the Speaker, sits the Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald. He is the oldest member of the Legislative Assembly. Every visitor is familiar with his face and manner. He sits bolt upright in his chair, talking with apparent unconcern to those around him; but it is evident the unconcern is only assumed. Little in the House escapes the glance of that watchful Highland eye. His face is relaxed almost to a smile; but there is an amount of firmness about the mouth which indicates that he is prepared to utter that monosyllable,—the salvation of a tempted politician as well as of a tempted woman—the word "No."

To the left of the Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald, sits his former colleagues in the Government—Hon. A. A. Dorion, the mover of the amendment. He is an object of a great deal of attention to-night, but he appears not to notice it. His speech will be one of those supremely confident, yet apparently careless efforts, by which he knows how to impress a House. Hon. A. T. Galt, however, does not choose to challenge him. He has this advantage over the Finance Minister, that he is master of both languages; for he uses the English tongue with a precision and fluency to which no other French Canadian member of the House can lay claim.

Beside the Hon. Mr. Dorion sits the Hon. L. H. Holton, Finance Minister during the latter part of the Administration of Hon. John S. Macdonald and Hon. Mr. Dorion. Hon. Mr. Holton is calm as usual. His face, massive and intelectual, wears a look of profound repose. His style is brief and practical—every sentence well poised, straight as an arrow in its directness, rounded and resonant, compact and logical.

Near the Hon. Mr. Holton sits the Hon. Geo. Brown. In the House, or in the whole country, there is not a man better versed in the intricasies of the political puzzle of the times—the Canadian finances. He has a talent for figures, and an eye not to be cheated even in the smallest and best concealed expenditures. He is expected to make a speech to-night, and, if so, the Finance Minister will meet his match, for the chieftain of the Upper Canada Liberals is a speaker of uncommon power.

In close proximity to the Hon. Geo. Brown, sits Mr. Allexander Mackenzie. He has given proofs of ability, is characterized by great industry and has that faculty, as valuable in politics as Napoleon the First found it to be in war—the faculty of taking into account the most minute matters of detail. He speaks frequently, and what he says is trenchant and well-argued.

The clock indicates that it is a quarter to eight, and in a few moments more the Sergeant-at-Arms, bearing the mace, enters, followed by the Speaker. The debate is resumed, and waxes warm. Hon. Mr Cartier rises and addresses the House in the French language. He speaks vigorously. He charges his opponents with personal motives in moving and seconding the motion; and argues that the Finance minister is not to be held accountable for any result arising from the granting of the $100,000.

Mr. Denis follows the last speaker, and also use the French language. He is heard with impatience, for he merely re-echoes the argument of his leader.

After the last Speaker sat down, Mr. Chistopher Dunkin rose. His status in the House is peculiar. He is known to be a man of considerable logical ability, ingenious in argument and not commensurate with his experience in public life. He is a rapid and untiring talker; but he seems to feel that the motion may lead to a crisis, and that he owes it to his position as an Independent member to speak briefly and to the point. He began by expressing regret that the motion should have been brought forward. Then he proceeded to state that the facts had shown a very lax administration of the Finance Department; when, for so long a period the Finance Minister had allowed the liability of the Province for $100,000 to remain without a scrap of paper to bind the parties, while the accounts of these parties showed that they did not admit the debt. He also commented on the circumstance that Parliament had been kept in the dark about this matter. He finished by saying that when unmistakeable facts like those were brought under the notice of Parliament, he could not refuse to say that such an advance of money, and such a concealment of facts, were not in accordance with our system of responsible Government. This speech, though not remarkable for any political boldness, was one of the events of the night. As has been already stated, the two parties were almost equally balanced. During the time that had elapsed since the motion of the Hon. Mr. Dorion was made there had been opportunity for ascertaining with almost certainty how the vote of each member of the House would go. It was whispered about the corridors and committee rooms, that the defeat or success of the motion would depend on the vote of Mr. Dunkin. Up to the moment he began to speak, it was not known on which side his vote would be given. The speech settled the matter. He would vote against the Government. In view of the anticipation that the Government would be defeated, the interest in the debate grew deeper.

Mr. Isaac Buchanan, a well-known member of the House, rose to oppose the motion. Mr. Buchanan was always heard with attention. He admitted that the Government had redeamed the bonds of the City of Montreal; but that city in return, had paid its indebtedness to the Municipal Loan Fund, which was not done in any other instance.

Hon. Mr. McGee followed Mr. Buchanan. But the occasion was not one of those on which he could best display his gifts of oratory; for in such a debate as the one now engaging the attention of the Assembly, there was no room for imagination, or figures of rhetoric. He began by saying that the motion was hostile to Montreal, and that the accusers of that city were those whom it had rejected. He failed to see that, in the transaction before the House, there was any ground for condemnation. He thought it was unmanly to make an attack on one member of the Government on account of a matter that took place five years ago, during the existence of another Government. He informed the House, that although the assault was specially directed against one member yet all the members of the Government would feel bound to stand by him; and, throughout this controversy, make the case their own. Whatever the decision of the House might be, he had no doubt that the verdict of the intelligent public opinion of the country would be that the present motion was both frivolous and vexatious.

The debate went on, and the wave of speech swelled, and now and then threatened to break into the bitter spray of personality. The hour was growing late, but the debate showed no signs of coming to a speedy conclusion. Mr. Cameron, a friend of the Government, sought to neutralize, by an amendment, the motion of Hon. Mr. Dorion.

The Hon. George Brown, here raised a question of order. It was to the effect that an amendment to an amendment to go into committee of supply, could not be received. The Speaker decided in favour of the objection raised by the Hon. Geo. Brown. The motion of Mr. Dorion was opposed by the Hon. John Rose, a speaker who always won upon the House by his suavity and good temper. Mr. Rose—now Sir John Rose—was a Conservative in politics, and as such had held office. But he was not now in the Ministry. He was a fluent speaker, and his good temper often served him in cases where argument would have been demanded of other men. He rose to oppose the motion of Mr. Dorion. He styled it unfair and unnecessary, and argued that it was wrong to endeavour to fix responsibility on Mr. Galt.

After some remarks from Messrs. Rankin and Street, the Hon. John A. Macdonald rose. He is a master of the art of escaping the feelings of his audience when speech had it in power to produce a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MUSIC:—The Board of Public School Trustees have engaged Miss McCarroll as Music Teacher in connection with the Union School. Miss McCarroll is a superior teacher, and the terms on which she is engaged will enable pupils attending the school to obtain lessons in music on very favorable terms, without interfering with other studies, and we trust that parents and guardians will avail themselves of the opportunity so favorably offered. The music, we believe, will be $5.00 per quarter, and all lessons will be in the order of the application of the pupils.

The committee appointed by the County Council to consider the appeal of certain ratepayers in Smith, against a By-law of that Council, we are informed have no power to act in the matter. The By-law, however, is a dead letter at present.

CORRECTION:—In a communication from Keene, giving an account of a presentation of a "pulpit gown" to the Rev. Mr. Andrews, an error crept in representing Miss. F. Wood as getting up the gown, whereas it was got up by Mr. Fairweather of this Town. The compositor had some little difficulty in reading the copy.

The Joseph Hall Works Company, Oshawa, have increased their capital stock from $300,000 to $400,000, the whole being taken up the present stock holders. It is said that the Company has on contract machinery worth $100,000.

Oshawa is to have a Straw Hat Manufactory, the Village Council granting a Bonus of $5000 to the Company. The assessed value of property in Oshawa last year was $505,170.

At a social held in Lindsay last week $500 were realized towards erecting a Manse in connection with the Baptist Church. Rev. John Cameron, formerly of Peterboro, is now pastor of that church in Lindsay.

A NEW CONSERVATIVE PAPER.—The Mail is to be started in Toronto. John A. McDonald being one of a number who have undertaken to supply the necessary funds. The Conservative leaders are somewhat confident that the Mail will supplant both the Telegraph and the Leaner, and hence become the only organ of the party and opponent of the Globe. They need not go to so much trouble for the Globe will remain the best paper in the Dominion.

PRESENTATION:—The Vindicator informs us that the Rev. Mr. Thomb, of the Canada Presbyterian Church, Enniskillen. preaches monthly in the house of Mr. W. Lesah, Darlington. On Friday evening last he was surprised at the conclusion of one of these services by the presentation of a purse of $36. Such manifestations of a good will and esteem speak very highly for both preacher and congregation.

NEW LAW FIRM:—We invite the attention of those seeking legal redress to the card of Messrs, Bloecker & Dixon, Barristers, &c., in another column. The members of the new firm are gentlemen of ability and integrity, and will, no doubt, give their best attention to all matters put in their hands. We wish them success.

The Gas on Monday evening in the Music Hall was out done by the stronger influence of the gaseous effusions of the speakers. It was—it was—trying to set to music: twinkle, twinkle, little star.

Electricity has achieved a new triumph. Already employed to restore vigor and nimbleness to the gouty limbs of decrepit bons vivants, the recent discoveries of Dr. Bernier, a French physician, show electricity to be an efficient remedy for the evil effects of excessive drinking on the human nose. The doctor maintains that by the application of an electric current to noses even of the most Bacchanalian hue, the flesh may be made "to come again as the flesh of a little child;" and he supports his assertion by a case performed on a female patient of his own, a woman of high rank. Some of those with blooming noses should call at the Telegraph Office and try the effect of a shock on the extremity of their nasal organs.

A Magistrate wanted on the Burleigh Road. We do not mean that the people there at all worse than other people, but it is too bad when any dispute arises that the people have to come all the way to Peterboro. Yesterday, a case for selling liquor without license on that road, was tried before Mr. Edwards, the parties to which had to come about 40 miles: too bad.

PERSONAL.—From the many kind inquiries about Masters Robert and James C. Roger, sons of the Rev. J. M. Roger, it has been thought best to give an extract or two from some of their letters. "We arrived here safe and sound yesterday, Dec. 15th, after a most pleasant and prosperous voyage of 36 days, having sailed from San Francisco on the 9th of Nov. We had a very pleasant day at Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, we called on one of our fellow passengers, who lived two miles out of town, as soon as we reached there Mrs. A——gave us each a plate of most delicious straw berries and cream, which, I assure you, were welcome after our ships' fare. We had a very good passage from Honolulu to Auckland, New Zealand, where we arrived on the 8th Dec., we also touched at the Navigators, or Samoan Islands."

Mr. R. C. Hill wishes us to say that a large pair of "fur gloves" were left at the hall on Tuesday evening, and that the owner can have them by applying to him.

NO GRIT NEED APPLY:—Would you be surprised to find that no Reformer need apply for employment in the Review Office.

MARKET SALE.—The Market Stalls will be leased by tender on the 2nd instant. Mr. Gough who has been Market Clerk for the last two years will in all probability succeed for another year. He is courteous and agreable, and during the time that he has been Clerk, there has been no fault found with him by any person of which we have heard.

THE BOBCAYGEON ROAD BLANKETS.—Inasmuch as a return has been made of the above blankets, it is due to the parties concerned to say, that it has been made. On the 7th of September, 1871, the return was made to the Crown Lands Department, showing articles sold and return of sales as follows: basins $2, spoons 68c, 2 knives 50c, 20 forks 15c, hammer 25c, 8 bake kettles $8, 5 teapots 50c, 2 large teapots 75c, 5 crow bars $7.50, 5 pots $5, 6 knives 75c, 6 small hammers $1, 5 large do. $5, 1 adze $1, tin pail 25c, 3 kettles 25c, 7 picks $5, 5 small augers $1.50, 2 hand-screws $1.50, 3 drills 75c, 4 bushel beans $4.50, 26 bags $5.20, knives, forks, and crocks 75c, 70 tin plates $2.10, plough $8, broken ploughs $9, 8 wheel barrows $13.50, 4 scrapers $26, 2 good stoves $20, sundries $7, 65 pair blankets $102.60, tallow $1.50; Total $224.25. At that time or previous to it, there was a claim against the Government of $182.95. The articles sold would therefore do a little more than pay that balance. The blankets, tools and implements, cost $ but of course would not sell for so much. We understand that Mr, Curry, from whom much of tge goods was purchased, bought them back so as to prevent loss to the Government.

Forest Ranger.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams has been appointed Forest Ranger in place of Mr. John Roger. Mr. McWilliams having a more extensive section of country, and having Mr. D. Rose, L. S. Soper and Mr. Geo. Bick as assistants, Mr. H. S. Strickland had received an appointment from Mr. Way, but resigned it shortly afterwards. Mr Rose and Mr. Strickland both had been assisting Mr. Rogers last year, but very few were aware of it. The appointment of Mr. McWilliams is a good one, and one that will ensure satisfactory returns. The great evil to contend with in regard to obtaining correct returns arises out of small jobbers who strip lots, and make doubtful returns, and thus cheat the Government. Respectable Lumbermen are rarely guilty of this, and then only by mistake. Papers have been shown us where a Jobber took 2000 logs of a lot and returned 600, for which about $76.00 dues were paid, including trespass dues, but the other 2900 logs were never returned, thus cheating the Government out of about $250. This was reported, but no definite action was taken by the officials. We may safely conclude this class of trangressions will now cease.

The following is a part of his instructions:—

I have to advise you that your are appointed to take charge of the Wood Ranging in the agency of Joseph F. Way, with full authority to give instructions and to supervise the other Rangers employed in the agency, viz:—S. L. Soper, H. T. Strickland and David Rose. You will assign to each of these the Townships which you may consider it expedient they should examine, reserving for yourself such portion of the territory as you may think proper for your own personal examination.

Signed,
R. W. SCOTT.

Mr. Strickland has resigned, and George Bick has been appointed, not instead, but on the Bobcaygeon road. Mr. Rose being moven eastward.

During the contest on the railway Bylaw the Town was represented hoplessly in debt. Taxes going up at a reckless rate. The $80,000 was going to double the taxes nearly, and earnest (?) entreaties were urged to save the Town from ruin. The same persons anxious to carry the By-law on Monday had a paper for effect from which we copy the following:—

TOWN DEBT.

Total amount of indebtedness	$11,460

Of course this does not include the indebtedness to the Municipal Loan Fund of $132)182.56, which it is not expected to have to pay.

A few weeks ago, the Town hopelessly in debt, now the whole debt is $11,460. Figures or Editors must lie at this rate.

The balance due on capital Municipal Loan borrowed by different municipalities is.....$6,612,082.78

The Municipalities never expect to pay these amounts.

It is intimated that after the thanksgiving ceremonies at St. Paul's the Prince of Wales will enjoy a tour of the Italian lakes, remaining abroad a couple of months.

A Trip to Toronto by way of Lindsay.

Having had occasion to visit the Capital of Ontario lately, and finding that the Midland Railway and the Toronto and Nippissing make a connection at Woodville, we made up our mind to take that route, so as to avoid delays caused by Grand Trunk smash-ups. We arrived at the Woodville Junction, 15 miles west of Lindsay, at 1 o'clock, and from big figures on a post near the station, learned that we were 50 miles from Toronto, and hence about the same distance as if at Port Hope.

Woodville village is situated about two miles from the Junction Station. There are no houses yet at the Station, but two are in course of erection, and 'ere long, no doubt a rival village to Woodville will grow up at the Station. The present village cotains about 400 inhabitants, and is the seat of the residence of Mr. Morrison, the present M.P. for North Victoria, who at that time lay dangerously ill.

The country around Woodville is beautiful rolling land, the soil good, and the farms well improved, but travelling accommodation no better than can be obtained at Warsaw, in our own county. The new residence has a very fine appearance. He, however, is not likely to inhabit it long. The Woodville station is about two miles from the Junction and almost a mile from the Village, jealousy having prevented the railway passing through the place. At this place we got aboard the "Narrow Guage" train, which looked somewhat out of proportion to the Midland or Grand Trunk, but a few miles ride accustomed us to our neat little place, and the regularity of movement made us feel that we might expect to reach Toronto on time, at any rate. The tiny engine, low cars, cane bottomed seats are all got up on the economical style, and seem to answer their purpose very well.

The Villages of Sunderland, Uxbridge, Stouffville, Markham and Scarborough, are neat little villages on the track, especially Uxbridge, 42 miles from Toronto, and Markham a few miles nearer.

Wheat at Sunderland was worth $1.23, in Peterboro at that time it was $1.20. At Uxbridge it was only $1 15 to $1.20, while at Port Perry on the Whitby road and only seven miles distant, it was $1.25 to $1.28. At every station and all along the line, there are immense quantities of cordwood, cedar-posts and timber to be taken to the City, but speculators who have bought up the wood-land along the line, are reaping the profits largely, not the poor of Toronto.

Travellers will no doubt be anxious to learn the cost of a trip by this route, and to gratify them, we can tell them that from Peterboro to Toronto a ticket will cost $3.90, by Port Hope $3.15: but in winter, the trains on the Nipissing are sure to arrive in time, i.e. about 8 o'clock, p. m. A view of the country and a ride on the narrow guage principle, being considered worth a few extra cents.

THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

An evening or two were spent listening to debates in the Ontario Legislature, but so those not engaged in them they are dry. M. C. Cameron leader of the Opposition, H. S. McDonald, member for Leeds, Tom Ferguson of Simcoe, and Mr. Eykert, were the principal speakers on the Opposition, but they made a poor show. Mr. Ferguson is really a bore. He speaks on every subject, and to so little purpose, that one wonders that he does not get wearied listening to his own empty sound. Mr. Cameron is very pathetic some times; but so disorganised has the late Government following become, that he can never count on more than 8 to 18 followers.

H. S. McDonald is not destined to be a leader, he has not even apparent sincerity in his speeches, and it may resonably be believed that Mr. Ferguson is no better.

The Ministry is so strong and their measures so universally approved of that their work is very easy, only requiring to administer a word of rebuke now and then, to those who forget themselves in their zeal for their old party.

The member for the West Riding of Peterboro has taken a very honorable and straightforward course in the House, and in consequence has gained for himself many friends, who believe that if he continues in public life he will occupy no mean place in the history of the country.

The member for the East Riding was most obliging and kind, showed himself a gentleman, of course a quiet one, but his votes have been all right since the resignation of John Sandfield, if we except his vote on railways; and yet it was in full accord with the views of many of his supporters. He voted Blake every time, except when absent from the House.

An Old Settler Gone.

In-to-days issue we have to chronicle the decease of Mrs. Stewart, relict of the Late Hon. Thos. A. Stewart, in the 78th year of her age.

Mrs. Stewart was the second daughter of the Late Very Revd Francis Browne, Dean of Elphin, Dublin, and his wife Frances, eldest daughter of the Venerable Francis Hutchinson, Archdeacon of Down and Connor, brother of Dr. Saml. Hutchinson, Bishop of Killala, who died in 1780. Her mother was sister of the Late Revd. Mungo Waller, whose family has resided for more than two centuries at Allenstown, Co. Meath. Mrs. Stewart was born in Marlborough Street Dublin, 24th May, 1794. Her father who was Bishop Elect of Waterford died suddenly in 1796, before entering on the duties of his Episcopate. His widow who was in declining health removed with her eldest daughter to Bath, England. At that time the subject of these notes was adopted by her Grand Uncle, Robert Waller, Esq., of Allenstown, when only 2 years and 8 months old. Here many of her earliest recollections were formed, and some of the alarming events of the Irish Rebellion of 1798 were impressed on her mind. In 1801 she was taken charge of by Miss H. Beaufort, daughter of Doctor Beaufort, Rector of Collon, and sister of the Late Rear Admiral Sir Francis Beaufort. Miss Beaufort was her constant, kind instructor and faithful friend until her death in 1805.

During the years 1824 & 5, Mrs. Stewart spent much of her time with her relatives Mr. and Mrs. Edgeworth, at Edgeworthstown. In 1817 she was married to Mr. Stewart; and on the 1st of June, 1822, they sailed from Belfast for Canada; they proceeded to York, (now Toronto), and after some delay went on to their location in the Township of Douro, where they arrived on the 16th of Feb'y, 1823.

The Stewart and Reid families were the first that settled in Douro, being in the Township a year before it was surveyed. Mr. Stewart received a grant of land on consideration of actual settlement. In regard to the difficulties of the settlement, extracts from Dr. Poole's Book on the early settlement of this County, will supply us with considerable information.

The subject of this brief sketch, sailed from Quebec in June, 1823, with her husband, the Hon. Thos. A. Stewart, his daughters and three sons. They had to attend the St. Lawrence in open boats from Lachine, reaching Toronto in August. About October of the same year they left Cobourg on their way to Douro, Miss Beaufort was her constant, kind instructor and faithful friend until her death in 1805.

During the years 1824 & 5, Mrs. Stewart spent much of her time with her relatives Mr. and Mrs. Edgeworth, at Edgeworthstown. In 1817 she was married to Mr. Stewart; and on the 1st of June, 1822, they sailed from Belfast for Canada; they proceeded to York, (now Toronto), and after some delay went on to their location in the Township of Douro, where they arrived on the 16th of Feb'y, 1823.

The Stewart and Reid families were the first that settled in Douro, being in the Township a year before it was surveyed. Mr. Stewart received a grant of land on consideration of actual settlement. In regard to the difficulties of the settlement, extracts from Dr. Poole's Book on the early settlement of this County, will supply us with considerable information.

The subject of this brief sketch, sailed from Quebec in June, 1823, with her husband, the Hon. Thos. A. Stewart, his daughters and three sons. They had to attend the St. Lawrence in open boats from Lachine, reaching Toronto in August. About October of the same year they left Cobourg on their way to Douro,

The County of Halton will also be in the same position, if not worse. A By-law was introduced to take a portion of the County but not by petition as the law provides, and the Council refused to pass it.

Application was made to Parliament, and on the face of all the irregularity, contrary to the wish of 8 out of 11 Councillors, the By-law was legalised, and 48 men were found to vote for such corrupt legislation. John Sandfield McDonald is one of the loudest declaimers in favour of forcing the Council to do what the very statutes enacted by himself and sycophants had declared the Council should not do. It is somewhat cheering to us to know that Mr. Fairbairn refused to be a party to such corrupt and unheard of legislation. Should Legislators continue to disregard justice and override the laws of their own making, Canada will soon be as noted for railway "rings" as ever Albany has been.

We are not against railway enterprise, by no means, but we must not be slow to condemn the corruption of our public men whether as Councillors or Legislators, and we cannot but deplore the attempts at bribery whether successful or not, of the men who came here to promote the Belleville road.

Cancer Removed.

On Monday, the 12th instant, Dr. Kincaid, of Peterboro, performed a very interesting and successful surgical operation in the removal of a large cancerous tumor from the breast of Miss Young, a resident of the Township of Dummer.

Sometime last year, the Doctor, on being consulted in respect to this cancer, recommended its immediate removal by a surgical operation; but the sufferer hesitated to undergo the operation at that time, hoping that some milder process might prove successful. Finding, however, that other means were inefficient, and that the cancer was rapidly increasing in size and morbidity, she decided, on the day mentioned above, to have it removed in the way recommended.

While in Peterborough last week, we requested the doctor to allow us to examine the cancerous tumor, which he had extracted, and which we were informed he had preserved,—a request which was kindly granted.

The extracted tumor cannot way less than ten ounces, and shows very clearly on one side the circular rim of the cancer and the included depression. We congratulate the patient on the removal of this frightful disease, and Dr. Kincaid on this addition to the many successful surgical operations which he has performed in this County, and which have secured for him that fame as a skilful surgeon he deservedly enjoys.—Norwood Register.

We have received a private letter from the Warden of the County of Halton, from which we publish the following extract, as it shows the manner in which our worthy member is esteemed by the people of Halton:—

OAKVILLE, COUNTY OF HALTON,
26th Feb., 1872.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—I have this day sent you by post a "number" and "extra" of our town paper, the Argus, containing an account of the action of the Ontario Assembly upon a By-law submitted by our County Council last year, and under the circumstances have declared lost.

When it came before the railway committee and the House, your member, a perfect stranger to me, took such a high moral stand, and independent action upon it, that I feel his constituency should know how highly the people in Halton value the services of such men. I am sorry to say that amidst the railway corruption of the present day, such men as Mr. Fairbairn are not easily found, and when found, they should be raised and supported. I have no doubt that Mr. Fairbairn stands high in his own constituency, but I feel he is justly entitled to this humble tribute to his independence and high moral worth.

I am, Dear Sir
Your ob'dt servant,
P. A. McDOUGALL,
Warden, Co. Halton.

A Surprise.

MR. EDITOR.—Allow me through your columns, to acknowledge a great surprise which I met with on Wednesday, 20th inst. A few minutes after opening school on that morning above named, a parcel was put into my hands by one of my pupils, with the following note attached:—

"Presented to Mr. Samuel Duff, by one of his scholars, as a token of love and respect, Feb., 20th. 1872." On opening the package, I found inclosed a very handsome Bible, with Psalms, references and several beautiful plates, maps and a Bible-mark, bearing the appropriate motto, "God in love." I must acknowledge my gratitude to my scholars both for the present, and the manner in which it was presented. It was not, as many so called surprises are, presented with my foreknowledge, but a surprise in the fullest sense of the term. By giving the above an insertion you will greatly oblige, the Council was true there was no ground for sending the report back to the committee. He thought the House had a right to call upon the member for East Toronto to accept the denial of the Presidents of the Council and the member for South Brant.

Yours, &c.,

Mr. Beaithe thought the committee should merely have reported the fact and he was satisfied that the report was substantially correct, because he did not believe the charges were true.—Holding these views he would vote against the amendment. He thought the member for East Toronto should withdraw his charge.

Mr. McCall thought the committee should have supposenaed witness, and he would support the amendment.

Mr. gibbons was sorry there had been so much recrimination. He considered the excuses of the member for East Toronto were merely subterfuges. It was unfair to charge a member of the Government without naming the member in the charge, and if he had been named the resolution would have stood as the Hon. gentleman framed it. The Hon. gentleman had a month to prepare his proof, his colleagues had rivealed to-night that his charge was founded on more suspicion; and therefore there was no reason for referring the matter back to the committee.

Mr. McCallum supported the amendment.

Mr. Cameron denied that he was actuated in this matter by vindictive feelings arising out of the resignation of the late Treasurer. He had always regarded the President of the Council as a man of standing, unquestioned ability and integrity, and he would not of brought the charge against him had he not belleived he had reason for doing so. When he preferred the charge he honestly felt he was right, but the course pursued by the President of the Council and the member for South Brant had not been such as to relieve his mind of the suspicions he had entertained. He proceeded at great length to argue that he was justified in not appearing before the Committee of Esquiry; and he then read to the House the minutes of the Committee, and criticising the action of one of its members—Mr. Pardee.—He ended by denouncing The Globe.

Mr Mackenzie wished to correct an error into which Mr. Cameron had fallen. The chhirman of the Committee had no power to summon Mr. Cameron as a witness. If that gentleman refused to attend, the chairman had no power to compel him, but could only report to the House. The chairman took the only plan open to him, according to the English Parliamentary practice. Mr. Mackenzie proceeded to show that there was no real change in the resolution; that the only words left out were, "any other member of the administration." The object of the change was simply to specify the charge; at the same time Mr. Cameron was informed by the Government that if at any time he wished to prefer a charge against any other member of the Government, he would have the fullest opportunity to do so. (Hear, hear,(

Mr McCuag could see no object to be accomplished by referring the matter back to the committee, as the member for East Toronto had declined to attend the committee when it was in session.

Dr. Boultbee was of opinion that it would be more satisfactory to allow the matter to go back to the committee, so that Mr Cameron might be examined.

The House then divided on the amendment, which was lost—Yeas, 18; nays, 48.

Ontario Dairymen's Association.

A Convention, under the auspices of the Ontario Dairymen's Association, will be held in the Masonic Hall, in the Town of Belleville, Wednesday & Thursday, 13th & 14th March, 1872, at which time matters of interest connected with the Dairy business in general will be discussed. The services of several able and scientific men have been secured to deliver addresses on the occasion, such as: X. A. Willard, M. A., of Little Falls, N. Y.; Professor Arnold, of Ithica, N. Y.; Dr. Clark, Editor of the "Ontario Advocate;" Professor Bell, of Albert College; also Hon. A. McKellar, Minister of Agriculture, is expected. In addition to the Addresses delivered by the above named gentlemen, the following topics of interest will come before the Convention for discussion:—

1st. Is Ontario well adapted for Dairy purposes? 2nd. Best breeds of stock for Dairy purposes. 3rd. What Grasses are preferable for Milch Cows, and what kinds injurious to flavor of milk, and to what extent? 4th. Best method of hauling milk from the farm to Factory. 5th. Best method of curing Cheese, and temperature of curing room, and frequency of turning. 6th. Can damaged or tained milk be utilised, and by what process? Other questions besides those mentioned may be taken up if time permit.

The Committee intend to spare no pains to make this first Convention held in Belleville a success, and earnestly hope that all who feel an interest in this growing and important branch of industry will lend their hearty support. It is expected that arrangements will be made with the Grand Trunk to secure passenger's fare (who may be members of the Association) at reduced rates. Members of the Association and Ladies will be admitted to the Convention free.

By Order of the Executive.

K. Graham, M. P. P., S. T. Wilmot, Prvs. of Association. Secretary.

The Alabama Question.

Alluding to the Alabama question the New York Times of the 15th says:

"The tone of the latest discussion of the Alabama difficulty, both in England and in this country, gives some reason to hope that the misunderstanding which has arisen may be so managed as not to destroy the treaty. The people of both countries are much more sensible and moderate than some of their assumed leaders. They would like to see the present differences settled honourably and peaceably. That is their main idea—and under these circumstances it would be a great pity and a great shame if so good a treaty should be lost, unless from absolute necessity. With good temper and good sense preserved, that necessity may surely be avoided President Woolsey, of Yale, in an article printed elsewhere, suggests one way out of the difficulty—that the arbitration be allowed to go on with reference to the claims for direct damages, reserving the propriety of whose introduction there is no dispute, leaving the indirect claims for future consideration. His suggestion meets with a formidable objection in the fact that the British Government regarded the permanent exclusion of claims for indirect damages as one of the principal inducements for the treaty. We are inclined to believe that our Government will do well to consider the concluding sentences of President Woolsey's article, as expressing what the best minds of the country, and probably the majority of the people, feel. These words are. 'For our part we hope that an end is to these claims now. If not, an end is likely to come to the faith in international abitration, which has gladdened the hearty of so many.'"

Our Members as Seen by Others.

From the Oakville Argus.

THE OUTRAGE IS PERPETUATED.

In our issue of last week we remarked upon the gross outrage that had been perpetuated against the rate-payers of this County by the action of the Railway Committee on the Bill then before the House to legalise the By-Law granting aid, by way of bonus, to the Credit Vally Railway to the amount of $75,-000.

We had hoped that the pernicious and corupt railway influence and pressure that was quite apparent in the Committee would not find its way into the House to such an extent as to control and direct its legislative functions in so unwarrantable and unworthy a manner as was done in this case "But the whole Body is sick, from the top of the head to the sole of the foot—wounds and bruises and purifying sores." That which the railway gamblers, speculators, and schemers, conceived in "sin," the majority of the Committee and the House have "shapen" and passed into iniquity.

On Monday last forty-three against thirteen! declared, in effect, that the rights of the people shall be trodden under foot—that the freedom and security of our municipal institutions shall be made subservient to the gambling schemes of Railway speculators. Declared that they would assume the functions of our County Council, and in opposition to the popular will of the county, by legislative enactment pronounced right what previously they had pronounced morally and legally wrong! and whereby they authorise, so far as they have any show of authority, the wholesale robbery, by taxation of the county to the extent of $75,000 to aid a railway scheme that the Ratepayers do not want, and with regard to which they so declared both at the polls and through their representatives at the County Council. If this is the kind of legislation that our Ontario Assembly intend to foster and promote the sooner the country knows it the better.

What a farce, after such legislation to introduce a Bill such as was before the House on Tuesday last. "For the prevention of corrupt practises at Municipal Elections. "Hypocrites! "make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but the inward part is full of ravening and wickedness." Far better and more consistent, to introduce a Bill, carry it, and practice under it, to purify legislation in the House, "over throw the tables of the money changers, and throw out those who sell and buy doves."

But, in the midst of all this corruption, mainly through railway, influence, and largely exerted by Toronto, it is refreshing, it is gratifying and we refer to it with pride and pleasure, and we hope that every ratepayer in Halton will note that at least thirteen!!! of the members of the Honorable the Legislative Assembly of Ontario have not bowed the knee to Baal, or worshipped his image; and foremost amongst those who did not, we name Mr. Fairbairn, the member for West Peterborough, and Mr. Boultbee, the member for North York.

Those gentlemen, in most eloquent and energetic language, pronounced this species of legislation as not only wrong in principal, but most dangerous as a precedent, and calculated to strike at the very root of the freedom and security of our municipal instutions, and called upon the Government to prevent it; and altho that appeal had not the effect that was intended, yet it showed on the part of those making it a desire to mantain right and put down wrong—a moral corrage and spirit independence and sustained them unflinchingly in the path of duty. Long may they and those associated with them live to do honor to any constituency whom they may represent.

But what of our local representative, Mr. Wm. Barber? What record has he to show in this matter? He declared himself opposed to this kind of legislation, but he went much further than this;—he declared that before voting for legalizing the Halton By-law he would resign his seat in the House.—Now, what do we find the facts to be regarding Mr. Barber?—simply that at the very time he was making these protestions he was secretly but actively engaged in canvasing for the passage of the inquitous measure, and when before the Committee Wm. Barber was the first to vote for it; when it came before the House Wm. Barber was the first to vote for it there.

Alas! for human frailty—and we say it more under a feeling of shame and humiliation than of anger—if this is the price for which Mr. Barber betrayed the intrests of the County of Halton, we pity him and leave him to the righteous judgement and tender mercies of the ratepayers, for their voices shall be heard and prevail, the Ontario assembly and Wm. Barber to the countrary notwithstanding.

The amendment to the Bill was proposed by Matthew Crooks Cameron, at the dictation of Wm. Barber and voted for by John Sandfield Macdonald John Carling, and E. B. Wood, members of the late administration: by Attorney General Crooks, and by Coyne of Brampton.

Electors of Halton! remember that when your County Council presented a respectful petition, praying to be heard by the counsel against the Bill with the cast iron amendment of M. C. Cameron and Wm. Barber, these gentlemen and forty-one-others denied you that right although prayed for by their representatives.

Let the free men of others counties remember that the fate of Halton to day may be their fate to morrow, unless they have such independent representatives as Fairbairn, Boultbee and a few others who scorned the pressure of the Toronto ring, and voted to protect the rights and liberties of the people.

The names of those who denied the people the right of being heard are Ardagh, Baxter, Calvin, Carling Clemens, Code, Corby, Craig, (Glengary) Crooks, Cumberland, Farewell, Fitzsimmons, Graham Hodgins, McDonald, Monck, Oliver, Perry, Read Sindair, Tooley, Wood, Barber, Boulter, Cameron, Clark (Norfolk), Clark (Wellington), Cook, Coyne, Craig (Rensle), Crosby, Deroche, Ferguson, Galbraith, Haringtou, Lander, McManus, Mentaith, Paxton, Prince Scott (Grey), Springer, Webb,—49.

Mr. Barber will receive further attention in our next.

The Alabama Claims.

QUESTION IN THE HOUSE IN COMMONS;

It is reported on good authority that the United States will not waive their claims in England for indirect damages; but they be willing to submit them.

Hon. Charles Francis Adams, American member of Geneva tribunal, will return to Europe in May.

The Journal des debats, commenting on the controversy over the Alabama claims declares that England and America are both wrong, and fears that a protracted misunderstanding may lead to rupture.

In the House of Commons Mr. Disraeli enquired whether any answer to Earl Granvilles note concerning the Alabama claims had been received.

Mr. Gladstone replied that nothing official had been received, but the United States Minister Gen. Schenck, tho' the reply of his Government would reach London about the first of March.

In the Senate a resolution was adopted to print 25,000 of the case of the United States against Great Britain.

The case submitted to the Geneva Board of Arbitration by the counsel of Great Britain, in regard to the Alabama claims, has been laid before Parliament, and is published. The document is divided into ten parts Part one remarks that—No definite or complete statement of the American claims has ever been furnished. The Treaty of Washington and previous correspondence will supply, however a general definition of the demands made by the United States.

Article 6 of the Treaty of Washington, is quoted as: | "A neutral Government is bound not to permit or suffer either belligerent to make use of its ports or waters as a base of naval operations against the other, or for the purpose of renewal or augmentations of millitary supplies or arm, or recruitment of men." This rule is interpreted as prohibiting the supply of war yaging vessels from neutral ports, but as not prohibitory of the sale of arms or munitions of war in the ordinary course of commerce. The claims submitted are for damages growing out of vessels respecting which the United-States allege that Great Britain failed in the international duty. The tribunal must determine the question of failure of duty. If it decides that there has been such failure then it must award a gross sum for damages or define a limit of liability for the guidance of the Assessors of said damage. The circumstance of the sailing of the steam ers Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Shenandoah were materially dissimilar but Great Britain maintains that in respect to none of them has she failed in her international obligations or rendered herself justly liable.

Part 2 gives the history of the civil war in the United States, showing that the coiras of England and the Maritime Powers was one of vigilant and scrupulous neutrality.

Part 3 makes a statement of international rights and duties of the laws of England bearing thereon and the faithful performance and execution therefore by Great Britain during the war. It also gives a detailed account of the action of Minister Adams and Earl Russell to prevent the departure of the rabel cruisers.

Part 4 shows the limits of the power possessed by the British Government to present such departures.

Part 5, 6, 7 and 8 respectively present in detail the facts relative to the steamers Florida, Georgia and Shenandoah.

Part 9 sets forth that the steamers Georgia and Shenandoah were never equipped for war in the British Dominions. Her Majesty's Government was only informed respecting these vessle's after their departure. The Alabama & Florida did not receive their armaments in the British Dominions. Her Majesty's Government was only informed respecting these vessels after their departure.

The Alabama and Florida did not receive their armaments in the British Dominion. The peculiar circumstances of the Alabama's escape are recited, and England's vigilant endeavours to prevent her sailing as well as America's failure in the attempt to capture her are insisted upon.

Part ten complains of the disadvantages under which Great Britain labours in meeting an unpresented case. The document concludes as follows:—While England regrets the departure of the rebel cruisers from her ports, she cannot acknowledge the justice of the claims against her for pecuniary damages for their acts. The United States must solidly establish the fact of England's negligence. England is ready to accept the award of the tribunal of arbitration whether favourable or unfavourable, but she desires that it should be just."

Peter Cartwright, the venerable and famous Methodest itinerant, is lying at the point of death at his home in Illinois. He is eighty-seven years of age, and has been sixty-eight years in ministry. With the single exception of Henry Boehm, he is the oldest minister of the Methodest Connection in the United States.

At the date of the last mail from England the speech of the Attoney-General for the defence of the Tichborne trial has been proceeding nearly three weeks and was yet far from the end. It is difficult to estimate the strain upon the mental and physicial powers. Each day more than a whole page of the Times, Telegraph and other journals is ocupied by the report and though it might be imagined that such a lengthy harangue would become diffuse and discursive, such is not the case. The language of Sir John is remarkably terse and concise, and the whole oration hangs well together, and is free from repetition. It may be remarked that the gravity and decorum to which we are accustomed in Court of Justice have been departed from in this instance, everybody appeared to agree that such an unprecented trial demands some relection of ordinary rules. Bursts of laughter excited by the Attoney-General's witticisms pass quiate unchecked, and when luncheon time arrives the Court presents a lively spectacle, especially on a wet day, when a few feel inclined to leave the room, as soon as the jury rise, out came flasks of sherry, packet of sandwiches cold fowl, &c., and the Session House became the scene of picnic in hostile parties joined in friendchatter.—Ibid.

Brutality.

We clip the following from an exchange:

"One of the most brutal outrages on record was perpetrated between Wingham and Clifford, on Tuesday evening last. While the driver of Mr. Johnstone's stage was warming himself in a tavern at Lelgarve, a fiend in human form, completely covered, with an axe, the two hind legs off one of the horses, a little above the fetlocks. The night being dark, the occurence was not noticed till Wingham was reached, the dumb brute being driven from Belgrave on the stumps of his legs! The community sympathise with Mr. Johnstone in his loss. The animal was worth $100. The scoundrel who committed the deed is unknown."

We have read lately with much pain, statements of somewhat similar acts of brutality in our Province. The one in particular, we remember, in the case of a pair of horses belonging to a man in the township of Nassagaweya, which on a certain night had each one of their "pet ears" cut off. Some time after the same thing occurred in the Township in which the outrage took place offers a reward of $100 for the apprehension of the offender or offenders, and the county town, Milton, offers another $100. This ought to be increased to at least $1,000, and every possible influence and means used to find out the perpetrators of these vile deeds. Moreover for such abominable cruelties, the law should provide more suitable punishment. For such outrages the old English correction of flogging on the bare back. One hundred lashes withit he cut o' nine tails.—Courier

THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is Thomas' Eclectric Oil, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certian fixed proportions of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combinations. Thus in the preparation, of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alchol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this Pain-Killer of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to hush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybody's house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rehumatism or you would'nt have seen converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here within a year, Simeon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' Pain-Killer that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so, such and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the Pain-Killer and what more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

PATON, MOIR & Co

January 9th, 1871. 3-4in

BY-LAW NO.

A By-law to Encourage Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., to increase their manufacturing Establishment for the manufactory of Woolen Goods, and for the maintaining of the same by the grant of a bonus, as herein set forth, and for the purpose of raising money to meet such bonus.

Whereas Messrs. Paton, Moir & Co., are possessed of a Woolen Mill, situate upon the Otonabee River, of the capacity known as a Three Set Mill.

And whereas it would be greatly to the benefit and advantage of the Town of Peterborough that the said firm of Paton Moir & Co., should be encouraged to increase the capacity of the said Mill, by the granting to them of a bonus for the said purpose, and for the purpose of maintaining the same when so increased.

And whereas if the said Mill were increased to that extent which would render it what is known as a Ten Set Mill or three times and one-third its present capacity, some two hundred hands would have to be employed in running or working the same, and some sixty thousand dollars would have to be expended in payment of wages and running expanses, annually, all of which would directly tend to add to the prosperity of the said Town of Peterborough.

And whereas it is desirable to extend the limits of the said Town of Peterborough, so as embrace in addition to other territory the said Auburn Mills, and it is desirable also with a like object to exempt the proposed extension of the said Auburn Mills from taxation for the period of Ten Years from and after the completion of such extension.

And whereas by an Act of Parliament of the late Province of Canada, passed in the Twenty-fourth year of Her Majesty's reign, Entituled, "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough, and to authorise the issue of debentures on the security of Town Property and for other purposes" It was enacted that for the purposes and in the manner therein particularly mentioned and set out, and to the amount therein mentioned, it should be lawful for the Commissioners therein named to issue debentures under the seal of the said corporation, to be signed by the Mayor, countersigned by the Treasurer and the Secretary of the said Commissioners and that the Council of the said Town of Peterborough should annually, upon the application of the said Commissioners, raise upon the rateable property of the Town, the interest and sinking fund requisite for the redemption of the said debentures.

And whereas the Council of the said Town of Peterborough have determined to grant a bonus of Ten Thousand Dollars to the said Paton, Moir & Co., to induce and assist them in increasing their said mill as aforesaid, to a Ten Set Mill, or to three times and one-third its present capacity, to be paid to them as hereinafter set out.

It is therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the Town of Peterborough, as follows:

1. That this By-law and the several provisions thereof shall come into force, and be operative and binding upon the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough from and immediately after its final passing by the said Council, if an Act of the Parliament of the Province of Ontario shall have been then passed authorizing the same, and a Proclamation of the Lieutenant Governor adding to the limits as aforesaid, of the said Town, shall have issued, and not before.

2 If such an Act of the said Parliament shall not have been passed and such proclamation shall not have been issued as aforesaid, at the time of the final passing of this By-law as aforesaid, then this By-law and the several provisions therein shall cease in force, and be operative, and binding upon the said corporation of the Town of Peterborough, from and immediately after the passing of an Act of the said Parliament, legalising the same, if an Act authorising the same shall not have been passed, and the issue of such Proclamation, adding to the limits of the said Town as aforesaid, whichever shall happen last.

3 Upon the said Paton Moir & Co., entering into a bond or bonds to the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough binding themselves in the penal sum of Twenty Thousand Dollars with two good and sufficient sureties, to be approved of by the Town Council, in the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars each within two months after this By-law takes effect, conditioned that they will enlarge and increase their said Mill and fully equip and furnish the same with the necessary machinery before the 1st day of December in the year One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-four, to the extent and capacity known as a Ten Set Mill, in all, or three times and one-third its present capacity, and shall (unless prevented by unforeseen accident, misfortune, or calamity) run and work the same to the full capacity thereof for the period of Ten Years thereafter, and also conditioned as hereinafter set out, the said Town of Peterborough shall be liable and bound to pay to them, the said Paton Moir & Co., or their successors or assigns, the sum of the said Mill, the said sum of Ten Thousand dollars of lawful money of Canada as a bonus as aforesaid in the manner following, that is to say, the sum of Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars, so soon as they the said Paton Moir & Co., shall have erected and completed ready for the machinery the necessary additions to their said Mills to contain the necessary additional machinery to make the same a Ten Set Mill as aforesaid, the further sum of $2,500 when necessary machinery placed therein and the balance of Five Thousand dollars and interest thereon at the rate of six per centum per annum in manner following, that is to say, the said balance of Five Thousand Dollars in ten equal annual payments of Five Hundred dollars each, the first of such payments to be made in one year after the said Mill shall have been fully equipped and furnished as a ten set mill, and the said interest annually on the whole balance thereof remaining due and unpaid at the time of each of such payments such interest to commence and be computed from the time said mill shall be fully enlarged and equipped as aforesaid, such payments however to cease and all liability to make the same to be at an end should the said Paton Moir & Co. or their successors or assign owners of the said Mill be guilty of any breach of their said bond

4. That the said bonds or bond shall be further conditioned that if said Mill when so enlarged and equipped shall not be steadily worked or run to its full capacity during the said period of Ten years (except stoppages for repairs and other reasonable and unavoidable stoppages for a limited and reasonable time) they, the said Paton Moir & Co., will on demand refund and repay to the said Corporation of the Town of Peterborough all the principal moneys which may then have been paid under this by-law, less a sum at the rate of One Thousand dollars per year for each and every year during which the said mill as enlarged and equipped as aforesaid may have been run or worked to its full capacity as aforesaid.

5 That for the purpose of providing and furnishing the moneys necessary for the payment of the said bonus in manner aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the Mayor for the time being of the said Town of Peterborough, to cause to be issued from time to time such debentures not less than one hundred dollars each as may be necessary, and not exceeding the amount of Eleven Thousand Dollars in the whole, and payable within Ten years, which said debentures shall be sealed with the seal of the said Corporation and countersigned by the Treasurer and by the Secretary of the Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust.

6 The said debentures shall be made payable at such Bank or other place in the said Town of Peterborough as the said Mayor may direct, and shall have attached to them Coupons for the payment of interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable on the First days of the months of January and July in each year during the currency thereof.

7 The payment of all such debentures as may be issued under the authority hereof shall be provided for in the same manner as debentures issued under the provisions of the Act aforesaid, intituled "An Act to consolidate the debt of the Town of Peterborough, and to authorise the issue of debentures on the security of Town Property, and for other purposes."

8 And it is further enacted, that provided the conditions of the said bond or bonds be well and faithfully performed, fulfilled and kept, the said intended addition to the said Woolen Mills and machinery shall be exempt from taxation for the period of Ten years from the time of the completion of the said proposed extension thereof.

9 That the votes of the Electors of the said Municipality shall be taken on the proposed By-law on the 27th day of February, One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy Two, and in the following places, that is to say in each of the four Wards of the said Town, and at the places of polling therein of the last Municipal Elections, that the polling shall open at the hour of Nine o'clock in the forenoon, and close at the hour of Five o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. Snow Flakes.

BY FRANCIS S. SMITH.

I am looking from my window
At the softly falling snow,
And watching its still passage
To the frozen earth below;
And I'm thinking of the thousands
Who will hail it with delight,
And of the tens of thousands
Whose comfort it will blight.

I mark the flakes descending—
How grand to contemplate!
A myriad tiny feathers,
Each dist netly separate.
I mingle from among them
The largest I can see,
And in its devious windings
I trace it easily.

And thus I learn, while musing,
A lesson from the sky,
The flakes, like human beings,
Are born to fall and die;
Each takes a common path way
As they to earth descend;
They have a common origin,
And meet a common end.

The greatest, though conspicuous
While living, still must die,
And with the least in one low bed
At last must surely lie.
Be humble then, proud mortal,
Nor vaunt your high estate—
Death sees no difference between
The lowly and the great.

Agricultural.

Treatment of Window Plants.

I find so many ladies have attempted to bloom plants in winter and failed, that if you will permit me I will give a few hints to those intrested. First, then, the great cause of failure is trying to grow them in too warm a room; next keeping them in too large a pots and overfeeding them. Ladies having no greenhouses should only grow those plants most hardy—such as Geraniums Roses, Feverfew, Sweet Alyssum, Mignonette, and the blue Browal all beautiful, bright and constant bloomers.

I take my Geraniums up in September; am careful not to break the roots; shake all the soil off, cut them down to within six inches of the root, put them in a small pot as the roots will allow say three or four inch pots. My soil is turf mould, sand a little well decayed manure. Feverfews do not need cutting, except to take out the old flower stock. Sweet Alyssum, if it has been growing all summer, must be cut back.—Leave them out doors as long as the winter will admit, then place them in a cold room. If you have an old table you do not care for, nail a four-inch board around it to form a sink, and fill it with sand to set your pots in, it will keep the roots from dying, save watering them, and keep the water from dripping on the floor when you water them.

If you have a south window that is just the thing; mine faces the east. I kept them in an upper hall window until I had a green house, and I had them look splendidly all winter. The hall is in the centure of the house, and of course quite protected; but they had no fire. By keeping the plants I named cold, but not allowing them to freeze, they will do well, (such has been my own experience), and they are easily cared for.—Mrs. S. J. H. in Rural New Yorker.

SPREADING MANURE IN WINTER.—We are asked what advantage there is in spreading manure on frozen ground. It depends much on the condition of the ground. If it is covered with grass, either a pasture or a meadow, there is great advantage in more than one respect. The surface is protected from sudden changes during the winter, and the first thaw carries the manure to the roots, where it causes a vigorous growth early in the spring. If the ground has been ploughed for a spring crop, it is also benefited by having the manure ready to be absorbed by the soil whenever the ground thaws; the seed, as it sprouts finds what it needs close at hand. On sod ground to be plowed for corn in the spring, the same advantages are gained in the case of grass lands, and the manure is on the spot in time, which in a late season it might not be, for want of time or improper condition of the ground. But after all, it is far better to get the manure upon the ground before it is frozen, if possible; the earlier in the fall the better. Winter top dressing of a grain is only a poor substitute at best for a proper timely preparation in the fall, and rarely pays for the trouble, unless it may be in the advantage gained by the spring sown clover.

Value of Thorough-Bred Animals.

A thorough-bred animal is one that will transmit its peculiar characteristics with almost unerring certainty to its progeny.—Cross and grade animals will not do this with satisfactory certainty. Prof. Agassiz stated a fact which breeders of domestic animals should never forget or undervalue, when he said, no offspring is simply the off-spring of its father and mother. It is, at the same time, the offspring of grandfather and grandmother on both sides.—Without touching ground at all delatable, he might have asserted that this dependence of offspring or liability to reproduce family characteristics extends much father up the ancestral line. Hence the importance of thorough breeding.

According to common acception, a cow is never a thorough-bred nor a full-blood; but in the instances where sire and dam are Ayrshires or Durham, or Devon—that is, have been bread pure for many generations—they are called "thorough-bred" or "full-blood," the term being synonymous in breeders' parlance. A thorough-bred is made by carefully breeding to establish a distinctive and permanent type, and interbreeding to retain it: but if two thoroughbreds of distinctive types or breeds are inter-bred, the progeny is no longer regarded full-blood or thorough-bred, but crossbred.

Profitable Sheep Husbandry.

We frequently see in the New York market fat lambs only a few months old, which weigh sixty pounds; and which are sold for $13 to $16 per head. Last June we saw a great many little fellows hanging on the butchers' meat hooks, price $13 each. J. Harris' near Rochester, writes: We have just killed one of our grade Cotswold-Merino lambs, not seven months old. He weighed alive 96 lbs. The blood weighed 24 lbs.; offal, 21 lbs., skin and feet, 18 lbs.; waste, 4; carcase, 54 lbs. Is not that a pretty good lamb from seomwhom Merino ewe that cost only $2.1027 I raised 74 such lambs from 60 ews, and was foolish enough to sell 70 of them to the butcher in July, most of them better lambs than this one. Unless a farmer raises very early lambs, and has good opportunities for disposing of them to the best advantage, it will pay better to keep them—if they are kept well and are of the right kind. I think I never saw better-wooled sheep in my life than these grade Cotswold-Merinos. They are covered with wool from the nose to the toes. I am inclined to think that in our climate, and for ordinary farm management, these grade sheep will prove more profitable than the pure long-wooled sheep. The latter require better treatment than ordinary farmers are willing to bestow. If they were prepared to give the requisite feed and care, no sheep, where money is in demand, would pay so well. But they certainly will not bear neglect as well as Merinos. This is true of all good stock. It is a truth which farmers need to know and feel and act upon. These grade Cotswold-Merino sheep require better treatment than Merinos, but nothing than any farmer can not readily bestow without changing his rotation or a management. It is easy to produce such heavy lambs, if the ewes are fed well during winter and spring.

WATER IN THE HUMAN BODY.—Chemists tell us that it a man weighing one hundred and fifty pounds could be divested of all the water in his system, the remainder of solid matter would weigh about forty pounds. If this dry matter was burned to ashes in an open fire, there would be left of bone and ashes from the flesh about seven or eight pounds. Of the forty pounds of dry matter, one-fifth of it at least is mineral matter. The material burned up was the flesh fat, vessels, nerves, brain, &c., and which contained about one pound and a half per cent. of mineral matter. The most of the inorganic matter is contained in the bones, and without this material no bones could exist. Bones are very complex in their constitution, being made up of animal and mineral matter.

DURING the Clay and Polk campaign, the admiration of the Hon. Walter Brooks, of Mississippi, for the great Kentuckian, led him to bet a pair of matched horses, all the stock he had, on the result; and this, though a strict member of the Presbyterian Church. Of course he lost, and of course he was "churched" for gaming. "All we ask of you, Mr. Brooke," said the minister during the trial, "is to acknowledge that you are sorry, and promise to sin no more." "Sorry?" asked Mr. Brooke, rising from his seat with an air of injured innocence, "Sorry? My dear brother, when I think of those beautiful bays, gone from my gaze forever, I can truly say, with my hand upon my heart, that no transaction of my life gives me more genuine sorrow than this."

THE WAY OF THE WORLD.—We were travelling through Canada, says a correspondent, in the year 1862, and after a hard day s ride, stopped at Lion Inn, and the contents of the stage, numbering about nine persons, soon gathered around the cheerful fire. Among the occupants of the room we observed an ill-looking cur, who had shown his wit by taking up his quarters in so comfortable an apartment.

After a few moments the landlord entered, and observing the specimen of the canine specis, remarked:

"Fine dog that! Is he yours sir?' approaching one of the passengers.

"No, sir,"

"Beautiful dog! Yours, sir?' addressing himself to another.

"No," was the blunt reply.

"Very sagacious animal. Belongs to you, I suppose, sir?"

"No, he doesn't," was the answer.

"Then he's yours, and you have a treasure," throwing the animal a cracker.

"Nothing of the kind."

"Oh! (with a smile) he belongs to you, as a matter of course?" addressing the last passenger.

"Wouldn't have him as a gift."

"Then you infernal, dirty, mean, contemptible whelp, git out!" and with that the host gave the poor dog such a kick as sent the animal yelling into the street, amid the roars of the company.

COULD'NT SELL HIS COW.—A boy was sent from Croton, Conn., to New London, one day last summer, with a bag of green corn to sell. The boy was gone all day, and returned with the bag unopened, which he dumped on the floor, saying:

"There is your corn, go and sell it yourself, I can't."

"Sold any?"

"No," said the boy, "I've been all over New London with it, and nobody said anything about green corn. Two or three fellows asked me what I'd got in my bag, and I told him it was none of his business."

That boy reminds us of business men who are to be found in every community, who do not or will not recognize the benefits of advertising their business.

THE THOUGHTFUL HEN.—A youthful hen found an egg, and, yielding to the vernal instinct, sat upon it until the process of incubation was complete. Her mother, who had laid the egg, and had taken great care in shaping and coloring it, came along, and seeing only the broken shell, bore into tears and said, "Alas! my daughter, who has destroyed my favourite egg?" The feathered offspring quickly responded. "I cannot tell a lie, mother; I cannot tell a lie; I did it with my little hatch it."

OIL VS TEARS.—An attendant at Mount Vernon found a lady weeping most bitterly and audibly, with her handkerchief at her eyes. He stepped up to her and said:

"Are you in trouble, madam?"

"No, sir," she sobbed.

"I saw you weeping."

"Ah," said she, "how can any one help weeping at the grave of the Father of his country?"

"Oh, indeed, madam," said he, "that's it! The tomb is over yonder. This is the ice-house."

SOMETHING ABOUT YOURSELF.—Supposing your age to be fifteen or thereabouts, we can figure you up to a dot. You have 160 bones and muscles; your heart is five inches in length and three inches in diameter; it beats 70 times per minute, 4,200 per hour, 100,800 per day, and 36,772,800 per year. At each beat but a little over two ounces of blood is thrown out of it; and each day it throws out and and discharges about seven tons of that wonderful fluid. Your lungs will contain about a gallon of air, and you inhale about 24,000 gallons per day. The aggregate surface of the air-cells of your lungs, suppose them to be spread out, 20,000 square inches. The weight of your brain is three pounds; when you are a man it will be eight ounces more. Your nerves exceed 10,000,000 in number. Your skin is composed of three layers, and varies from one-fourth to one-eight of an inch in thickness. The area of your skin is about 1,700 inches, and you are subjected to an atmospheric pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch. Each square inch of your skin contains 3,500 sweating tubes, or perspiratory pores, each of which may be likened to a drain tile one-fourth of an inch long, making an aggregate length in the entire surface of your body of 686,168 feet, or a little disk for the drainage of the body almost forty miles long.

The Lumber Trade

The Georgian Bay, o[illegible] of white—itself an inland [illegible] a finely-timbered country, from which [illegible] lumber mills of the district draw their supply of logs. At favorable points along the whole stretch of coast from Nottawasaga Bay to French River, which affords water communication to Muskoka Lake, 40 miles are established. The numerous large and important streams that flow into the bay afford easy means to bring the timber down to the shore from the woods. These rivers include the Severn, connecting with Lake Coushiching and Lake Simcoe, the Shanash River, the Serpent River, the Blind River, the Nottawasaga, &c., all fine streams. At Collingwood there is a very large sawmill owned by Messrs. Hutchkiss & Co., which manufactures yearly some 15,000,000 feet of lumber. The logs come from the district of country lying on the banks of the Nottawasaga River, some twenty or thirty miles to the west of Collingwood. Across Nottawasaga Bay, though the picturesque Islands known as "The Giant's Tomb," "the Watchers," "Christian Islands," &c., are other mills. At Penetanguishene are the Larusy mills, manufacturing some 8,000,000 feet of lumber yearly, and the mill of Messrs. Cook, Christopher & Co., manufacturing about 4,000,000 feet. Following the line of coast to the north, we come to the mills on the banks of the Severn River, and at Waubashene, owned by the Georgian Bay Lumber Company, of which it is understood that Mr. Dodge, the most extensive of our northern "Lumber Kings," is the chief stockholder. These mills each manufacture some 12,000,000 feet of lumber. Coushiching, which flows into the Severn, is a large property, known as the Thompson Miller mill, manufacturing 5,000,000 feet, and further up on the same line of water communication at Atherly, on Lake Simcoe, there is a small manufacturing 4,000,000 feet per year, owned by Mr. Dodge. To the north on the Georgian Bay are the Spanish River mills, owned by Messrs. Smith & Wyatt, manufacturing about 12,000,000 feet; a mill on Serpent River, belonging to Messrs. Welsh & Sanby, manufacturing 4,000,000 feet; and one on Blind River, known as Rossess's mills, working at the same figure. These are on the main shore, opposite the Manitoulin Islands. The Waddle's mill, also on the bay, is owned by parties in Detroit, and manufactures about 2,000,000 feet. At Parry Sound Messrs. W. & J. Beatty have a large mill working to about 12,000,000 feet; farther South the Hog Bay mills, owned by Messrs Ardagh, Kean & Powell, of about equal capacity. At Byng Inlet, the Magnetawan Lumber Company have two very large mills, each manufacturing about 3,000,000 feet. It will be seen from these figures that on the shores of Georgian Bay alone there are sawmills manufacturing nearly 140,000,000 feet of lumber per season.—Exchange.

A Heroic Cabin Boy.

During one of the wars between England and France, a fine English merchant ship was pursued by a French vessel of war. The English commander finding capture inevitable, quietly retired to his cabin, and resigned himself to his fate. Not so, however, with his little heroic cabin boy, Charles Wagner. He had formed a scheme by which he hoped to save his own ship and capture the threatening enemy fast bearing down upon them; and he had no sooner communicated his plan to the crew than they heartily agreed with it, placed themselves under his orders, and awaited with firmness the moment to carry their enterprise into effect. The suspense was of short duration, for the Frenchman was soon alongside, and immediately grappled fast to the unoffending merchant ship. As Charles had anticipated, the conquerors, elated with the acquisition of so fine a prize, poured into his vessel in crowds, cheering and huzzaing, and not foreseeing any danger, left but few men on board their own ship. Now was the moment for Charles, who, giving his men the signal, sprang at their head on board the opposing vessel. While some seized the arms which had been left in profusion on her deck, and soon overpowered the few left on board, the others by a simultaneous movement, relieved her from the grapplings which united the two vessels. Our hero now having command of the French vessel, seized the helm, placed her out of boarding distance, and hailed with the voice of a conqueror the discomfited crowd of Frenchmen who were left on board the peaceful bark he had just quitted, ordering them to follow close in his wake, or he would blow them out of the water—a threat they well knew he was very capable of executing, as their guns were loaded during the chase. They sorrowfully acquiesced with his command, while gallant Charles, steered into port, followed by his prize.

The exploit excited universal applause. The master of the merchant vessel was examined by the Admiralty, when he stated the whole of the enterprise as it occurred, and declared that Charles Wagner had planned, and that to him alone belonged the honor and credit of the achievement. Charles was immediately transferred to the British navy, appointed a midshipman, and his education carefully superintended. He soon after distinguished himself in action, and underwent a rapid promotion, until at length he was created Admiral, and became Sir Charles Wagner.

Publishing a Newspaper.

A Memphis contemporary has the following truthful remark concerning the dead head system practiced on good natured newspaper men:

"By some unaccountable misapprehension of facts, there is a large class of people in the world who think it costs little or nothing to run a newspaper. Some people who have paid two dollars at an early period of life for an advertisement worth four or five, appear to think they are stock holders in the concern for eternity. They demand the publication of all marriage and funeral notices, obituaries, and family episodes for the next forty years gratis. Speak of pay and they grow indignant.—"Don't we patronize your paper?"—"Yes but you receive the worth of your money for what you paid." "But," says the patron, "it will cost you nothing to put this in."—which is just as ridiculous as to ask a man to grind your axe on his grindstone and graciously tell him it won't cost him a cent. It takes money to run a newspaper as well as any other business, and no paper can succeed financially that carries a dead-head system. Any mention of the people's affairs that they are anxious to see in print is worth paying for, and when printed, is generally as good as any other investment of like amount. The newspaper business is very exacting on all connected with it, and the pay comparatively small. The proprietors risk more money for smaller profits, and editors and reporters and printers work harder and cheaper than the same number of men in any other profession requiring a given equal amount of intelligence, and training, and drudgery."

WHAT A DREAM DID.—The Fort Wayne Sentinel soberly narrates the following as a fact:—A gentleman of high social position, living in the country has a son engaged as a clerk in a large mercantile house in Omaha. A few weeks ago the father received a letter from his son to the effect that he had been robbed of $5,000 belonging to his employer, while returning from a collecting trip into the country. The father was naturally troubled by the intelligence, and when he retired to his room for the night he lay awake for some time thinking of the unfortunate occurrence. At last he fell asleep, and as it seemed to him, he was sitting by a table in a bed chamber of ——— Hotel in Omaha, listening to the conversation of two young men who were recalling the particulars of a robbery in which they had just been concerned while they counted over the proceeds of the same with an exultant air. Learning the number of their room he descended the stairs, consulted the register, fixed their names in memory, together with the date under which they were written, and then awoke. He immediately wrote a letter to his son, requesting him to call at the ——— Hotel, look at the register and if he found the names of John B. Wilson and Jas. Frank inscribed on its pages under the date of November, to have the parties found, arrested, and charged with the stealing of the $5,000. The son followed the directions, and from a letter received by the father we learn that the said John B. Wilson and James Frank were arrested at the said hotel, and that they confessed to the felony; that $3,812 of the lost money was recovered, an that the offenders had basement to the penitentiary.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

they were painfully afflicting, have been endlessly varied in each great manifestation almost every person of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unsuspected foe engenders maladies like the consumption, and fastens the seeds of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it breaks out in loathsome ulcers throughout the body, and then, as some favorable occasion, rapidly darkens into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or beneath the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulceration on some part of the body. Hence the accumulated use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease exist. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, in many cases, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Scald Head, Blotches, Boils, Blains, Sores, Ulcers, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Mental Derange, Pain, Spleenwort, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine disorders of the menstrual and nervous system.

Syphilitic or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these inveterate maladies. Many such cases have been cured by any medicine.

Not long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the sanious poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great resource for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the attendant symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

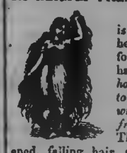
Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.



A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Three Letters.

A letter was written in England.
Penned by a Royal hand,
To her sick and wounded soldiers.
Struck down in a foreign land.
"Tell them," she said, "that my sorrowful heart Grieves for them night and day."
And the wounded listened with glistening eyes
And sobbed as they turned away.
For a feeling too great for expression
Was borne those hearts between;
The electric bond of sympathy,
Linked the humblest to their Queen.

A Widow spoke to her people,
Who mourned as she mourned: that sar,
When her Consort, the truest, the purest,
and best,
To Heaven had passed away.
"My sorrow can never find comfort," she said,
"Though wedded and broken-hearted,"
And again through the land the chord was struck,
That thrilled each soul in its throes;
And her peoples' hearts went out to her then,
To comfort beneath her woes.

A mother sat by the bed of her son,
With his fond grief-stricken bride;
While she prayed and watched for his parting breath,
Death's arrow glanced aside.
And again she spoke to her people true,
And her hearts full depths were stirred;
"A mother gave thanks (for her son to God,
Who her peoples' prayer was heard.
Then the pent-up voice of the nation gave thanks,
And again came the answering thrill:
For she knew, and they knew, her peoples' love,
And sympathy, dwelt with her still.

Three letters, each simple and heartfelt,
Telling nought but the message they bore;
But fraught with a soul-born sympathy,
That thrilled each heart to the core.
Oh! what can avail the demagogues strife
To a nation governed like these!
The generous wine that mantles the cup,
When still, has its dregs and lees;
But the nation once stirred by her anxious breath,
Knows the bond that exists between,
The Queen that loves her people,
And the people who love their Queen.

The Wife of Benedict Arnold.

BY JAMES PARTON.

We catch our first view of this unhappy lady on a bright May day, in 1778, when she took part in a famous and splendid pageant at Philadelphia. She was then a beautiful girl of eighteen—Miss Margaret Shippen—the daughter of an opulent and ancient Philadelphia family, and one of the reigning belles of that town. Her ancestors were among the first settlers of Pennsylvania, and her great-grand-father was the first Mayor of Philadelphia. In the course of time, the family had acquired great possessions; and, laying aside the Quaker garb, had become members of the Church of England. During the controversy between the thirteen colonies and the King, which ended in the Revolutionary war, Edward Shippen, her father, the head of the family, was inclined to the King's side.

It was May the eighteenth, 1778. For many months the British army had been quartered in Philadelphia, commanded by Major General Sir William Howe. The general had now been superseded, and was about to return to England. The officers of the army, a wealthy class who had nothing to do, seized the occasion of his retirement to amuse themselves by giving a grand festival in his honor; and this was the day upon which it was held.

The affair began with a grand regatta upon the Delaware river; or, rather, a long procession of galleys and barges, filled with officers and ladies, which were rowed slowly down the whole length of the city, in an avenue formed by the shore crowded with spectators, and a line of men-of-war and transport ships, gaily dressed with flags and streamers. At half-past four in the afternoon, the barges began to move, the oars keeping time to martial music; and when they had arrived opposite Market street they all lay upon their oars, while the band played "God save the King"; after which the soldiers gave three cheers. Continuing their course, the company were conveyed past the city to where a grand tournament was to take place; and it was in this portion of the entertainment that Margaret Shippen shone. A spacious field, surrounded by troops, had been prepared for the contest. Upon one side were stationed all the bands of music in the army. There were also two pavilions, with rows of benches one above the other, filled with the most distinguished ladies of the city.

On the front seat of each of these pavilions, were placed seven of the most beautiful young ladies Pennsylvania could boast. They were dressed in Turkish costume—trowsers, tunics, and turbans—and in their turbans they wore the favors with which they intended to reward the knights who were to contend in their honor. Among these lovely maidens sat Miss Margaret Shippen. One of the knights who figured in the tournament was Captain Andre, her familiar acquaintance. Little could either of them have thought on this bright day, how fatally their destines were involved.

The trumpet sounded. The herald appeared. The challenge was delivered, and the contest occurred; which ended to the satisfaction of all concerned. At the conclusion of the tournament, the company were ushered into a magnificent ball-room, decorated. we are told, by eighty-five mirrors, and lighted by thirty-four branches of wax candles. The ball was opened by the fourteen belles in Turkish dress, and their fourteen knights—one Lieutenant Sloper being the knight who led Miss Shippen out to the dance. At ten o'clock, the windows were thrown open, and a splendid display of fire-works was exhibited.

At twelve, large folding doors, which had hitherto been concealed, were suddenly thrown open, which revealed a gorgeous saloon, two hundred and ten feet long, forty feet wide, and twenty-two feet high, with three alcoves on each side. This was the supper room. Upon the tables there were twelve hundred dishes. As the guests entered the room, a great number of black slaves in oriental costume, ranged in two lines, bowed to the ground. This vast apartment was one splendor of wax lights, flowers, ribbons, flags, mirrors, and silver plate. One of the regular toasts of the occasion was "Miss Shippen and her knight." After supper, the company returned to the ball-room, and kept up the dance till four in the morning, reaching their homes about sunrise.

This festival as Major Andre remarks, was the most splendid ever given by an army to its chief. And little, indeed had that chief done to deserve it. An old officer of the British army, who perceived the folly of paying such extravagant honors to a general who had won no victories, said sadly: "What will Washington think of all this?"

Exactly a month from that day the British army evacuated Philadelphia, and away they sped across Jersey, with General Washington at their heels. A day or two after a body of American troops marched in, commanded by Gen. Benedict Arnold. "All was changed. The red coats had disappeared—blue coats were in the ascendant; and the new Yankee general was the foremost man in the city. Arnold, a vain, weak man, ever fond of display and luxury, appropriated to himself one of the handsomest houses in the town, where he set up a costly establishment, kept a great many servants, gave splendid dinners, and maintained a handsome equipage drawn by four horses—a scale of expense utterly incompatible either with his fortune or with his pay. No one, however, knew at the time that, to maintain this costly pomp, he was concerned in speculations unworthy of an officer and a gentleman, and sometimes used the public money that passed through his hands.

In inviting his guests, as the patriotic portion of the people remarked with surprise, he was as likely to select tories as whigs. He seemed to court the adherents of the king, and he frequently had at his table the wives and daughters of public enemies, who had been publicly proscribed, and had found refuge with the enemy in New York. Among the families who attracted his regard was that of Edward Shippen, and he was soon observed to pay particular court to his daughter, Margaret. Arnold was then a widower, thirty-eight years of age, just twenty years older than the young lady. Ere long he formally asked her hand from her father, and, her father consenting, he addressed the daughter, and they were engaged.

In the meantime Arnold had become so odious by his extravagance, and his insolent, overbearing conduct to the people, that Congress was obliged to take cognizance of the fact. On the very eve of his marriage he was ordered to be tried by a court-martial. Miss Shippen however, was true to her engagement, and married him five days after. The court-martial, as every one knows, sentenced him to be reprimanded by General Washington, and he was reprimanded accordingly.

"Our profession," said General Washington to him, "is the chastest of all; even the shadow of a fault tarnishes the lustre of our finest achievements." The least inadvertence may rob us of public favor, so hard to be acquired. I reprehend you for having forgotten that, in proportion as you had rendered yourself formidable to our enemies, you should have been guarded and temperate in your deportment towards your fellow-citizens. Exhibit anew those noble qualities which have placed you on the list of our most valued commanders. I will, myself, furnish you, as far as it may be in my power, with opportunities of regaining the esteem of your country."

This was more like an eulogium than a reprimand; but it did not touch the heart of Arnold, who went from the presence of his commander, not to regain the esteem of his country, but to betray that country.

A year passed away. He was in command at West Point, in correspondence with the enemy. Whether she shared her husband's secret during those months of preparation, will perhaps never be known with certainty. Just before the explosion of the treason at West Point, Arnold sent for his wife and child to join him; and I have seen the letter which he wrote to her on this occasion, telling her the best way of reaching him, and at what house she should sleep on the road. She had not been many days at West Point when the treason was discovered.

Arnold and his wife were seated at the breakfast table, with Hamilton, Lafayette and an aid. In the midst of the meal, a horseman alighted at the door; and, a moment after, a letter was placed in Arnold's hands, which informed him of his ruin. He controled his countenance, rose quietly from the table and beckoned his wife to follow him. They went up-stairs to their room, where lay their infant child; and there he told her that he was a ruined man, and must fly that instant for his life. She fell senseless to the floor. Leaving her there, he rushed from the room, hurried down stairs, sent some one to her assistance, and then returned to the breakfast room. He told his guests that General Washington was coming, and he must make haste to prepare for his reception. He mounted the horse of the messenger who had brought the letter, and galloped away.

Colonel Hamilton has left us an interesting account of Mrs. Arnold's demeanor after her husband's departure. He says she remained frantic all day, and accused every one who approached her of an intention to murder her child. She continued, he says, to rave until she was utterly exhausted. But Col. Burr, in his old age, was accustomed to give a very different account of the matter. He had known Mrs Arnold from her infancy, and he always declared that she knew all about her husband's treason from the beginning, and he used to relate a scene which he said he witnessed at the house of Mrs. Provost, whom he afterwards married, which somewhat confirms his opinion. Mrs. Arnold it will be remembered, was sent home to her father, escorted by a party of horse, and remained for a night at the house of Mrs. Provost, where Colonel Burr was. Mrs. Arnold, he said, burst into the room dressed in a riding habit, and was about to speak to the lady of the house when, seeing him in the dim light of the apartment, and not recognizing him, she asked anxiously:

"Am I safe? Is this gentleman a friend?"

Upon discovering who he was, she told them how she had deceived General Washington, Colonel Hamilton, and the other American officers by her frantic cestries; and she declared that she not only knew of the treason, but that it was she who had induced him to commit it.

This was Colonel Burr's story, to which the reader may attach the credit which he thinks it deserves. Arnold, himself, does not my that she was ignorant of his intention to surrender the fortress. In the well-known letter which he sent back to General Washington from the Vulture, he says:

"From the known humanity of your excellency, I am induced to ask your protection for Mrs. Arnold, from every insult and injury that a mistaken vengeance of my country may expose her to. It ought to fall only on me; she is as good and as innocent as an angel, and is incapable of doing wrong."

The authorities of Pennsylvania believed with Burr that she was a traitor. Her papers were seized, and although nothing was found in them to criminate her, she was not permitted to remain at her father's house, which she said she desired to do. Her father offered to give security that, during the war, she would write no letters to her husband, and send to the Government unopened, any letters she might receive from him. His offer was refused, and they ordered her to depart and not to return during the war. Being then obliged to join her husband in New York, she soon recovered her spirits, and shone in society, to use the language of the time, as "a star of the first magnitude." In England, too, whither she accompanied her husband, she attracted much attention for her beauty, and was much flattered in tory circles. The British government gave Arnold, in compensation for his American losses something less than seven thousand pounds, and settled upon his family a pension of a thousand pounds a year; which was to be continued as long as either the husband or the wife survived. Arnold, finding himself pinched upon an income of thirteen hundred pounds per annum, went upon a trading voyage to Halifax, with what success is not known. It was thought by some that he was glad to leave England for awhile, to escape the contempt in which he was held, even by those who employed him.

Mrs. Arnold lived to 1804, when she died, aged forty-three years. That infant son whom she held in her arms, as described above, entered the British army in 1798, rose to the rank of lieutenant-general, and was still living as late as 1851. One of her grand-children is a clergyman in the Church of England, and, it is said, a very worthy gentleman, who has conversed with American visitors upon his grand-father in a rational and becoming manner. Two of her sons settled in Canada, where they acquired competent estates, and were living in 1820.

Names of Diseases

BY DR. DIO LEWIS.

Spending an evening with a medical friend in New York, we fell into a conversation upon the names of diseases.

I contended that nothing had obscured the path of medical science as its nomenclature. That while names were convenient in conversation, they constantly misled the mind of the physician, and they had so misled the people—made them so rational and so unreasonable—that they became hopeful or dispairing over a word which means little or nothing, even to the physician.

For instance: A woman is sick. The friends all clamor for the name of her malady. The Dr. is hard pushed, he is not quite certain about the nature of the case himself. But he must give it a name, or quit. Suppose he were to say: "The trouble with this woman is, she's sick!" The friends would all cry out, "Of course; we know that; but what is the name of the malady?" The Doctor must give the name or lose their confidence. After he has given it, then he must stick to it, and doctor that malady!" The people all recalling just how Mrs. C. was treated when she was suffering with this same name, and how nicely she got well; and how Mrs. D. was maltreated and died. They watch and compare his treatment.

A dozen other Doctors are looking in at the windows, ready to report a score of marvelous cures with the same name. The friends are greatly disturbed, and the family Doctor is in hot water. The mischievous, dangerous interference of all these outside parties comes of naming of the disease.

"But," said my medical friend, "you can't get on a step, you can't converse with the family, you can't make your first perscription, without giving the case a name. If you will stay with me and go to the dispensary to-morrow, I should like to hear you diagnose a dozen cases, and perscribe for them without mentioning the names of their maladies."

I was delighted with the opportunity and accordingly accompanied my friend to his dispensary

The first case which presented itself I examined, and gave as my opinion that the woman was not well. I prescribed rest, good air, sunshine, more sleep, a clean skin, and good plain food.

The second was a young man with a red, bloated face. I examined his case carefully, and gave it as my opinion that he was sick. I prescribed exercise, good air, sunshine, more sleep, a clean skin, and good plain food.

In all I examined fifteen cases, and found they were not well. The Doctor had a blank in which the names of the diseases had to be written. I filled every blank with the words Not well! and prescribed in every case a careful observance of the laws of health.

During a subsequent ride the Doctor reopened the conversation with the remark, and although it was true that the names of the maladies often proved a serious embarassment, still it seemed to him that what I had said and done at the dispensary, would soon bring the art of medicine into contempt.

"You may think so," I replied; "I do not. I think it is the true way to redeem it from contempt. In a certain aspect we doctors are like the clergy. They spend years in studying the nomenclature and technics of Theology. I tell my friends among them it is all nonsense: these things only mislead the people: they dont help them into a higher life. I say to them: Take off your gloves and come right down here among us. Tell us that love to God and service of our fellow man is all there is of it, and then take hold naked-handed, and help us to organize every good work. Your technics and hard words sound big, and mark you as learned men, but they don't help us.

"Just so with us doctors. We spend years in studying the theories, names, and technics of medicine, all of which gives us a reputation for professional learning, and all that sort of thing, but the people are not helped. What they want — what they are dying for — is, that we should come down among them, and taking hold naked-handed, help them to organize a system of complete ventilation, introduction of sunshine into their houses, a better diet, cheap baths, available gymnasiums, and a score of other health appliances, which would quickly serve as that ounce of prevention which is better than a ton of cure."

"But," says some, "that sounds very well, but as a matter of fact, does not the name help us in the understanding of the case and in the treatment of the malady? What I mean," he says, is this: Suppose a man has tubercles on his lungs—is it of no consequence that the doctor should listen and ascertain the fact?"

Now, as the physical signs of pulmonary disease really constitute, the most definite, clear and complete acquisition of the medical profession for the last hundred years, it seems a great pity to disparage their value; but practically they been greatly overrated.

I made a special study of Physical Signs for several years, and perhaps I may say without egotism, that I have achieved a reputation for accuracy in diagnosis. But I think the practical value of these signs has been absurdly exagerated.

Here is a case of the left lung studded in its upper part, with tubercles. The fact is easily ascertained, for a trained ear will discover the exact condition of every part of the lung. But when it is discovered, what of it? It makes no difference in the treatment. We should use the same exercise, the same food, the same sunshine and bathing, the same management of sleep and other conditions of restoration, that we should in case we had a similar shortness of breath loss of flesh, and debility without the tubercles.

Nor does the fact influence our prognosis to any considerable extent, for we all know that persons are constantly restored to comfortable health with these tubercles in their lungs; while a great many patients, with the same general symptoms without tubercles, die of what is known as consumption.

The mistake after all is in regarding consumption as a disease of the lungs. It is a disease of the man, with one form of expression in the lungs. Diseases are all systemic, as argued in another place. It would hardly seem worth a serious refutation—this practice of looking up various local manifestations of systemic maladies, and then giving names to them, and pretending that these local expressions are the real diseases.

As shown in one of my works even a gunshot wound is not a local affection. An hour ago the mans pulse was 75 and his skin ruddy. The ball passed through his shoulder. Now his pulse is 100, and his skin pale. So far is the gunshot wound from being a local trouble, that our special attention must at once be given to the general condition. The final happy cure of the hole through the shoulder must be sought in a wise management of the system. There is no such thing as a local disease possible.

When a ship's crew is seized with yellow fever, and they hang out a flag of distress, we should doubt the sanity of the captain who, in passing, should send a boat's crew to cut down the flag of distress, with the idea that when that sign was cut down the fever on board was thereby removed.

But the captain is quite as sane as the doctor who, when nature hangs out a flag of distress in the shape of an ulcer at the ankle, or a catarrh in the nose, proceeds to apply some ointment to his ankle, or squirt some stuff up his nose, with the idea that if he can destroy the flag of distress the disease aboard the human vessel will be removed.

A local disease is impossible. A man is one, and not many.

Here is a cask of water. We fix it so that it is constantly and violently shaken. Now opening the barrel, we put in a drop of alcohol. The shaking goes on. Would you expect to find that drop of alcohol in one corner of the barrel when you opened it an hour after. No, it has mingled with every part of the water.

The blood which is now in my brain is, before I have finished writing this sentence, back in my heart, and now it is in my foot, and now it is in my liver, and now portions of it are in every part of my system! Do you think that one part of my system, fed from this blood, is likely to get up a little private disease on its own account, and maintain a sort of independent life?

Famous Preachers.

Of all the forms of literary or quasi-literary charlatanism, it is hardly too much to say that there is none so conspicious as that of the pulpit charlatan. To a large section of religionists,—"preaching the Gospel is the one great ordinance of christianity, to the exclusion of prayer, sacrament, and perhaps some other things besides. And to the preacher who has hit on the true standard of Evangelical orthodoxy much is both credited and forgiven. There is a story told of a candidate for ordination who, having displayed in his examination papers a blank ignorance of the first rudiments of theology, was seriously rebuked by the Bishop for presuming to undertake the instruction of others in subjects of which he knew so little, and was asked how he proposed to preach? The youthful aspirant, who was an Irishman, promptly replied, "Ah, my Lord, nothing can be easier; I guess I'm the boy to preach the saving truth of justification by faith." And it is extremely likely that if he had not very properly been refused ordination, his augury would have been justified by success. Another story, said to emanate from one of the most distinguished prelates on the Bench, has a similar bearing. He had set an ordination candidate to preach in his private chapel before himself and his chaplain. The preacher, whose conception of his duties of office was, like his Irish brother's, a very definite and somewhat narrow one, began at once by dividing his hearers in the outset into converted and unconverted—"Stop there, said the Bishop, "in which class do you place me?" Nevertheless, commencing with this not very recondite classification as to many persons like the bishop would be Metropolitans, very full of information, if it is not indeed a direct creation of good or bad discourse. The candidate being with many protestations of humility if accompanied with a little confusion in the case of the unelected, who are always apt to be deaf—the announcement of the consequence. "Dear Mr. ——," said the old woman remarked lovingly, "he goes to my heart; he goes to my heart." And thus we may see how the preacher's agreement with the theological views of his hearers, particularly when those views are [illegible] in favor of the royal road to heaven.

No doubt the [illegible] preponderates largely in many congregations, and there are preachers of the Rev. Charles Honeyman type, who are at least as much indebted to their acceptable manner to the skill of the hairdresser and flower-seller as to their sermon. Still this preponderance of manner, and more than tolerance, for the rhetoric of the pulpit is by no means confined to devotees in petticoats. The long list of preachers published every Saturday by the daily papers must, we suppose, be regulated by the law of supply and demand, yet certainly not a tithe of the names which ordinarily appear can make the slightest pretention to distinction of any kind; and the same remark applies to the copious reports of sermons which, on certain occasions, overflow column after column of the newspapers. It is a dreary task to pick the needles out of the bundle of hay,—What, then, is the secret of attraction? Often, no doubt, that the successful orator is ticketed for the fragrance of the pulpit, unlike the fragrance of the rose, is by no means independent of nomenclature. Just as one man may steal a horse while another is condemned for looking over a hedge, and tilled tillers of the veriest twaddle may have crowds hanging on his pompous platitudes, each one of them as ready to swear to his eloquence as each of the five hundred spectators were to swear that the monumental lion wagged its tail, while his less fortunate brother may discourse with the tongue of angels to empty benches. When a man is a "Right Reverend," or a Monsignore, not only does the mystical prefix cover a multitude of indubitable sins, but create a multitude of wholly non-existent virtues. Perhaps he has been lucky enough for some popular writer to have blown his trumpet, for some noble patron to have smiled upon him, or for him to have some connexion, real or supposed, with the aristocracy, and his fame is made. His finest nothings are words of wisdom, and a sonorous voice excels the music of eloquence in its most melodic ring. There are those of course who detect the imposture, but these hardly dare whisper the discovery under their breath. Not to every one is given the nerve of the Evangelical spectator who observed sorrowfully, when the preacher she had been listening to with rapture turned to the Lord for the ascription of glory at the end of his sermon, "I thought he had the gift of the Spirit, but alas, he has only the gift of the gab." And so strong is the presence of public opinion, or rather of vulgar error, that most people dare not even in thought rebel against it. We know how fixed epithets, inseparable as "rosy-fingered morn," have become attached to great names in theological literature. There is the "judicious" Hooker, the "imaginative" Taylor, the "brilliant" Hall, and the "honest old" Burnet, the "profound learning" of Barrow, the "sound sense" of South, the "keen logic" of Chillingworth, and the like. It would not be more difficult to upset any of these established reputations than to dethrone a preacher who has once by the exercise of fortune, who has once by the exercise of fortune, been set upon his pedestal till the odium of some newer idol consigns him to oblivion.

Meanwhile an anecdote, the authenticity of which we can guarantee, may serve to illustrate the critical value of newspaper encomiums on the pulpit. A certain popular preacher had been advertised to appear on an important occasion, but, as it turned out, he was called elsewhere at the last moment, and the intended sermon was not delivered. Eloquent it might, or might not have been if it had been preached, but, like the old speculation on what would have happened if Abraham had really killed his son, the question must for ever remain unsolved. However, next day a long account of the service at which the distinguished preacher was to have discoursed appeared in the newspapers, in which he was stated to have "delivered a most eloquent sermon."

The fact is, that really a good sermon is neither an easy nor a very common achievement, and they are comparitively few who appreciate it. To reflect with blind fidelity the prevalent tone of religious sentiment, and elaborate a theology which is but an echo of prevalent beliefs in your own particular circle, to display a gift of tongue not exactly Pentecostal, but which enables you to speak to all men—and more particularly to all women—in a language which they thoroughly understand, these are the graces, combined with a faultless attire, a serene self-possession, and a, let us say, seraphic smile, which ensure success. Originality of thought and genuine power of expression are essential ingredients of eloquence, but not of the average eloquence of the pulpit.—Saturday Review

An extraordinary occurrence showing the necessity for increased attention being paid to the ventilation of sewers, is reported from England. Several persons have been poisoned by noxious exhalations from a drain connected with a mill at Preston. The drain emptied itself into an adjoining water course, which in turn emptied itself into the river Ribble, but when the river was swollen from heavy rains, the sewage was backed up by the drain and prevented from getting away. Bible Society:—The annual meeting of the Peterborough Branch Society, will be held in the Canada Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening, when the Rev. Mr. Manly, agent, will deliver a lecture on "the Bible and the World."

There was a large fire in Ottawa, on the fourth instant. The loss is only partially covered by insurance.

An intoxicated Irishman lately killed a German at Horse Bluff Wisconsin. The Germans took vengeance on the saloon keepers, rather than on the drunken man considering that it was the whiskey not the man that did the evil.

Eighty days have been spent in hearing the Tickborne case, and the reports have exceeded 700 columns of the London Times.

The Norwood Register of the 29th inst., says. That on Saturday last Robert Aitken and Thomas Kennedy, both of Blairton, had a narrow escape from being killed while descending in a bucket, it loosened and both were thrown out falling over 20 feet. Kennedy was badly injured, and Aitken severely injured. We learn they are recovering.

Michael O'Rafferty, your communication is too personal But there are other reasons too, why it should not appear. It could do no good, and might do evil; and then, you don't give your real name.

Mr. D. Rose requests us to correct the statement that he was employed by Mr. John Rogers last year as a Forest Ranger. Mr. Rose says he was not so employed.—We, of course, gladly give Mr. Rose's version of the matter, but were told to the contrary by a gentleman who, we believed, knew all about it.

The Fair on Tuesday was thinly attended, We saw only three cows and one horse on the market ground, and very few people. The day was very cold, which may account for the absence of crowds of lads and lasses on the side walks.

House and Furniture for Sale.—Mr. T. Donnelly will offer his splendid new brick residence for sale, on Wednesday next; also his household furniture. This is one of the nicest situations in Peterboro. The building was erected by Mr. Donnelly with great care. The grounds are neatly laid out and improved, and is in one of the most desirable localities.

The cold on Tuesday was intense. At noon the mercury stood at 25° below zero, which we are informed was several degrees colder than in them morning.

We invite attention to Mr. R. Patterson's advertisement in this issue. Next week we will endeavour to give a description of his Poultry yard, and Strains of pure bred birds.

The Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora R. & M. Company advertizes for 200 hands to take out ore this season.—They have been at work all winter, but, we understand, are going to take out more of the metal this year than usual. They offer good wages: $1.10 to $1.25 per day.

Miss Gerrie will sing at her complimentary concert on the 18th inst., "The Harp that once through Tara's Hall's." "Come back to Erin," "Charlie is my darling," etc., etc. 10. 2in.

Accident.—We regret to learn that John Perrin, son of Mr. Jas. Perrin, of South Monaghan, had an arm broke on Wednesday 28th ult., by being caught on the shaft of a threshing machine. It appears that they were just commencing to thresh, and the couplingon the end next the gearing being out of order Mr. Perrin put his hands to fix it, when caught by a hole in his mit, his arm was wound round the shaft and broken. Had the machine been in full motion it is believed he would have been killed. Under Dr. King's care we understand he is getting along nicely.

Inquest.—An Inquest was held on Tuesday last, by Dr. Clegg of Burleigh, on the body of one Charles O'Brien who was killed in Burleigh on Thursday by a falling tree. Deceased was working at Webster's shanty, and while choping a tree it struck a dry tree in falling, a part of the dry flew back and striking him killed him instantly. He was a son of Mr. Michael O'Brien of Douro, and was only 19 years of age. The verdict of the Jury was in accordance with the above facts.

It is said that Mr. Fancher bought for Mr. Scott, but it will require the consent of the Commissioners of the Town Trust to agree to a transfer. Mr. Scott at the close of the sale offered Mr. Ormond $75. on his bargain.

16 Months for $1.00.—Now is the time to subscribe for the Rochester Musical Times, since those who send in their names now, will obtain for one dollar, the remaining four numbers of this year and the whole of the year following, which commences in May, 1872. Each number will contain two pieces of new music, worth from seventy-five cents to a dollar, besides all the musical news and literature. Who will not give $1 for twelve dollars' worth of new and fashionable music for the Piano and Cottage Organ, and an excellent musical journal thrown in. Be wise and subscribe.

A Grand Complimentary Concert to Miss Dora Gerrie, will be held in the Music Hall on Monday evening, March 18th, at which Mr. Galletly and 20 lady and gentlemen amateurs will sing. 10. 2in.

PARLIAMENTARY

The Legislative Assembly of Ontario was prorogued on Saturday. At noon Lieut-Governor Howland gave the Royal assent to 118 Bills—the work of six weeks—since the collapse of the Patent combination. Many of those Bills are of great public importance, and required the careful consideration of the Government. A measure was passed to secure the Independence of Parliament and Dual representation has been decided against. In future, therefore, after the approaching session of the House of Commons, no man will be allowed to sit and vote in both Parliaments, so that John Sandfield might well say he didn't care what they did in Toronto, as he would never sit there again.

The railway policy of the Government is perhaps the most important matter of the session. During the last session of the last parliament, $1,500,000 was set apart as a railway fund to encourage railway enterprise and to open up the country, especially the wild lands, it was said. In less than a month John Sandfield had promised more than the whole sum to pet schemes, so as to secure political support. The new government soon found that too grant to those enterprises only to which John Sandfield had promised, and to off all other enterprises, would be a great injustice to those sections of country that had not succeeded in securing John Sandfield's favor. Mr. Blake's Government, therefore, in order do justice to every section of the Province, had to ask an increase of $400,000, and also a yearly sum for 20 years, of $100,000. Their opponents style this extravagance and a waste of the funds, but it is the result of the extravagance of last session, a necessity trising out of the foolish way in which their predecessors had sought to secure the control of the funds four years longer by buying up the support of the railway companies.

It is true that many believe that the present railway mania will injure the country eventually, as the roads contemplated will not find sufficient to do to be profitable, but even so, the present Government cannot be held accountable for possible failures. They found the Province pledged to those works, and could not honorably refuse to carry out those pledges,

It may safely be said that no government has ever sought more fully to carry out the pledges of the party than has Mr. Blake's. Every measure advocated while in opposition they have secured already, not a promise is left unfulfilled.

The Crown Land policy too of his Government is more liberal than that of their predecessors Just abatements are to be made as soon as possible, and fair valuations obtained with a view to removing every cause of complaint in the new settlements, a sum larger than usual has been voted for the building and improvement of colonization roads—and a liberal Emmigration policy has also been devised. These things all in the space of six weeks, and still the opposition cry, "New men—men never before in any Government—young men." Judging however, from the manner in which they have discharged the duties of their office during the first six weeks, what will they be when in office four years! No Government can show so fair a record for the time.

Presentation.

On the afternoon of Friday last, the regular work of the Senior Department of Keene Public School, Section No. 4, Otonabee, was interrupted by two of the girls advancing towards their Teacher and presenting him with a beautiful Writing Desk, valued at $9.00, accompanied with the following address:—

ADDRESS.

Geo. H. Ash,

Sir,—We the pupils of your school do desire to show our respect to you, by presenting you this Writing Desk, as a token of our appreciation of the services rendered by you, and of the very proficient manner in which you have conducted the school in the past, hoping that your instructions in the future will be for our benefit and to your credit. We trust you will accept it with the same feeling of respect in which it is given.

Cassie McCann, Jane S. Hope.

During the reading of the address, Miss McDougall, the Assistant teacher, came in by request, and on entering they presented her with a Bible, as a token of their esteem and love for her.

REPLY.

Respected Scholars.—I gratefully acknowledge this beautiful present, as a mark of your respect for me, and of the appreciation of my labors in the past. While I have been your teacher, it has been my aim to secure your advancement in the various studies you have been pursuing, and I trust my exertions have not been without gain to you. I shall in future pursue, if possible, my duties more earnestly than heretofore, and if you will resolve to exert yourselves to the utmost in your studies, work with me, and remember what is taught you it will be to your benefit, besides reflect credit to yourselves and me.

I thank you, for request Miss McDougall, for that beautiful Bible you have presented her. To her, she says, it was a great surprise coming as it did from pupils belonging to another room.

My young friends, let us make up our minds to work dilligently in the future, so that Keene School may be a credit to the section, and make its mark among the schools of the County.

Geo. H. Ash.

Keene, March 4th, 1872.

Months Mind for late Vicar General Kelly.

Written for the Examiner.

On Wednesday, the 28th ult., St. Peter's Church was filled to overflowing by a sorrowing congregation, assembled for the purpose of fulfilling a, to them, melancholy duty, but one of love for the memory of one whom they had loved and revered—the late Vicar-General Kelly. The Church presented a soleman appearance indicating the mournful nature of the occasion; whilst the mournful faces of the congregation and their smothered sobs showed that there hearts were filled with sorrow, and they truly mourned for him who had so long been their Spiritual Father, and whom they would behold no more in this life. The altar was draped in black, and in the centre aisle stood the Catafalque draped with black and surrounded by lighted tapers.

At ten o'clock the church bell solemnly and mournfully tolled, each toll calling to the obseques those who many times had obeyed the call to assist at the Holy sacrifice of the Mass, when offered by him whom they were then called on to assist by their prayers.

Shortly after ten o'clock the very Rev. V. G. Farraly assisted by Fathers O'Connell, of Douro, Brown, of Port Hope, and Higgins, of Kingston, all dressed in the vestments which our church prescribes for such solemn occasions, commenced the celebration of a solemn High Mass. On the sanctuary were His Lordship Bishop Horan, Fathers O'Brien, Quirk, Stafford, Mackie, Coyle, and our Parish Priest, Rev. Mr. Lynch.

The different parts of the mass were sung by a very eficient choir.

After mass Rev. Mr. O'Brien, of Brockville, ascended the altar to deliver the panygeric.

The text selected was "Blessed is the death of the just." The Rev. Gentleman said that we were all here this day in accordance with an old precept of the church "It is a holy and wholesome thing to pray for the dead, that they may be released from their sins," and also in accordance with a practice of the church from time immemorial, to assemble on the thirtieth day after the decease of a member to pray for the repose of the soul of the departed, and to offer up the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass for that purpose. He did not intend to-day to enter into a formal panygeric of their late Pastor, Vicar-General Kelly, for the people of Peterborough had known him for years, and were aware of the many and great virtues he possessed. A true priest learned in ecosslastical lore, a perfect gentleman, a kind friend to all, ever ready to lend assistance to the weak, and to succour those who needed relief; devoted to the service of his God, he was indeed in everything the true type of the just man. His Lordship was there to-day, and so were the clergymen who surrounded him, and so he could say for himself he was there, to assist at the obsequies, because Vicar-General Kelly had always been the first to attend at the obsequies of deceased Priests. He is gone now to the happier realms above from this busy life of toil, turmoil, trouble and anxiety; gone to a future life of happiness, where there is no more trouble and anxiety. For the just man, and such was he, there is but a small passage to future happiness and that is spanned by death! Death which must come to all; the learned, the unlearned; the rich; the poor; the high, the lowly; it comes to all; it cannot be warded off; whether we think of it or not it comes.

Vicar-General Kelly had in his youth devoted his life to his God, and left the green hills of his home, and his friends. To go to a foreign land, there to study and become learned in the classic lore which he knew he would require to fulfil the duties of a priest, and when sickness had compelled him to return home, he had, on his recovery, with the object ever in view of devoting his life to God, gone to that seat of ecosslastical learning, where he drank deep in his heart that knowledge of the doctrines of his church required by a good priest; whence he departed a ripe scholar and a sound theologian, a reputation which he had fully sustained till his dying day.

Vicar General Kelly had spent more years in the parish of Brockville where he (the Rev. Gentleman) then lived, than in Peterboro, and his name was still green in the memory of the people of Brockville. They remembered him as the good, true and zealous priest who had so truly cared for their spiritual welfare. And at the time when the hand of God had fallen heavily on their native land, and vessels had bounded across the ocean, their freights of human beings reeking with pestilence, and when they had landed on the shores of Brockville making the air heavy with pestilence, then had the noble character of their good priest shewn itself. In the midst of death, where the fever and pestilence raged worst, at the bedside of the dying, in squalid huts amidst wretchedness, there was the priest administering the last sacraments of the Church; and was this not sufficient proof of his noble character?

He had loved the people of Peterboro, and had frequently said so. He had loved them and he had loved their children, and he had left a proof of his love for their children in the magnificent Schools which he had erected during his incumbency. If ever there was a just man it was Vicar General Kelly. He may have had his faults, but who has not. His faults, if any, were but few, and his virtues were great: Like the specks on the sun, extinguished by its superior glare—so were his faults concealed by the superior glare of his many virtues. The Rev. Gentleman said he could not end by saying anything more appropriate than what had been said by Vicar General Kelly when he was last addressing the people of Peterboro. "It is the attribute of a noble heart to forget the faults of others." The Rev. Gentleman concluded a brilliant peroration by calling on all for whom and for whose friends Vicar General Kelly had in his life prayed, to pray for the soul of Vicar General Kelly.

His Lordship, Bishop Horan, then entoned the "Libera," which was sung by the choir, after which the service concluded.

Continuation of Mr. Hunter's Letter.

We see along the barren sombre plains plenty of elk, wolves, and prairie dogs. Here dogs burrow into and live in the ground, they stand on their hind legs and stare and seem to say "we are lords of the soil," they are about the size of and look like a squirrel. We are now nearing Cheyenne where a R.R. meets the Pacific from Denvers and Kansas, it is a scattered looking place at which we stopped a little while, and purchased some supplies which are cheaper here than at any station since we left Omaha. After starting we appear to enter into the heart of a continuous set of hills, on which grows a bush whose medicinal qualities equals quinine. In the evening we reach Sherman Station, the highest point of land between the two Oceans, viz. 8203 feet above sea level, we passed some grass plots on which we are told many cattle feed.

Wednesday finds us winding our way among the mountains passing through tunnels and snow sheds. Here in long cuttings there are snow sheds of great length, built of timber crossed with lumber, to protect the track from snow and drifts, and fences are made for the same purpose, the posts crossing each other at an angle of forty-five degrees. All day we are crossing a barren tract of country completly of clay soil too.

Since leaving Platte River the weather has been cold and ice is seen all along. They had a heavy storm about three weeks ago and the effects of it yet remain. To-day is mild and warm yet far away in the dim horizon can now be seen mountains rearing their lofty heads above the nearer hills. We are now down to the altitude of 6685; at Bitter creek night is upon us, from here the road is thorough rough looking montain passes, and many curves to Green River Station. After leaving this station with two engines, we ascend a steep grade and the fences and sheds again appear, at the altitude of 6340 feet. From Green River to Bryan station, some 13 miles, the rise in grade is some two hundred feet. From Bryan to Pedimount the road passes over a high level plain with no vegetation and gravelly soil in places. We are now at the altitude of 7123 feet feet. We passed all these interesting places in the night from Bitter Creek, and daylight finds us at Pedimount Before reaching the summit the road winds through little valleys, with deep cuttings in the intervening ridges, miles of snow-shed and fences are passed, and such is the grade that the engines snort and puff and make but poor headway. From the summit looking over the vast expanse, a succession of low hills appear with here and there a lofty mountain peak. Away we go, and closing our view are lofty mountain peaks clad in all the grandeur of perpetual snow, with here and there a few stunted trees, and judging from the timber used on the road are of the balsam and spruce varieties. We pass onward through a narrow valley with a few signs of returning vegetation. But the same bleak aspect prevails, with gravelly soil. In the creeks over which we pass we see clear water for the first time in several days. At Evanstown we leave cars loaded with shingles and lumber that we have brought all the way from Omaha, and who knows but the same may have came from Canada, as quantities come from Chicago to Omaha.

To the right, a short distance from the track, appeared coal mines driven into mountain sides. We pass several stations, and O! what a country. The track in many places is hewn out of the solid rock. Away below is the valley, above is the towering cliffs. Bridges of great height, slender looking enough, yet seeming firm. We now descend some 600 feet in 3miles. The engineer shuts off steam, and down, down, we go along the declime, the breaks on firmly keeps her in check, and yet we go at great speed. Safely down, she whistles "off breaks," and away we go by steam again. The rocks passed are of a red color. We are now in a narrow valley and can see a flock of sheep. Here we pass Castle rock Station. In the narrow valley, about 20 rods wide we can see a little vegetation. And we saw a new mill on a very small stream. The grade here is also downward, and the speed is rapid. We soon arrive at Echo station, where we saw several houses and here and there patches of land, cultivated by a few settlers, who seem to settle in colonies of 6 or more houses together perhaps for mutual protection. They are contorted into every imaginable shape, with here and there one cropping out above his fellows a great height. In the road bed I think I saw limestone. Every moment the passengers imagine the iron charger will dash into the rock, but sudden turns in the road avert such a catastrophe. On the cultivated patches in the glens, stout willow fences wound round posts like basket work, protect the crops. A post near the track tells us that we are 1000 miles from Omaha. One thousand miles through what was a howling wilderness a few years ago, and the greater part of the way the road is awfully grand, requiring only to be seen to be appreciated. We arrived at Webber station where houses are to be seen in every conceivable style of architecture. Mules are plentiful as beasts of burden. And a lime-kith tells us they are improving their dwellings. Our road now leads along a nice little stream, the margin is pebbly, and the watter clear as crystal. But all the while the overhanging rocks tell us we are not far from the mountain side. The rock on the road side is the enduring granite, and of every variety of color. The valley is growing wider, and small hills are taking the place of the towering mountains. But they are only stepping stones to their gigantic brethern beyond them, whose summits are wrapped in the beautiful snow. We however move along, getting into a valley where cultivation is more or less attended to. But here I will leave you for the present, in my next I will give you some facts about life in California.

An Attempted Assassination of the Queen.

The news that an attempt had been made, on Thursday last, on the occasion of the Thanksgiving for the restoration to health of the Prince of Wales, to assassinate the Queen, took the people everywhere by surprise. This accompanied with the intelligence, that the would-be murderer is an avowed Fenian, roused the indignation of her subjects. Queen Victoria has always been admired as a model Queen, and an excellent woman. No word of hers was ever calculated to arouse a feeling of antagonism to her Rule. Her example has been worthy of her as a Queen, as a mother training her children in righteousness and loving mercy, and if she has erred, it has been on the side of clemency. Any mad attempt to take away her life will therefore be the more condemned by her own subjects as well as by the citizens of all civilized nations.

The following telegrams of the 1st of March give the particulars:

The assailant of the Queen was brought before the Police Magistrate at Bow street at noon to-day, for examination. The prisoner presented a very a boyish and not unpleasing appearance, and to-day was quite and unassuming in manner. He made no attempt at bravado, and listened quietly to the testimony without seeking to interrupt or contradict the witnesses. On being interrogated by the magistrate, he stated that his full name was Arthur O'Connor, that he was born in England, but his father was a native of Ireland. It was subsequently elicited that his grand-father was the well known Fergus O'Connor, one of the leaders of the Chartist movement.

John Brown, her Majesty's groom, Col Harding, equerry to the Queen, and Prince Leopold, testified to the circumstances of the assult, of which they were eye witnesses. Their statements do not differ materially from accounts already telegraphed to the Associated Press.

One of the policemen into whose custody O'Connor was delivered, sworo that the prisoner said that the reason he had not loaded the pistol was because it was broken, and that he repeadly exclaimed, "I wish to God I had succeeded!" that he vowed that he had intended to present a petition for Fenian, amnesty to the Queen in St Paul's Cathedral on Tuesday when she was surrounded by her ministers, that he then had pen and ink ready for her to sign the document with, and that he would have made the attempt, but the crond was so great that he could not get near her Majesty.

Two papers found on the prisoner when he was seized were produced in court, and read; one pardoning all Fenian convicts, in substance, is as follows:

"I, Victoria, Queen, by the Grace of God, make the following declaration:

Whereas—There are now confined in the various prisons throughout the Kingdom, a number of Irishmen known as celebrated Fenians; whereas—they were imprisoned with my sanction, having rebelled and conspired against the Crown and to weaken and destroy my power. And whereas—Sympathizers with these men have petitioned for their pardon, and notwithstanding they are now unliberated. I, Victoria, Queen, &c., do grant a full pardon to each and every Fenian prisoner, unconditionally, and although my agreement is made under fear of my life, I will not depart therefrom. Dated February 22, 1872.

The other document is a commutation in advance of the punishment of the prisoner for his present act from hanging to shooting; and is dated February 27.

At the conclusion of the examination the prisoner was committed for trial at the Assizes, and taken back to jail under a strong escort. It is evident that the papers found on the prisoner are his own work, and the idea of all who heard them read was, that they are the product of a deranged mind.

The Queen left Buckingham Palace today for Windsor. She was met by nearly the whole population of the place, in the warmest demonstrations of loyality and affection.

London, March 1.—Her Majesty's proposed visit to this country will be of two weeks duration.

It is now stated the Prince of Wales will go to the South of France instead of the Italian lakes. A special from Paris says that he is expected to arrive in that city on Sunday next en route to Nice.

The Queen has written a letter to Gladstone saying that she is anxious to express publicly her own personal and very deep sense of the reception she and her and her dear children met with on Tuesday from her subjects. Words are too weak for her to express how deeply she was touched and gratified by the immense enthusiasm and affection of all from the highest to the lowest. She returns her heartfelt thanks to the whole nation and declares that she herself and all the members of her family will ever affectionately remember the Day of Thanksgiving.

The assault upon the Queen yesterday by the man O'Connor is the theme of universal comment and condemnation. In the morning journals they draw comparis on between the act of this one individual and the immense demonstration of loyality made by the entire people of London as well as other demonstrations throughout the United Kingom of Tuesday last. Previous to the attack upon Her Majesty O'Connor sealed the iron sealing, ten feet in hight, which surrounds the court yard of Buckingham Palace. When approaching the carriage of the Queen he first saw Lady Churchill, the lady in waiting, who was riding with Her Majesty, and was about to assault her but he soon discovered his mistake and turned upon the Queen. Her Majesty's groom, John Brown, who was sitting behind her carriage, upon witnessing the action of O'Connor, leaped from his horse and arrested and disarmed the assailant. Prisoner was handed over to the authorities and will be brought to Bow street on this morning, where a preliminary examination will be held.

The difficulty arising out of the American Claims for Indirect damages on account of the Alabama depredations is likely to be amicably settled. Secretary Fish has returned, an answer to Earl Granville and the Washington correspondent of the New York Times, says:

It is perfectly safe to say from what is known of Mr. Fish's reply, that its reception by the English Cabinet will not be the cause of war. On the contrary, so far as the tone of the reply is concerned, it is not only eminently pacific, but it is very suggestive, by pointing out a way of escape by its present unpleasant dilema. Much regret and some surprise is expressed in the reply that England should so interprot the treaty as to lead to a possible re-opening of the questions supposed to be ADULTERATION OF LARD.—A Canadian druggist lately obtained some lard from a respectable pork dealer the article being noticeable on account of its extreme whiteness. In using a portion of it in preparation of ointment of nitrates of mercury the color became gradually deeper, till it was of a slaty hue. The lard was tested, and found to contain a large portion of lime and it was subsequently stated by a man in the trade that the mixing of two per cent. or more milk of lime with melted lard is a common practice. The combination of the alkali with some portion of the fat saponifies, and allows 25 per cent. of water to be stirred in without being detected.

TO EXTRACT INK FROM COTTON.—Saturate the spots with spirits of turpentine, and let it remain several hours; then rub it between the hands. It will crumble away, without injuring either the color or the texture of the article.

Mr. Punshon claims the merit of having produced a gun-cotton which he can secure any required explosive property. At the same time, he state that the tendency to decomposition, and consequently of spontaneous combustion is removed. This is effected by covering the fibres of gun-cotton with sugar, and by impregnating the cotton with chlorate of potash, or some similar salt.

The Alabama question presents no material change. The general opinion on both sides of the Atlantic is to the effect that there will be no difficulty.

ELOPEMENT AT BRANTFORD.—An extraordinary elopment took place at Brantford the other day. A gay lothario, a machinist by trade, captivated the hearts of two fair young damsels, and not being able to decide between them, gallantly determined to take them both to the land of love and liberty. The trio left there early on Saturday for Buffalo.

The first passengers who reached Chicago from San Francisco by railroad for 28 days arrived there on Thursday night. They numbered about 150, and came from Omaha via Rock Island Road. They denounce the managers of the U. P. road in emphatic language, for the bad treatment they claim to have received at their hands.

THE BLAKE-WOOD COMMITTEE.—The Blake-Wood Committee met again on Friday morning, and passed the following resolution: "Resolved that no corrupt inducement or offer was made to the Hon. E. B. Wood as a member of this House, to resign his position as Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, by the Hon. E. Blake, while a member of the Opposition in the House of Assembly." The resolution was ordered to be reported to the House.

The number of mercantile failures in the United States during 1871 is reported at 2915, the aggregate amount of liabilities being $85,252,000. In 1870 there were 3551 failures, aggregating $88,242,000 liabilities and in 1869 there were 2799 failures, with $74,054,000 liabilities. In 1867 the aggregate liabilities of failures during the year were over $97,000,000; in 1861, over $207,000,000; in 1857 over $291,000,000. Considering the great growth of the country, the showing for 1870 and 1871 is not so bad.

Man's Inhumanity.

A NEGRO BOY CRUELLY TORTURED.

Susquehanna Depot, Pa., Feb. 13.—The proverbial hatred of certain classes to negroes has been illustrated at this place by a most fiendish and unheard of act. A few days since there came here from Hawley, Penn., a negro boy, about thirteen years old By his quaint and amusing actions he became quite a favourite among the railway men, and they purchased a boot black's outfit for him, and started him in business. He was altogether harmless, and gave no one cause for enmity against him, at least such enmity as the sequel showed existed, On Saturday night the boy went into one of the company's buildings and slept. Three labourers came into the building in the morning. Taking a can of kerosene oil, they saturated the boy's pantaloons with its combustible contents, and then touched a match to it. In an instant the flames flashed up, and the poor little waif awoke to find himself enveloped in fire Others had entered the building by that time, but notwithstanding the shrieks and entreaties of the boy, no move was made to extinguish the flames. At last one of the bystanders dashed a pail of water on him, which only aided to their fury. Finally, when it was seen that the boy was almost exhausted, one of the three who had set fire to him threw an overcoat over his body, and others, attracted by his shrieks, rushed in and smothered the blaze. A physician was sent for, and an examination of the boy disclosed that his legs were burned to a crisp. His right thigh was burned clear to the bone, and other parts of his persons were sickening to contemplate. The doctor gave it as his opinion that the injuries must prove fatal. The persons guilty of this barbarous deed had not been arrested at last accounts, but measures are being taken to that end. The indignation of the people knows no bounds.

NEW DOMINION MONTHLY.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1872.

This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. It aims at being a Canadian Magazine, both in the character of its matter, and in adening the way for Canadian writers. In the latter field it has up to the present been a failure, so far as remunerating its contributors and its publishers is concerned; but as its circulation is fair, we are in hopes that a good advertising patronage may yet put it on paying basis. We do not our Canadian homes can find elsewhere, so interesting and so Canadian, and we ask all Canadians to sustain it. Its circulation is 3,500. New Dominion Monthly 1,50 per annum in advance, Old subscribers sending the name of a new subscriber with their own will get the two for $2. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientefic physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certian fixed proporations of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combinations. This is the preparation, of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop, whereas with other preparations nearly all the alcbol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to very good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to hush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have been converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

Farm Life.

How ye the farmer at his plough,
As ye were riding by?
Are wearied 'neath the noon-day toil,
When the summer suns were high?
And thought you that his lot was hard,
And did you thank your God
That you and yours were not condemned
Thus like a slave to plod?

Come, see him at his harvest home
Where garden, field and tree,
Conspire with flowing store to fill
His barn and granary.
His healthful children gayly sport
Amid the new-mown hay,
Or proudly sail with vigorous arm
His rake as best they may.

The Harvest Giver is his friend,
The maker of the soil;
And earth, the mother, gives them bread,
And cheers their patient toil;
Come join them round their wintry hearth,
The heart-felt pleasures see;
And you can better judge how blest
The farmer's life may be.

Agricultural.

HEALTHFUL HINTS FOR HOUSE WIVES.

TO GET RID OF RATS.—Coats kept about barns and granaries will effectually drive every rat from the premises. The smell of the goat is very obnoxious to the rats.

HARD SOAP.—Five pails soft soap, two pounds salt and one pound resin. Simmer together, and when thoroughly fused, turn out to shallow pans so as to be easily cut.

POOR CAKE.—One pound of pork chopped fine; one pint of boiling water, poured on the pork; one cup of molasses; two cups of sugar; one teaspoonful saleratus; one half pound raisins; one-half pound currants; eight cups of flour; cinnamon, cloves and allspice.

KEEPING HONEY.—To keep honey all the year round, let it run through a fine sieve to separate it from particles of wax, then boil it gently in an earthern vessel, skim off the foam which gathers on top, and cool it in jars. After covering there tightly, set them away in a cool cellar.

FRENCH ROLLS.—One pint of potato sponge, that is, the same as made for light bread; 3 tablespoonful of sugar, 1 table spoonful melted butter, 1 egg; mix with flour to make a soft dough. When light, roll out in the shape of a saucer, and turn one half over on to the other. Let them rise again in the pan. Bake in a quick oven. Of course there will be yeast in your sponge.

SOFT GINGERBREAD.—Four eggs, 1 cup of lard, 4 cups of flour, 1 cup of sour milk; in which dissolve 1 teaspoonful of soda, 2 tablespoonfuls of ginger, 2 cups of molasses. Mix the molasses, lard and ginger together first; then beat the eggs and add them, then the flour; last of all the sour milk and soda. Bake slowly in just a tolerably warm oven, as it burns very quickly if the oven is too hot.

MUFFINS FOR BREAKFAST.—One pint of milk and water—one tablespoonful of melted lard—one egg, little salt, half cupful of yeast, flour enough to make stiff batter. Set to rise over night; in the morning beat the oven hot; let your muffins rise in a baking pan; heat and grease them; half fill them with the batter. Bake till a light brown. Some like them split open and buttered before sending to the table; break them open by hand as a knife will make them heavy. This quantity will make a breakfast for three or four persons. Double the quantity if you like.

WASHING FLUID.—Five pounds of sal-soda, one pound of borax, one-half pound of fresh unslackned lime, four ounces of liquid ammonia. Pour one gallon of boiling water upon the soda and borax; when it is dissolved and has cooled, add the ammonia. Slack the lime in one gallon of hot water and let it stand until entirely settled, when the clear fluid must be carefully poured off. Turn it upon the solution of soda and borax, and add to the mixture eight gallons of cold water. Put the clothes to soak the night before washing day, with six tablespoonfuls of this fluid to a tub full of clothes.

HOW TO CURE HAMS.—For each ham of average size, 1 teaspoonful of pulverised nitre (saltpetre;) 1 spoonful of ground capsicum (cayenne pepper;) 2 to 3 oz. of pulverized brown sugar.

Sprinkle half the nitre on outside; rub well, first with nitre and then with salt; cram the hock with salt. Turn the ham over, sprinkle first with nitre, next pepper, next sugar. Lay the ham on a board to drain, and pile as much salt as the ham will hold. After 3 or 4 days draining, lay down the hams in large casks or boxes to remain 4 or 5 weeks, and see in the meantime it they take the salt well.

Choose a dry day to hang; and brush off the salt; let them remain hanging 2 or 3 days before smoking. Smoke 3 or 4 weeks; hickory wood is best; take down on a bright day and sprinkle with black pepper. Wrap in thick paper, put each ham in a canvas sack—cotton sheeting is very good. Whitewash the sack, and hang in a cool dry place till needed.

Pruning Fruit Trees.

As there is at present but little work that can be advantageously performed out of doors—we mean so far as floriculture is concerned—and as the thorough practice of "pruning" is but little attended to or thought of by amateurs, we feel that we shall be rendering the most practical service for the time in giving some plain and acknowledged suggestions upon the subject. The mystery of pruning consists in being well acquainted with the mode of the bearing of the different sorts of trees, and forming an early judgement of the future shoots and branches and many other circumstances, for which a few principal rules may be given; but there are particular instances which cannot be judged of but upon the spot. These depend chiefly upon practice and observation. Peaches nectarines, apricots, &c., all produce their fruit principally upon the young wood of a year old—that is, the shoot produced this year will bear the year following; so that in all these trees a general supply of the best shoots of each year must be everywhere preserved at regular distances from the bottom to the extremity of the tree on every side; but in winter pruning or general shortening, less or more, according to the strength of the different shoots, is necessary in order to promote their throwing out an effectual supply of young wood the ensuing summer in proper places for training for the succeeding year's bearing.

Vines also produce their fruit always upon the young wood shoots of the same year, arising from the eyes of last year's wood only, and must, therefore, have a general supply of the best regular shoots of each year, which, in winter pruning, must be shortened to a few eyes—in order to force out shoots from the lower parts only, properly situated to lay in for bearing the following year. Apple, pear, plum and cherry trees bear principally on spurs arising in the wood—of from two or three or ten or twenty years old—the same branches and spurs continually bearing a great number of years, so that, having once procured a proper set of branches in the manner already directed to form a spreading head, no further supply of wood is wanted, than some occasional shoots now and then to supply the place of worn out or dead branches. The above mentioned spurs or fruit buds are short robust shoots of from about half an inch to one or two inches long—arising naturally first towards the extremity of the branches of two or three years old, and as the branch increases in length the number of fruit buds increases accordingly. As this is the time for dressing your pruning, much good may be done by setting about it in the right way, as much damage is done by taking a wrong method. Practical gardeners know that a knowledge of pruning is of far higher importance than is usually supposed by the unprofessional. We see, therefore, very desirous of impressing on the minds of amateurs the importance of studying pruning, especially as this is just the time and season for it.

Health Hints.

BY DR. W. W. HALL.

THE GREAT PANACEA,

that is, the best "cure-all" for dis-ease, is comprised in three words, and in all ordinary circumstances can be procured without money. Perhaps that is the reason, together with the absence of all that is mysterious, why very few, thereby, will avail themselves of the remedy. It is, perhaps, very safe to say that will arrest more diseases, will cure more bodily maladies, than all the medicines ever swallowed. Add cold to death to all vegetable as well as animal life, the first step, in ordinary cases, is to keep the body comfortable with, which is cool, pure atmosphere [illegible]. This is, cover up well the [illegible] and windows, or a fire-place, [illegible] the extent of having [illegible] sixty degree or less [illegible] a temperature colder, [illegible] be not actually desirable, for if [illegible] and the system is weak, inflammation of the lungs—that is, Pneumonia [illegible] incurred—a disease which often [illegible] a week.

There is still a tendency to chilliness, pure hot water can be drank to any desired extent, to very great advantage, as it promotes internal heat, throwing it outwards, carrying with it large quantities of morbific matters, thus helping to purify the blood. For ages it has been known that hot drinks promote perspiration, and that a "good sweat," in the language of the uneducated, does more good in multitudes of cases than all physic.

REST

of body and mind, in case of disease, is of incalculable value. The animal creation instinctively court rest as the very first means of guidance of bodily injury, and they get well without medicine. Hence, in all ordinary ailments, muscular rest, that which is obtained by lying down on the back in bed, is a very great aid in restoring to health, if persevered in. But the misfortune is, that with multitudes time is money; it is a man's great aim and desire; his only means of keeping his wife and children from starving. Hence it is, that an intelligent and humane physician often gives medicine promptly, when he knows very well that rest would be a better and a more enduring cure, because his patient cannot spend the time to get well by simple rest. Then, also, he gives medicine to others in cases where he would not take it himself; he prefers to take time rather than physic. But there is another form of rest far more valuable as a restorative, than mere muscular rest: it is the blessed rest which is given by

SLEEP.

The disposition to healthful sleep is one of the most encouraging signs in the physician's eye, that a man is taking for the better, when the patient has been racked with suffering and pain to the very verge of the grave, in the slow progress of wakeful nights and uneasy spells of anguish. The increasing ability to sleep is the first sign of approaching cure of insanity, as it is the want of sleep which drives multitudes to the mad-house. Thus it is that the most experienced nurses seek to prevent all noises in the sick chamber, all slamming of doors, all hasty opening and shutting of windows, all careless movements of chairs, furniture and utensils near the bedside. Thus also is it, that a good nurse never allows a sleeping invalid to be waked up, however important the physician may think it to be that the invalid should be taken.

But there is another form of rest, which, if not promoted, everything else will always be unavailing: it is the rest of the stomach. It is as weak in proportion as the other parts of the body; takes on its proportional share. If a man is so debilitated that he can scarcely turn himself in bed, can scarcely raise his arm, can scarcely speak loud enough to make himself heard, it would be absurdity itself to give him a task to perform which would require the strength of a well man. So it is with the stomach of an invalid—much food should be given as is easily digested, and comparatively small amounts at a time. But little and often, is a safe rule for the sick chamber. But "how often?" is of the very utmost importance. What would be often for one, would be seldom for another. The best general rule is, wait until the patient feels that some particular article of food would taste good; get that article as soon as possible; that article, and no other, except it be a little bread. There is not much danger that an invalid will eat too much of one article of food; it is the variety of the table which promotes gluttons; but stop while yet it tastes good, and eat no more of anything for at least three or four hours, and not even then, unless there is a decided call for something. All the solid food of an invalid should be cut up as fine as pea-sized pieces, chewed very slowly, and not swallowed until it has been reduced to the finest pulpy consistence. The difference between a strong stomach and a weak one is, that a single article of food in small particles in digested much sooner than if there were several.

CLEANLINESS.

is an element in the cure of disease that need not be insisted on; it is scarcely possible to be carried to excess; cleanliness in person, of skin, of scalp, of clothing, of bedding, of room, of pantries, of closets, of utensils. Remnants of food, bottles of medicine, standing water, however fresh from the spring—none of these, no perishable material, should be allowed to remain one minute in the sick chamber, after its use. By all means, let the air be cleanly; let it come in from the out-doors. If a lamp were kept burning in a fire-place during night, even in the hottest summer, the purity of the atmosphere would be greatly promoted, because bad air sinks to the floor, and naturally flows toward the open fire-place.

Do Good To Others.

"Who blesses others in his daily deed,
Shall find the healing that his spirit needs;
For every flower in others' pathway thrown,
Comfort its fragrant beauty on his own."

If this be true the proprietors of the Canadian Pain Destroyer" must be recipients of blessings innumerable. Its the safest and most sure remedy for sudden colds, rheumatism, burns, sprains, &c., and removes all kinds of pains almost direct! it is applied. 25 cents per bottle. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A common cough or cold should never be trifled with, often when neglected it is converted into a serious and generally fatal pulmonary disease. The more prudent, aware of this, promptly use "Bryces Pulmonic Wafers" a curative which has sustained its reputation for over twenty years—they are always efficacious and exert a most beneficial influence on all the Bronchial and pulmonary organs. Sold by all Druggists and country dealers. Price 25 cts. per box.

VENT SCRIBBLE.—Horse dealers who are supposed to know what effects their interest purchase "Dudley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy" by the dozen and feed it to their horses for the purpose of improving their condition, which it always does—others should profit by their example—Remember the name, and don't buy the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada Sold by all medicine dealers.

If your horse is lame, sore or galled, you should use Johnson's Anodyne Liniment: wash the part with castile soap and warm water, rub dry, with a clean cloth, then apply the Liniment, rub in well with the hand.

Have the readers of the Examiner ever used any of Parson's Purgative Pills? If not, why not? they are the best family physic, besides being the greatest anti-bilious remedy known in the country.

Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is prescribed by the first physicians in every city and town where it has been introduced, and it is a thoroughly orthodox preparation.

WITH THE WHOLE RANGE of tonic and alterative medicines known, none is entitled to more consideration than the Peruvian Syrup. In all cases of enfeebled and debilitated constitution it is the very remedy needed. The most positive proof of this can be adduced.

A dishonest and negligent artist by severing passages from their context may make the best book appear to condemn itself. A book, thus unfairly treated, may be compared to the laurel—there is honor in the leaves but poison in the harvest.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cases are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their power to cure every complaint they are recommended for, and to make them the best physic yet known for the human family, is unparalleled by anything we have ever before seen or heard of. Sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal forces to purify the blood and stimulate into healthful action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, one should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Dizziness, Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the morbid action or remove the obstruction which causes it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but little is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Sour Stomach, Pain in the Back and Loins, they should be continued, as required, to change the habit of body the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect in a few hours.

As a Dinner Pill, they are unequalled, promoting digestion and relieving the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the liver and bowels into healthy action, thereby purifying and invigorating the system. Hence a medicine is frequently taken when no serious complaint exists. One who feels himself well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better in their character and removes effects of their own operation.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so wide, and such universal confidence as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For nearly a series of years, and among most of the nations it has from higher and higher in the confidence of mankind, as its virtues have become known. Its character and power to cure the various diseases of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of diseases and to young children, as the safest and most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and for the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for fear.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often entirely cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of these remedies, than assure the public that its quality is maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure all these and all other complaints, Ancient or Modern, originating in Fever, no other mine of medicinal wealth can produce a remedy so positive and potent. The number and dangerous character of the diseases of the Western valley, the Southern States, and the Islands of the ocean, make a demand for a reliable remedy and protection against them, of the highest importance to the health and life of the people. Hence the public need not be told that the remedy for these diseases is of the greatest value to the people of those countries, and where they are to be found. Every one knows, and every one should have it.

Unprincipled persons, either ignorant or unscrupulous, will, no doubt, attempt to counterfeit this well known remedy, but the genuine can be tested by taking the BOTTLE FREE in hand.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Diseases and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, needs no more public praise, as its remarkable cures, especially in these complaints, have made it known all over the world.

PRICE, $1.00 PER BOTTLE.

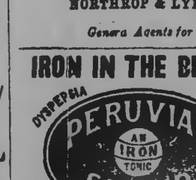
IRON IN THE BLOOD



MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, or Iron Dissolved in Pure Vital Electricity, is assimilated with the blood in the simplest form. It contains the greatest quantity of Iron in the most effective form, and is the only remedy in which Iron does not Blacken the Teeth, Cause Headache, or Constipate the Bowels. Being entirely free from Alcohol, it does not stimulate to create a fictitious strength, but by its Tonic properties it gives permanent vigor to the whole system. It is the great remedy for all diseases of the blood, or accompanying a low state of the system. Being free from any form of alcohol, its effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but on the contrary, imparts a permanent, healthful tone and vigor to all the parts of the system, thereby giving up an Iron Constitution. Thousands have been changed from the weak, suffering creatures, scarcely living, to healthy, and strong men and women; and we confidently and reasonably ask every sufferer to give it a trial.

Each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

NEW DOMINION MONTHLY.
PROSPECTUS FOR 1872.

This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. It aims at being a Canadian Magazine, both in the character of its matter, and in edening the way for Canadian writers. In the latter field it has up to the present been a failure, so far as remunerating its contributors and its publishers is concerned; but as its circulation is fair, we are in hopes that a good advertising patronage may yet put it on paying basis. We do not see our Canadian homes can find elsewhere, so interesting and so Canadian, and we call all Canadians to support it. Its circulation is 6,000. After January 1st, only 1.50 per annum in advance, or as before stating the name of the post office to which it will be sent. Address all letters relating to the magazine to John Dougall, Montreal.

Select Poetry.

A Winter Song for the Sleigh.

BY MRS. C. P. TRAILL, LAKEFIELD.

From the New Dominion Monthly.

Hurrah for the forest—the wild pine-wood forest!
The sleigh bells are jingling with musical chime;
The still woods are ringing,
As gaily we're singing,
O merry it is in the cold winter time.

Hurrah for the forest—the dark pine-wood forest!
With the moon stealing down on the cold sparkling snow;
When with hearts beating lightly,
And eyes beaming brightly,
Thro' the wild forest by moonlight we go.

Hurrah for the forest—the dark waving forest!
Where silence and stillness for ages have been;
We'll rouse the grim bear,
And the wolf from his lair,
And the deer shall start up from his thick cedar screen.

O wail for the forest—the proud stately forest!
No more its dark depths shall the hunter explore;
For the bright golden grain
Shall wave free o'er the plain,
O wail for the forest—it's glories are o'er!

The Refugee.

A TALE OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

BY JAMES H. DANA.

During the war of the revolution, the lower counties of New Jersey were infested by a set of desperadoes, passing under the name of refugees, who, in the absense of the wigs in camp, plundered and insulted their defenceless families. A band of these men became particularly notorious on the little Egg Harbour river, and that section of the country is yet rife with legends of their misdeeds. A party, equally numerous and even more lawless, for a long time devastated the settlements along the Maurice river. Our story relates to this latter.

It was at the close of a beautiful day in the early part of October, that an athletic young man, whose frank and good humored countenance was a passpoor to the acquaintance of strangers, approached a clearing not far from the present decayed village of Dorchester. The house was but one story, built of thick, hewn logs, and surrounded by scanty fields, in which the stumps of the original forest trees were yet visible. But everything about the place had an air of neatness, which was increased, when, pushing open the door, he entered the large, comfortable kitchen, with its nicely scoured floor, and its dresser on which were arrayed in bright rows the pewter plates. His footsteps had scarcely sounded on the floor before a light figure sprang toward him, and the next instant was locked in his arms.

"God bless you Mary," he said, as he parted the hair fondly from her forehead, and stooping kissed the fair brow.

The girl looked up into his face, and said half enquiringly, half positively,

"You have come to stay—have you not? Do now, give up running your sloop until things become more settled. You will be captured yet," she continued, as her lover shook his head, "and then, if thrown into those dreadful prison ships at New York, you will never get back."

Notwithstanding the imploring tone in which she spoke, her lover still shook his head.

"Nay, dearest, your woman's fears alarm you without cause. There is no danger. The English ships have left the Delaware, and I must make the old sloop pay me now, for your sake."

She buried her face in his bosom to hide the blushes at this allusion. He continued cheerfully.

"Now can you not find me a supper? You boast of your housekeeping, you know; and yet I'll venture we are almost as good cooks on board. At any rate, we are a little more hospitable when we see a visitor who has come miles to meet us, and walked all the way."

He said this in a playful tone, and the girl immediately hastened to set the supper table. His eye followed her graceful movements, and they conversed together, as lovers only converse, during the half hour in which the preparations for the meal were going on. At length the other members of the family came in, and the conversation became general.

It was yet early, however, when the young man rose to go. The girl followed him out of the door.

"Why so soon?" she said.

"It is high tide, and I have already overstayed my time," he said. "But in a few days I shall be back, and it may be I will be so successful that there will be no necessity for going again."

"God grant it may be so," she said frequently, "I feel a presentiment of some danger impending over you.—There is Hogan, the refugee—"

"He owes me ill-will, I know," said the lover, "ever since you preferred me to him. But he has left this part of the country, and I should never fear him in a fair fight."

"But he was always stealthy and mean; and would attack you secretly."

"Oh! but there is no fear of him," gaily said the lover. "Believe me, I shall be back in less than two weeks, and then—"

He pressed the blushing girl to his bosom, kissed her again and again, and then with a hurried embrace tore himself away. When he had crossed the road and was just entering the woods, he turned and waved his hat. The girl was still standing there on the watch. She kissed her hand to him, and the next instant he had vanished from her sight.

But for many minutes she continued to gaze on the spot where he had disappeared; and so intent was the reverie into which she fell, that she did not notice the approach of a third party, in the person of a young man of the neighborhood, whom popular rumor declared to be one of her suitors.

"Good evening, Ellen," he said.—"you are late out here to-night."

"Ah! is it you, James? Good evening," and she frankly extended her hand. "Will you walk in?"

"No, I thank you—I haven't but a minute to stay." There was a short silence, when he added, "Have you seen Hogan lately? He has come back, I suppose you know."

"No—I did not know it," said Ellen, her heart beating violently.

"I believe he and Briggs are no great friends—Hogan swears he will have revenge on him, though I don't know for what. Do you?"

Ellen read the man's heart in those words. He was a rejected suitor, and suspecting her love for Briggs, had visited her expressly to torture her by this intelligence.

"How know you this?" she said, affecting as much calmness as possible. "Have you seen Hogan lately?"

"He was about this morning, but he has gone down the river to his old place. They say he has a dozen men there, refugees may be like himself.—By the bye, have you seen Briggs today? I heard he sailed with the morning tide."

Ellen turned pale at this intelligence, for her woman's quick wit perceived at once, by the meaning tone of her visitor that Hogan had determined to waylay her lover, and that her informant, from a feeling of base revenge, had come to apprise her of it after he thought it would be too late for any notice of the attack to be conveyed to Briggs. She had the presence of mind not to show her agitation, nor did she undeceive the speaker as to the time when her lover sailed. She adroitly turned the conversation.

"Won't you walk in?" she said, "the nights are getting chilly. Father and mother are yet up, I believe."

"No, thank you," said the young man, moving off, "I must be going.—Good bye."

Ellen watched him with a fluttering heart until he had disappeared in the darkness, when she burst into tears.—But suddenly dashing them away with her hand, she entered the house, and cautiously approached the door of her little room. The family had all retired. Taking a pen and ink she wrote, with some agitation, a few lines, and placed them where they would be seen the first thing in the morning.

"This will tell them where I have gone," she said, still weeping. "It would not do to wake them or they would not let me go. But how can I stay here, when he is in danger?" She paused and mused. "Yes! it is too late to overtake him at the warf. I must go down the river and intercept him; God will be my protector."

With these words she hastened to attire herself in her bonnet and cloak, and then kneeling down, she prayed for a few minutes silently, after which she rose, wiped the tears from her eyes, and set forth unattended in her long and perilous walk. More than once she started, as she wound her way through the solitary forest, at the cry of a night bird; and now and then some unknown noise, or a distant shadow suddenly assuming the appearance of a human being, would cause her knees to totter, but, after leaning for a space against a tree and summoning aid from on high by a hasty prayer, she would recover confidence and go on.

At length she reached the shore of of the river, after more than an hour's travel. She recognised the place at once, and following the bank soon arrived at the solitary farm house. All was still around, and she did not wake the inhabitants, for they were suspected of being unfriendly to the whigs, so she merely unloosed a boat which she found lying by the water-side and entering it, waited breathlessly for the appearance of her lover's sloop.

A quarter of an hour passed, which seemed an age, and yet no signs of the vessel were visible.

"Surely it cannot have passed," she said anxiously. "Yet the wind is fair, and the tide strong."

Another interval elapsed which her alarm magnified into an hour; and at last she burst into tears.

"He has passed, and I shall never see him again," she sobbed. "Oh! God of mercy, spare his life!" and clasping her hands convulsively, she looked up to heaven.

Suddenly a sound met her ear which she mistook for the creaking of a block. She started up in the boat, every feature of her face radient with hope, and looked eagerly toward the bend in the river above. But she was doomed to disappointment. For five minutes she gazed in vain.

"It was only the sighing of the wind" she sobbed, again overcome by tears. "Oh! what shall I do!—what can I do?" she said pitcously wringing her hands.

All at once the apparent sound of the sheets traversing their iron guide broke the stillness; and this time she was not mistaken, Brushing the tears hurriedly from her eyes she was able to discern the shaddowy form of a sloop rounding the point in the river above.

"It is him—it is him," she exclaimed agitatedly, and falling on her knees, with glad tears, she returned thanks to God. Then hurriedly and nervously taking the oars, she pushed off into the stream, and suffered the boat to drop down with the tide. As she expected, the sloop soon overtook her.

"Boat ahoy!" cried a well known voice, that made her heart leap, as the stout vessel came surging down toward her.

"James—dont you know me?" she articulated faintly, all the modesty of her nature suddenly aroused at perceiving for the first time, the apparent indelicacy of her behavior.

"Ellen!" cried the voice from the sloop, in a tone of surprise, and immediately the vessel was rounded to, and the athletic arms of her lover lifted her on deck; for, overcome with shame, she could neither stand nor look up.

"What is the matter, dearest?" said her lover, as he held her in his arms, "has anything happened at home? Speak—you don't know how you alarm me."

His anxious tone recovered for Ellen her confidence, and she hastened to tell him what she had heard.

"I could not," she said, with her face hidden on his broad breast, "stay at home, and leave you to this peril. Father is old, and I was afraid he could not be here in time——"

"God in heaven bless you. How can I ever repay you for this! But I must find shelter for you in the cabin, for no time is to be lost. We are already in sight of Hogan's place, and it is too late to retreat. Even if we anchor they will come after us; but now that I know their intentions, there is nothing to fear, and our best course, therefore, is to disarm suspicion by going on."

Ellen would have remonstrated, but, at that instant, the moon broke forth, and a large boat was seen pulling out into the stream some distance down the river. She suffered herself, therefore, to be led into the cabin, where she waited, with a breathless heart, the termination of the contest.

Tradition tells how, in a few words, their leader informed the crew of the approaching attack, and of the vigorous measures taken to defeat it. The sloop's course was retarded as much as possible, while the wood, which formed a part of the cargo, was hastily arranged in piles around the quarter-deck as well as forward, so as completely to barricade every side of the vessel. Fortunately there was a double supply of muskets on board, and these were all loaded and ranged ready for use. In that critical hour the hand and voice of Briggs were everywhere. He felt that not only his own life, but what was dearer even than that, depended on success in the present struggle.

For some time the refugees, who continued pulling lazily up the river, as if not caring to excite suspicion, did not see the movements on board the sloop; but when the preparations for defence became visible in the growing bulwark on every side of the vessel, they gave a loud cheer and began to pull lustily toward her.

"They are coming now," said Briggs, placing the last armful of wood on the pile along the quarter-deck. "Take your muskets, lads, and be ready for a volley—the bloody refugees!"

Quick and sharp came the rollicking of the oars to their oars, and even those manly hearts beat faster as they counted the fearful odds against them, and recognized the burly figures of Morgan and one or two of his more desperate associates.

"Pull away—around by the stern, my lady," shouted the refugee leader, rocking in the stern sheets was the motion of the boat.

"Now's your time," said Briggs energetically. "Pick your men. I'll take Hogan."

The muskets were raised, and a breathless instant ensued.

"Are you ready?" whispered their leader.

"Ay!" was the prompt, stern answer.

"Then fire!"

The volley was not a moment too soon. Three of the men in the boat fell, but almost immediately she struck the side of the vessel, and her crew began to scramble over the barricade erected between them and her defenders. Firing was now impossible; the conflict was hand to hand. It was then that Briggs remembered Ellen with each blow of his sturdy arm. Clubbing his musket, he met the assailants at every point, cheering and animating his scanty band even more by his example than his voice. Short, but terrible was the conflict. Most of the outlaws never reached the deck of the sloop, but fell back wounded or dead into their boat; while the few who gained at least a foothold on the vessel, sunk finally before the athletic arms and indomitable courage of the defenders. In less than five minutes after the attack began, the refugees were repulsed at every point, their leader killed, and the few who remained alive in full flight to the shore. Two of their number remained prisoners in the hands of Briggs, and subsequently met the deserved fate of their crimes.

No sooner had the enemy left the vessel than Briggs hastened to the cabin. Ellen was already ascending the gangway, alarmed by the cessation of his voice, which, throughout the strife, had risen over the noise of the conflict and sustained her during its terrible suspense.

Their meeting we shall not attempt to describe. It is sufficient to say that long after, they were accustomed to refer to it as the happiest moment of their lives.

"But now, dearest," he said, at length, "I must see you safe at your father's ere I proceed. Let me hope for still more."

Briggs accompanied Ellen home, and ere he returned to his vessel, he had pressed her to his bosom as his wife.

For many a long year the old musket, with its battered stock, used on that memorable day by the hero of our story, was wont to be exhibited to the visitors of the happy household that grew up around Ellen. It may still be in existence, a treasured relic among her grand-children.

A Duel to the Death.

A few days after the battle of Waterloo, Lord—— gave a grand dinner, following a ball on the previous evening to the same gentlemen whom he had before entertained. During dinner the conversation turned on the ball, and when heads began to get warm under the influence of champagne, Lord—— rose and said, "My dear friends, I have to propose a toast which will delight you. So fill your glasses to the brim. I propose the health of the greatest beauty we have seen for a year. You all know whom I mean. To the health of Miss Maria!"

General applause ensued, during which Captain—— cast a sly look on Trevor whilst raising the glass to his lips. After the acclamations, cries arose on all sides, "Who will return thanks for her?" "Of course her favored beau," some one said. "And who is he?" asked another. "Up the favorite! Trevor is the happy man: no doubt of it; she danced with him all this evening!"

Trevor looked triumphant. But some one said, 'No, no; it isn't Trevor, The Captain is the favorite.'

'Ten to one,' said another, 'the Captain is the man.'

'Nonsense!' muttered the Captain knitting his eyebrows.

'Oh!' interposed an old Baronet, 'the fact is the young misses doesn't know whom she prefers; so let's toss up to discover the favourite.'

Shouts of laughter followed, except on the part of Trevor and the Captain.

'Pon honor, gentlemen, here's much ado about nothing,' said Trevor. 'But since the thing has been made a serious question, I feel compelled to declare on this occasion that I am beloved by the beautiful Maria, and I state, I have good reasons, I think, for boasting of this conquest; I have got rid of my rival (turning towards Captain——) although that gentleman's flashing eyes good looks, and all that sort of thing'——.

'Trevor, don't be insolent,' exclaimed the Captain purpling with rage.

'Insolent? Heavens! What do you mean, Captain? No, no, that's impossible. If any of my words have offended you, my heart disowns the offence, and as we used to say at Rugby, indictum puto. Let it pass. As for Maria, I am sure of her, positively sure——Oh, it's no use of the Captain launching such furious looks at me——Thus, gentlemen, de jure et de facto, I thank you in the name of my charming Maria.'

He resumed his seat with a placid smile.

'You only latter yourself, Trevor; you are quite mistaken,' said the Captain. 'You know not what passed between Maria and myself one evening. On my word of honor, she told me she would be glad to get rid of her engagement with you.'

Nonsense. She only said so to make a fool of you Captain. Believe me, that was her only motive, for she told me so next morning.

'Next morning? And who admitted you to her next morning?'

'That's my secret, and not yours. Since you wish to know it, I will tell you, for your consolation, that since then I have seen Maria every day.'

'Trevor, it is base to divulge such secrets, even if they were true. If it be your intention to ruin a sweet innocent creature, I tell you, sir, you are a scoundrel!'

'A scoundrel! Do you say I am a scoundrel, Captain.

Trevor became pale; he went up to his rival with a glass half full in his hand.

'Yes, sir, I said so. What then?' said Captain——,

'Then you must apologise instantly.'

'I am not in the habit of retracting my words. I have nispology to make.

'Then expect none from me,' shouted Trevor, dashing his glass at the head of the Captain.

The latter quietly wiped off the wine with which his dress was spotted, and then went straight up to Lord——, whispering, 'My Lord, doubtless you have pistols in the house. This matter had better be ended at once. Have the goodness to do the needful.'

We need scarcely state that Lord —— made every effort to arrange the matter, not only on account of his friends, but also on his own, since it would always be an imputation that the quarrel occurred at his table. The parties obstinately refused to be reconciled; and when Trevor was told that the Captain was one of the best shots in England, he exclaimed, 'Indeed! then I shall have to make my will; for I am almost as blind as a mole,' he added with a smile. 'Oh, - - - ay, yes, I have it. That will do,' said turning to the Captain, he continued:

'Sir, it is said that you always kill your man.'

'Yes, sir, what next?' coolly asked the Captain

'Well, you know that I have a very bad sight, am almost blind, and not a very good shot.'

All were astonished at this declaration, and still more when they saw that Trevor was bleeding from the nose.

'What are you driving at?' asked the Captain, with a look of contempt.

'Only to make a reasonable request, the equality of arms in the fight. Do you think, my good sir, that I would expose myself to be killed by your pistol without a chance of doing you the same favor? You provoked this quarrel; you folly has brought it about. I demand that we fight face to face, breast to breast, with only a table between us.'

'Yes,' he continued firmly measuring every word, 'we shall die together, if we are to die, that will be a consolation.'

Oh, horrible! monstrous!" rerounded on all sides. 'No, no, we will have no such butchery.' Most of the guests at once left the room. The Captain did not reply.

'Well,' exclaimed Trevor with bitter irony, 'who is the coward?'

'That will be known presently,' replied the Captain calmly. 'I accept your conditions, however murderous they are. May a thousand curses fall on your head and the heads of your family.'

'Are the pistols ready?' asked Trevor coolly. On being answered in the affirmative, the party proceeded to the shooting room, so as not to disturb the family. Some one secretly suggested that the pistols should be loaded without ball, and this was done.

The two adversaries, who believed that their last hour had come, were pale as death; but if they were prey to deep emotion, not a muscle trembled.

'Who will give us the signal asked the Captain. In such cases, if a party fires one second before the other he becomes an assassin. The person who undertook to give the signal said with a trembling voice—

'Raise your pistols.'

'When I count three, fire. One. Two. Three!'

They fired and recoiled by the shock.

'What's the meaning of all this?' exclaimed the two combatants. 'Who has dared to make fools of us? There were no balls in the pistols.'

'Honor is satisfied,' exclaimed the friends around them.

Trevor ground his teeth.

'The remedy is easy enough,' said the Captain, pointing to some poignads suspended from the wall. He took down two, measured them, and presented one to his adversary, who seized it eagerly.

'Now there will be no trickery,' he exclaimed; 'stand off, sir.'

They stood face to face and the blades glistened. The contest was short. One of them soon fell; it was the Captain. He expired without a groan.

'Oh, my God!' exclaimed Trevor, 'What have I done? In all this a reality?' and in horrible despair he flung himself upon the corpse of his rival, which he shook convulsively, as though to bring it to life again.

A Railroad Story.

"Gris" writes to the Cincinatti Times: I will give relate an incident of travel that occurred when I was a frisky young man with fondness for young ladies' society. Understand me, I have no distate for young ladies' society now, but they dont seem to hanker after mine as they did, say twenty years ago. This is natural enough. I dont blame them—only they don't know what they are missing.

A friend and myself got on board an express train one afternoon to make a short trip. The car we entered was full. Only one vacant seat in fact and that was alongside of a very charming young lady. Friend and I each made a dash for that vacant seat. It isn't a fair thing to do, as a general thing to trip a friend, but it was allowable under the circumstances, and I gave him just the slightest trip in the world, just enough to enable me to get the start of him and obtain the coveted seat. My friend took a seat on the wood box, and looked very disconsolate enough. I think I added to his discomfiture by certain triumphant winks, nods and motions in which I indulged. The young lady was attractive, and some casual remarks dropped on one side or the other—young folks will drop a remark occasionally, and are more ready to pick it up again than old ones—afforded an opportunity to glide easilly and pleasantly into conversation.

She was witty and sprightly, and I grew unusually brilliant; that is, to the best of my recollection at this remote day. My friend observing this looked madder than ever. At length we reached a station where the train stopped for a moment. My friend abdicated the wood-box and rushed out on the platform. Suddenly he returned, and coming quickly to me seized me by the collar and said in a tone loud enough to be heard all through the car:

"Quick now; get right off here. You can get a job here just as well as not. They tell me there is only one shoemaker in the place, and lots of work. So take your kit and get off before the train starts. No use looking any further for work. Tramping all around the country for a job of shoemaking won't pay. Take work where you can find it. That's my motto."

He almost forced me out of the seat with his vehemence, and if I had'nt made a vigorous resistance he would have had me out on the platform. The young lady gave me one look of supreme disgust—tramping jour. shoemaker!—then directed her gaze out of the window, and kept it there for the remainder of the journey. My friend remounted the wood-box, and indulged in a series of fiendish grins and indignant chuckles as would have justified me in hurling him from the car, only I was too stupefied by the proceeding to proceed against him. When I left the car the young lady looked to see if I hadn't forgotten my "kit," and I am satisfied she thought I had got off to "kick for a job," as they say in shoemaker parlance.

The Rich and the Poor.

Many people talk a great deal about what might have happened, if they had only done this or that, or a certain train of circumstances had been brought about—always dwelling upon the ifs and ands of the past, instead of taking advantage of the present, and looking to the future.

Such people generally fail in all undertakings, and make little progress towards prosperity. They are either too proud or too lazy to work, and sit around for years in poverty waiting for a chance for a big speculation, which will at once place them above the necessity for labor or pecuniary care.

Or they are, dissipated, spending in drink and tobacco, money which should be put to better use. They are sure to be in debt, because they live beyond their means. Get trusted at the butcher's and the grocers, and spend their meagre income from day to day, in whiskey, cigars, and other small expenses, consequent upon being associated with drinking men—in this way treating the saloon keeper better than many of the hard working men who keep their families from starvation.

According to their ideas, the world owes them a fortune, rather than by their own patient industry, frugality, temperance and sobriety. Looking so high that the pennies entirely escape their notice, they never save anything. And if they did, it would be so small a sum they would despise it, and consider themselves small for hoarding it.

There is no use of such men thinking anybody is going to set them up in business, risking hard earned money for them to squander and fritter away, as they have their own lives. The best thing a man can do who is in such a position, is to look to himself for the help he needs.

Cut off the small extravagances, put away his own vices which are dragging him down, and resolve to use his talents to the best of his ability.

Live for the interests of his own family and himself, more than for Tom, Dick, and Harry, who are ready and willing to call him a good fellow, so long as he pays for two thirds of the drinks.

If there is not manhood enough in him to do this, he will be poor and harrassed with debts all his days. Ask any rich man in the land, who made his money, if he did it by drinking and carousing four or five hours every day. He will tell you "No; I made my money by work, economy—often by privation—and by sobriety."

It is not the rich men of the land who loaf around grog shops. They have too many cares and other occupations.

A poor man who has a trade, and works at it, earning an honest living and saving a little each year for future capital to build up on, if he is a temperance man, hath riches the world cannot take away. And is on a sure road to success.

While a poor man who thinks he can afford to drink and frequent bar-[illegible]

How a Reporter got into the House of Lords.

All American travellers of 1855, or thereabout, will remember "Randall's Commercial Boarding House," in King street, London. Among the guests at that time was the late Rev. J. McClintock, one of the best Methodists that ever lived, but whom everybody who knew him would call 'Mac,' in spite of his theological doctorate. There was also another American traveller. He had been a clergyman, and afterwards had very creditably represented in Congress a Massachusetts district. I shall call him the Rev. Luke Grafton, though that is not his name to a T.

One evening 'Mac' said to the Rev. and Honorable Luke, "I had hoped to offer you a seat this evening. There is to be a 'field-night' in the House of Peers. I expected three tickets for the gallery, one of which was to have been for you. Unluckily I have only two, and so I cannot invite you to join our party." "Much obliged," said the Rev. Luke, "but I am going to the Lords this

A Reform Convention in Prince Edward recommended the appointment of Mr Gillespie as Sheriff, in the place of the late defaulterr.

THE Montreal Star makes the alarming statement that—thanks to the apathy of the authorities and to the anti-vaccination teachings of Cadarree, the death-rate in that city has risen to 55 in the thousand per annum. In England it is only 16. At present rates Montreal is losing nearly 7,000 lives per annum, and the Star thinks there is plenty of room for a little hearty indignation.

O'CONNOR, who assaulted the Queen, has been pronounced to be of sound mind by a commission of medical men appointed to examine as to his sanity. He explained to the Commission that he only wanted to frighten the Queen into compliance with his demand, and therefore did not load the pistol.

CURLIANA:—The Keene keen curlers, the "Invincibles," were met on Friday last by the "Wallace Club" of Allandale, in a match at the roaring game, when the "Wallace Club" won by twelve shots. The "Invincibles" must change their name, or strike anew for fame.

PROFESSOR EASTTY, of Montreal, will give a series of Readings from the best authors on Tuesday and Monday Evenings, 19th and 25th, in the Music Hall here. The Professor is highly spoken of as an Elocutionist wherever he has been, and from the glowing accounts of his style, delivery, and control of voice, promise a treat that none can afford to miss.

THE "Canadian News Publishing Coy." Toronto, is in difficulty. One of the partners accuses the other of cheating, of keeping cooking accounts and false pretenses to obtain money from him.

THE RACES:—Your correspondence is very much to the point, and deserves publication; but owing to a certain reference, without which, it would lose much of its force, and which too, if used, would force us to break a principle dear. We beg to be excused for its non-appearance. Many thanks for your high opinion of the Examiner.

NEW PAPER IN TORONTO.—We have received the Prospectus of the Daily Mail, soon to appear in Toronto. The Mail is to be in the interest of "Moderate Politicans," or Conservative; as they have changed their name to keep pace with the progress of the times. It promises to maintain the end and aim of the Company, a first-class newspaper, and has secured some of the best newspaper writers. There is still room for a good Conservative paper in Toronto, although the Leader and Telegraph can fairly lay claim to first class papers for a Province so young as Ontario. We wish the Mail may prosper.

TEMPERANCE:—The members of Loyal Canadian Temple No. 180, I. O. G. T., Mather's Corners, have commenced drawing the materials for the erection of a new Temperance Hall, size 24 x 40, brick faced, Mr. Geo. Nelson & John Mein, contractors Keene, have undertaken to furnish the materials and build the Hall for the sum of $466. This speaks well for the temperance cause in this neighborhood, and shows that the L. C. Temple is flourishing and likely to do so, in spite of the dreadful forebodings of some parties, who say that it has long since reached its height and will soon fall. The Temple has at present over sixty names on its books, and is altogether in a flourishing condition.—COM.

Miss Gerrie will sing at her complimentary concert on the 18th inst., "The Harp that once through Tara's Hall's," "Come back to Erin," "Charlie is my darling," etc., etc. 10. 2in.

MR. R. PATTERSON'S POULTRY YARD:—We are glad too see and interest being awakened in breeding Pure Bred Poultry, and no one has done so much to this end, in Peterboro, as Mr. Patterson. Mr. Patterson's yards and his arrangements are certainly the most complete we have seen, for the comfort of his poultry, and for keeping them separate for breeding purposes. Yard No. 1 contains a magnificent trio of Dorkings from Montreal, and two other very fine pullets. Yard No. 2 contains also a magnificient pair of Partridge Cochins from imported eggs. J. R. Fowler's Strain, and two very fine Pullets from Mr. Thomas' Strain. Yard No. 3 contains a lot of very fine Howdens; Howdens are a new variety here, they are of French origin, and are said to be the hardiest and most useful of the non-setting variety. Yard No. 4 contains a superb pair of Dark Brahmas, large and beautiful in penciling, and three other very fine Pullets all of different strains. Yard No. 5 contains a noble little family of Game Bantams, a very choice lot indeed. He has also some very large geese and Ducks raised from imported eggs, last year. We cannot but congratulate Mr. P. with falling into possession of such fine specimens of each variety. They are really a very fine lot, and he deserves great credit for the care, expense and trouble he has bestowed to procure thorough-bred poultry

Town Council.

MONDAY, MARCH 11th, 1872.

The Council met. His Worship the Mayor presiding. Present, Messrs. Toole Edmison, Robinson, Stevenson, Doharty, Patterson, Hall, Lundy, Helm, English, and Smith.

The minutes of last meeting were read over and confirmed.

The Clerk read and submitted his certificate of the approval by the Ratepayers of the By-law aiding by way of Bonus Messrs. Paton Mour & Co. The Annual return of the Commissioners of Town Trust was laid before the Council and received.

A communication was read from D. B. Robinson, Esq., Secretary of the Grand Junction Railway, inclosing a Petition from the Company to the Council asking aid in constructing the Grand Junction Railway. The Petition was received and the Mayor instructed to communicate with the Company, expressing the interest taken in the road, and promising to consider the matter of giving a bonus favorably, especially if the Directors concluded to touch Mud Lake.

An application from W. H. Henthorn, asking for a Tavern License, was referred to the License Committee.

Mr. Smith, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, read the report of the committee recommending payments of two accounts, was received and adopted.

Mr. Smith informed the Council that the Market Tolls were let to Edward Green for the current year, at the price of $750.

A Communication was read from Thos. Bradburn, Esq., addressed to the Town Commissioners, offering to lease the site of the New Town Hall at the upset price per foot, undertaking to erect the Hall within two years in accordance with the plans, furnishing the necessary offices for the use of the Town at a moderate rent, and agreeing to give the free use of the Town Hall for public meetings called by the Mayor of the Town.

Moved by Mr. Lundy, seconded by Mr. English, That this Council having before them the offer of T. Bradburn, Esq., for the erection of the New Town Hall, would respectfully request the Commissioners of the Town Trust to accept the same and execute a lease to him for that purpose, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Chairman of the Commissioners.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

GRAND BUFFALO HUNT AT NIAGARA FALLS ON THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—Arrangements are being made by parties at Clifton, of whom Mr. Barnett is the leader, for a grand buffalo hunt at the large commons at the Falls, to come off on the 24th of May next. Several wild buffaloes are to be turned loose and hunted by Sioux, Pawnee, and Kickapoo Indians from the Plains, with their fleet ponies. The celebrated "Buffalo Bill" is expected to take part in the hunt. Several hundred Sioux, Pawnee, Kickapoos and Six Nation Indians are to appear in full war costume, and go through a sham battle, with bows, and arrows, etc. in old Indian style.

Ottawa, March 11th—The Prince Edward Island Government having acted on the suggestion of Mr. Secretary Fish and Sir Edward Thornton, to deal with the fishery question as though the fishery clauses of the treaty of Washington had been confirmed, are in an awkward predicament. It is understood that a proposition to the same effect was made to the Dominion Government and recommended by the Imperial Government, but that the former refused to take any action in the matter until authorized by Parliament.

False Representations.

The conservative press is driven to straits to get up a howl against the Ontario Government. The "Protos outrage" so called, bribing H. B. Woods, and the the Railway appropriations, are all they have yet been able to invent, and every one is founded on falsehood. The Protos affair has been investigated, and no trace of Ministerial interference could be bro't home to one of them. Bribing Mr. Wood was also miserable slap-trap got up by unprincipled political hacks on the most flimsy pretences. Then comes the railway subsidy fund, which we are told is mortgaging the revenues of the country for the next twenty years; is dangerous, ruinous, and would be done only by the Grits. Suppose all these things true, who is to blame? John Sandfield's Government assuredly.

At the last session of the last Parliament $1,500,000 were voted to aid railway enterprise and especially to encourage roads running into or near the wild lands. This sum was to be devoted to deserving projects only, and was calculated to meet all grants to roads absolutely of provincial importance. But what do we we find when the new Parliament assembles? The whole $1,500,000 and $400,000 more has been promised by John S. to pet schemes to secure political support, and other projects likely to be of immense advantage to the country are left out in the cold—nothing for them,—the funds are all spent. It became evident that something more must be done to prevent the gross injustice such reckless disregard to the claims of the whole Province, would entail on certain localities.

Hence arose the necessity for additional grants. Is it not therefore evident that John Sandfield's Patent combination arrangement is wholly responsibe for all errors, if any, in granting additional railway aid.

The other side.

John Sandfield always went on the principle of "scratch my back and I'll scratch yours," bestowing patronage regardless of justice to other places, and indifferent to the suitableness of places, and telling the less favoured persons or places, "what the — have you done for me." His whole policy was corrupt and corrupting, a system of bribery, calculated to ruin the whole public men of the Province. Every man saw there was no justice, the honest expression of convictions and principles to those held by the Patent Combination was enough to shut the door to such men; and to steele the heart of the Premier. The Reformers on assuming power knew this and felt that to continue it, would end in disaster to the moral principles of every public man. They therefore devised a way whereby they might redeem the pledges of their predecessors, and also enable themselves to do justice—even-handed justice—to every part of the Province, and for doing so, they have secured the respect of all, except a few whining disappointed castoffs.

It is well known that Ontario will have to assume from ten to ten millions of debt contracted before Confederation. If she has not the money to pay over, she will have to pay interest for it.

If Messrs. Blake and Mackenzie had taken two millions out of the funds they would then have so much less to meet their portion of the debt, and they would have been compelled to pay interest for all time, what effect would that have on the future revenue? Simply place a mortgage against it forever. To prevent this a yearly subsidy for twenty years was voted, and the surplus kept intact to meet exigencies, the farsightedness of this policy will remain a monument of the clear heads of the Blake Government.

Dummer Council.

The Council met in the Agricultural Hall, Warsaw, Feb., 24th.

All the members present.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Communications were read from W. Langmuir, Inspector of Prisons, advising as to terms and conditions of entrance into Asylums recently erected for the Dumb and Blind.

From Rowsell and Hutchinson, Toronto advising of expressing of stationery ordered, and enclosing bill for same.

From R. Romains, enclosing account for 1871.

From County Treasurer, respecting assessment of Lot 14 in 11th con.

The Clerk was authorised to attend to different Communications.

AUDITORS' REPORT.

The Auditors report was then read in detail, from which it appears the gross receipts for the year were $3207.81; the expenditure $6142.64; leaving a balance in the Treasurer's hands of $65.17.

Moved by Councillor Smith, seconded by Councillor Payne, that the Report be received and confirmed, and that the Clerk be instructed to have 200 copies printed for distribution.

LICENSE INSPECTOR.

Councillor Spence moved, seconded by Councillor Payne, that Jas. Wason be re-appointed License Inspector; moved in amendment by Councillor Kidd, seconded by Councillor Smith, that John Rose receive the appointment. The amendment was lost. The original motion was then put and carried.

SCHOOL SECTIONS.

A petition was read, signed by Jacob Wilde and others, asking the Council to take from Section No. 4, all the lots South of No. 23, to form from these a new Section. The Trustees of Section No. 4 protest against this as it will be the means of destroying both schools in the Section. The County Inspector being present was asked for an opinion in the matter.

He briefly stated the objections to a division of the Section, thought there was already too many sections for the thorough working of the schools, would rather see them enlarged, thus enabling Trustees to build better school houses, and enabling them to employ in one building two or more teachers. This he believed would raise the character of our rural schools. He thought the ratepayers of the north should allow those of the south to select a site for the new school, in any locality they pleased, but was of opinion that the most suitable place (Inspector's opinion was asked on this point) would be some point on side road running through the 2nd concession, and between lots 20 and 21.

Councillor Smith moved, seconded by Councillor Kidd, that the Inspector having given his opinion as to site for the new school house for the southern division of No. 4, as follows namely, viz:—"That the new school-house should be built at any point between the centre of 2nd con., and east side thereof, along the line of road running through east of lot 20." The matter of Jacob White and others be left over until next meeting of the council, in order to give the electors in No. 4 section an opportunity to meet, and definitely settle the matter.

SCHOOL SECTION NO. 9.

In accordance with notice given at last meeting of Council, Mr. Kidd moved, seconded by Mr. Spence, that a By-law be now passed making a change in school-sections 4. and 9, in such a way as to include lots 28, 29, and 30, in 7th con., and 28, in the 8th con., in section no. 9, making the division between sections 4 and 9, the 6th con. line.

A petition signed by many ratepayers of the municipality was then introduced by E. Mc Ilvenna, desiring the Council to have future sittings of that body held in Warsaw.

Mr. Kidd moved, seconded by Mr. Payne, that By-law No. — Authorising the change contemplated in the aforesaid petition be now read a first time. By-law read in committee and amended by naming the time when, and places where, the electors may vote for or against the said change.

The Clerk was instructed to have 200 copies of said By-law published and distributed.

By-laws, 270 to authorise payment of certain moneys, and 271 to appoint Inspector of licenses. were then regularly read, signed and confirmed.

Council stands adjourned until the last Saturday in March, then to meet for the purpose of appointing certain municipal officers.

Meeting of the Peterboro Branch of the U. C. Religious, Book, and Tract Society.

Pursuant to public notice the annual meeting of the Peterboro Tract Society was held in the Beptist Chapel on Monday evening, 11th March 1872.

The meeting was opened with devotional exercises by Rev. T. Bone, and Rev. K. McClennan.

William Hall, Esq., occupied the chair.

The Secretary read the annual report, which was as follows:—

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE PETERBORO BRANCH OF THE UPPER CANADA RELIGIOUS, BOOK, AND TRACT SOCIETY.

Your Committee cannot be otherwise than thankful on this occasion in presenting their Annual Report, that they are enabled to do so with feelings of gratitude to the Lord, for the prosperity of this Society, in the year that has passed by since our last public meeting.

Many have felt an interest in the work of the Society, and engaged in it, we trust from the right motive. The desire to do service for Him who has done so much for their own souls. The love of Christ has constrained not a few to seek by the ready means which the Society affords, to spread abroad to others, the knowledge of His salvation and the preciousness of His atoning blood.

An efficient staff of willing distributors, organized and appointed under the care of the pastors of several churches, has carried the Society's tracts into every part of the town and its suburbs. And lately as from various causes this organization lost its first completeness, the labor has been supplemented and sustained by an association of ladies formed for the express work of visiting the sick and the afflicted.

Many tracts have also been circulated in the country both here and afar off.

It may be safely affirmed that never before this past year, has so large an amount of precious truth, in the form of Gospel tracts, gone forth from this town, to diffuse under God's blessing, the lights of truth around us. The little messengers have been widely scattered, and our eyes should be turned to Him in prayerful trust and expectation, who alone can give the increase to the seed thus sown.

The shanties however have not been visited this season, there being no means by which a colporteur could be maintained.

With reference to this last work, your committee consider that it is most desirable that some special agency should be organized, having for its objects the regular visitation of these places by a colporteur, and the supply of bibles and suitable reading matter

It is greatly to be deplored that so large a number of men, computed at nearly four thousand, should be left exposed for so long a winter, to those influences for evil which too often characterise the lumbering stations. It is greatly to be hoped that some united and vigorous effort will be made for their advantage, lest through continued neglect they should become the sources of infidelity and depravity. If a Welland Canal Mission has proved to be so great a blessing to our sailors, why may not a Shanty Mission, equally if not more needed, be the same to our lumbermen? The contributions in behalf of our Bible and Tract Societies, could not be more fittingly appropriated than to the support of a special mission to these men.

In conclusion, your Committee desire to express the hope that before another year goes by, the great purposes for which this Society has been organized, may be more fully carried out, so that the next Annual Report may contain the cheering announcement of a larger blessing, a more fruitful service with increased liberality on the part of all the Lord's people, for the glory of God.

It was then moved by Rev. Davis, That this report be received. And that the following gentlemen be the Committee and Office Bearers for the ensuing year.

NAMES OF COMMITTEE.

James Edwards, A. H. Campbell, Robert Kingan, D. Pentland, Doctor Burnham, Wm. Dixon, Wm. Yelland, J. A. Hall.

OFFICE BEARERS.

President, Sheriff Hall; Vice-Presidents, Ministers of the Gospel resident in this place, who are members of the Society: Secretary and Treasurer, John Taylor.

The above was seconded by Rev. T. Bone, Agent of the Tract Society and Welland Canal Missionery, who then proceeded to deliver the address of the evening.

Mr. Bone began by giving an outline of the Mission—young but vigorous, a seedling or twig which though planted only years ago, was now become a sturdy sapling, and bade fair to increase to larger proportions. Already, however, many a weary way-farer has been refreshed beneath its soothing shade and fruitful boughs. Numerous are the testimonies received from those who have reaped instruction and found consolation from the spoken word, or the printed page circulated by the Colporteur's.

This interesting and invaluable Mission had been adopted and upheld by the Upper Canada Religious Tract Society. At St. Catherines, where it had originated, and whose christian people still generously aid it, there is a warm and loving feeling manifested in its welfare and prosperity. About 5,000 sailors are computed to pass through the Canal. And what with passengers and immigrants there are about 13,000 persons in the vessels that pass through its waters. Sailors were in the social body what the legs were in the natural body. And as it would be absurd and inconsistent for a man to bestow great care upon the clothing and protection of all other parts of the body, while he utterly disregarded and neglected the feet and legs; so it is inconsistent that the social body should be so carefully protected and so amply and comfortably clad by means of its numerous religious and moral organizations, while the locomotive or travelling or carrying portions were left out in the cold and wet, uncared for and bare.

The sailors had built a Bethel for themselves of their own money, in which service was held on Sunday's, as there was no work that day in the Canal. There were 37 Bethel and open air services last year. The work of the Society among the sailors has been carried on most gloriously and successfully during the past season. Several interesting cases were brought forward to show not only the good that was being accomplished, but the great esteem and affection with which the work was regarded by many of the captains and men. The passage of vessels through the Canal was continuous and increasing through the week until Lord's day came round. Night and day the vessels moved onward through the locks. The crews had no res, at regular times. Many had told him they had not slept for 3 or 4 nights continuously. On the banks are often seen in the morning—places where sailors have thrown themselves down at night in the soft mud and wet to snatch a few moments repose while the vessel was going through the locks. One man had been sent on ahead of the vessel to see to the opening of one of the gates, and after doing so, he laid himself along a beam and in a moment he fell asleep, as the vessel entered she struck the beam and the poor fellow fell over to the pack, injuring his spine, so that he had no power of moving himself. The strong active man was in an instant made helpless, and after two days of severe suffering died in the hospital, nursed and tended by the Colporteur who thus ministered to the soul and body.

The address was highly interesting, and was listened to by a respectable audience by the most marked attention and sympathy.

Thanksgiving Day.

Those who cherished the fond delusion that loyalty to our beloved Queen, and affection for the Prince of Wales and other members of the royal family were waning in England had their eyes opened on Tuesday to the grand mistake they had made, by witnessing the enthusiasm with which the royal procession was received when on its way to the thanksgiving service at St. Paul's Cathedral. Seven long miles were superbly decorated, and it is believed that four millions of people assembled to greet Her Majesty and her family. As soon as the Queen left Buckingham Palace, cannons were fired and bells were rung, and the vast populace raised a mighty cheer which ran along the line down to St. Paul's—the whole body cheering at the same time, and as the royal procession proceeded, then enthusiasm increased in intensity—the Queen and Prince of Wales thus receiving the out-pouring affection of the great heart of the English people. Over 14,000 persons were seated in the cathedral, where a solemn sermon was prescibed by the Archbishop, and a Te Deum was sung by the choir.

Upon the return of the royal procession the ovation was repeated, and continued until the royal party entered the palace.—Upon no former occasion was anything seen approaching the grandeur of this reception of the Queen. The populace was fairly wild with delight, and at night the most brilliant illuminations ever witnessed were seen in London. The illuminations was repeated on Thursday night. Thanksgiving services were also held all over England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland, and a telegram from Bombay states that thanksgiving services were also held all over India for the recovery of the English Prince.

The demonstration in London on Tuesday was a fitting rebuke to the demagogues who had so far forgotten themselves as to make an attack upon royalty. And well indeed was it for such men that they had prudence enough to remain silent on that day. One notiseable feature of the demonstrations was the number of Union Jacks and Stars interwined with expressions of amity and friendship.

Alarm About A Comet

By our latest English mails we see that the people of Europe and the British Islands have been sadly alarmed touching the advent of a comet, which is expected the ensuing autumn. It seems that a learned man of Switzerland—Professor Plantamour by name—has prophesied that on the 12th of August next, a gigantic comet will come in collision with our earth. Whether or not he infers that the result of the collision will be disastrous to our earth, does not appear. But at all events, popular ignorance and fear combined have excited over Europe the greatest apprehensions, lest in the encounter of the comet and our earth the latter should be scorched, shrivelled up, or sent into fragements through space.

The English astronomers have taken the matter up, and have done their best to quiet apprehension. Once a year they were called upon to perform the same task. They were obliged, last winter, to show that the pigmy comet which displayed its attenuated curve in the Northern heavens could have no effect on our earth supposing that both came into collision.

With regard to the present prophecy there are two important facts wanting. In the first place it is not generally known who Professor, Plantamour is, or that he has made comets his special study. In the next place the rest of the scientific world know nothing about the comet of which the Professor speaks ; and if to him alone, out of the thousands of astronomers, practical and amateur, who sweep the celestial vault for those erratic visitants, the comet has shown itself, he would not be able, between the time in which he alleges he saw it and the period which he defines for its collision with our earth, to compute its elements,—in other words he would not be able to ascertain its mass its length, its velocity, and its path thro' the heavens with such certainty as would enable him to say that it would come into collision with our earth on the 12th of August next.

But there is this consolation in the matter for the benefit of nervous people. Let the comet be never so large, and let it come into collision with our earth when ever it pleases, the effect upon our planet would be like a whiff of steam striking on the front of a locomotive at full speed. Such was the opinion of the great French scientist Arago; such is the opinion of the astronomers of our own day. Our earth would make short work of any comet crossing its orbit.

MR EASTTY'S READINGS.—Remember this popular reader will appear in the Music Hall to-morrow evening. His renditions of the several selections chosen have given great pleasure wherever performed, and we have no doubt they will prove equally as pleasing here. The British Whig speaks as follows of his readings in Kingston:—"The Raven," by Edgar Allen Poe, was delightfully rendered, Mrs Candle's Lecture on Freemasonry, which was repeated by request, and was capitally delivered, was heartily enjoyed. The finest points of Artemus Ward's Lecture were brought very effectively, and recalled the lamented Artemus' own delivery of the inimitable piece in Kingston. Josh Billing's essay on "Vote," one of the cleverest productions of the American humorist, was very well read and had a wholesome effect, for they do say that hearty laughter is healthful. The rendering of Charles Dickens' "Child's Story of a Star" was very pathetic. Altogether the style of the reading was more pleasing and the lecture was more successful in pleasing than on Wednesday evening. Mr. Eastty, who is not a professional, but is well known as a Montreal business man, is independent of this means of "getting along," is giving these Readings from a love he has for them, and with the object of doing something, if only a little, to improve the public taste, and the character of Entertainments. We trust that he will not be disappointed in his ambitious desire.

Some of our readers, says the London Spectator, may remember the shower of prophecies with which Continental journals received the news of the success of the Suez Canal. Great Britain was to lose first her commerce, then her commercial navy, then her supremacy at sea, and finally her Indian possessions. The Mediterranean State were to recover their long-lost Oriental trade, and M. Lesseps was to be the avenger of a hundred seaboard cities ruined by the avarice of England. Well, here is the official return of the tonnage and nationality of the ships passing through the Canal in 1871:—

British	546,621
French	91,841
Austrian	43,113
Italian	29,400
Turkish	16,959
Egyptian	13,394
Dutch	6,711
Russian	4,820
Belgian	4,400
American	4,170
German	3,520
Spanish	3,157
Norwegian	1,316
Portuguese	919
Danish	660
Barmanian	408
	771,409

Great Britain sends five sevenths of the whole, and much more than double the tonnage of all the rest of the world put together.

The Tattooed Man.

(FROM THE LANCET.)

In the Winer Medizinische Wochenschrift for January 13th, a full account is given of the tattooed man, whose case has created such an interest both in and out Vienna. This man states that he is an Albanian, forty years of age, and unmarried. His accounts of his life vary somewhat. According to one account he engaged, together with some French men, in hostile operations against the Chinese, by whom he was taken prisoner and tattooed. The operations was thus performed:—The victim was held fast by four men, his struggles being further quieted by threats of in death, while, for three hours daily, the artist—always the same man—worked away at him. In less than three months he was tattooed from head to foot. When the man, who is of middle hight and beautifully and strongly built, is stripped it seems as though the whole of the body was tightly enveloped in a webbing (tricot) of richly-woven Turkish stuff. From the crown of his head to the tips of his toes, he is covered with dark blue figures of animals and plants, in the intervening spaces of which appear to be characters blue and in cinnabar red. The hands are tattooed on both surfaces, but only with inscriptions. The blue figures stop short at the insteps of the feet, but the tattooing is continued along the toes to the root of the nails in the form of red characters. Through the very hairs of the scalp and of the beard appear also designs in blue. On the forehead, one on each side, are two panthers, "regardant," as heralds would say and separated in the middle line by red characters.—There are altogether on the body no less than 388 figures. All of these are of a blue color, and represent apes, lions, leopards, cats, tigers, eagles, crowned sphynxes, storks, swans, men, women, elephants, crocodiles, snakes, fish, snails, fruit, leaves, bows, arrows and quivers. It appears extremely probable that the tattooing has been done with the juices of plants, and not with the usual agents —e. g., powdered charcoal or gunpowder for a blue color, and cinnabar for a red; and for the following reasons. Berensprung and Virchow have shown long ago that after tattooing with agents such as cinnabar, some of the particles remain entangled between the meshes of the true skin (corium), while those which find their way into the lymphatics are arrested at and become encapsuled in the nearest lymphatic glands. As the case will not admit to the removal of a small piece of his skin, the absence of the [illegible] conditions cannot be proved. [illegible] on the Egyptian mummies, as well as on the [illegible] of the Peruvians, and [illegible] of the Sandwich Islanders, [illegible] tattooing was practised by the Britons [illegible] Picts, the absence of the [illegible] cannot be considered as proving [illegible] tattooing was not practised by them. [illegible] Herodotus, Strabo, Pliny, and [illegible] Thracians, Getæ, Dacians, Scythians, Sarmatians, Germans, Gauls, Britons, Picts, Caledonians, Iberians, Celtiberians, Ligurians, Etruscans, Sabines, Samnites, Lucanians, Bruttians, Apulians, Campanians, Latins, Volscians, Æquians, Hernicians, Marsians, Peligni, Vestini, Marrucini, Frentani, Dauni, Picentes, Umbrians, Lucumones, Cisalpine Gauls, Transalpine Gauls, Celtæ, Belgæ, Aquitani, Cimbri, Teutones, Helvetii, Suevi, Vandals, Marcomanni, Quadi, Alemanni, Franks, Burgundians, Goths, Ostrogoths, Visigoths, Gepidæ, Heruli, Rugii, Lombards, Saxons, Angles, Jutes, Varini, Thuringians, Boii, Norici, Pannonians, Dalmatians, Illyrians, Dardanians, Triballi, Moesians, Dacians, Getæ, Sarmatians, Scythians, Parthians, Medes, Persians, Elamites, Assyrians, Babylonians, Chaldeans, Phœnicians, Hittites, Amorites, Canaanites, Hivites, Jebusites, Perizzites, Girgashites, Philistines, Hebrews, Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Midianites, Amalekites, Arabians, Ethiopians, Egyptians, Numidians, Mauritanians, Gætulians, Garamantes, Libyans, Carthaginians, Phœnicians, Greeks, Macedonians, Thessalians, Epirots, Illyrians, Thracians, Getæ, Dacians, Scythians, Sarmatians, Germans, Gauls, Britons, Picts, Caledonians,

THE AULD AND NEW.

Fool fa' the loon, who burnt down
The auld substantial brigs,
T'would serve him richt, to draw fa' ticht
A rope about his craig.

T'would serve him weel, the ugly deil,
To throw him in the stream,
There in the deep, to lie an' sleep,
O' burning briggs to dream.

The gallty who ane the firing done,
Ought to be punished sore,
We hope that he shall found out be,
Put where he'd burn no more.

The new brigg's got an iron coat,
They cannot burn it down,
But much ado, it cost I trow,
And expense to the town.

We hope it long, will stand out strong.
That those may be no blame,
On Davis & White, who made it right,
But rather raise their fame.

O.

Otonabee.

Ye farmers of Otonabee,
Who now do occupy,
The farms which the old folks cleared,
In days that are gone by.

The trees are cut away,
The old folks labor done,
Who chopped through winter's frost,
Logged under summer's sun.

The necessaries of life then,
Were often mean and scant,
'Twas hard work oft' to get them,
Hence often much in want.

Fashion's fiscry they did not need
To occupy their thoughts,
Women were dressed in flannel gowns
The men in full-cloth coats.

And along with other hardships,
The ague plagued them sore,
It was a yearly visitor,
To them in days of yore.

With doctors few and far apart,
And medicine hard to get,
Many a one had mouths to sit,
Under many an ague fit.

But pure air now sweeps o'er the fields,
And clears away the damps,
Malarious contagion once
So common near our swamps.

A market now for every thing.
With cash once seldom seen,
'Twas only trade for farm stock then.
And prices small for grain.

In fine cloth now ye all can dress.
With best of corn and food,
You have too now at resting time,
The local news to read.

Which every farmer ought to have,
The leading local paper,
See where to go for what he wants,
From grocer and from draper.

You who have not subscribed for one,
Go do it right away,
'Twill profit more through the year.
Than double what you pay.

All you who true reforms seek
That plead for truth and right,
If the Examiner you dont take
You stand in your own light.

G.

Otonabee, March, 1872.

The St. Catherines papers announce the elopement of a hotel keeper with a farmer's wife. The man's name is said to be Westell, and the woman Dawson or Dolson. They both leave families, and the woman took with her £150, sterling, of her husband's money as well as bed and bedding.

The following extraordinary story is from a late English paper:—

A commercial traveller for a firm of brass castors and bellfounders had been for sometime in Russia on the business of the firm. He returned to London, and his employers had been expecting for some days to see him in Birmingham, when a letter came to them bearing the London postmark, and purporting to be written by the missing traveller. The letter stated that the writer was a member of a Russian secret society; that for some offence he was detained in London and had been condemned to death, and in a week the sentence would be carried into effect. His luggage, the letter stated, would be found at his hotel. Nothing further was heard of the matter for a week, when the firm received another letter also dated London but written in broken English, informing them that their traveller was dead and burried, according to the rules of their society. The firm placed the matter in the hands of the police, but nothing has yet been heard either of the traveller or his luggage.

Remember Mr. Eastty's Readings in Hill's Music Hall, Monday and Tuesday Evenings March 25th and 26th.

An Anxious Shoemaker—Heartless Elopement.

On Thursday night last a rather unusual incident occurred in Forfair, illustrating somewhat forcibly, and perhaps unpleasantly to one of the parties concerned in it, the old saying: "There is many a slip between the cup and the lip." The facts of the case as brought are these: One of the sons of Crispin, and not a very industrious one at the beat, and perhaps too freely given to liquor, was possessed of a most susceptible nature, and one totally unable to resist the many and frequent attacks made by the little god upon his heart whilst in the company of his female friends. Some time ago one of the charming fair assisted by Cupid, so managed matters that a night was fixed when he was to make her a bride. Before the night arrived, another of the fair sex had by her counter charms so besieged and led captive our gay Lothario that all idea of implementing his agreement with his first fair one vanished, and ladylove number two brought matters to a crisis by lending him money to put in the cries, which he put to a far different purpose. His fellow workmen, to get matters settled, again subscribed, and the banns were published in due form, and Friday night was fixed as the wedding night. The young lady who has been so cruelly deceived belonged to Montrose, and who is a most respectable girl, left Forfair to prepare for her wedding some three weeks ago. The best man took his departure for Montrose with the first train on Friday along with others going to the wedding, but alas, how woefully was the programme changed. On Thursday night number one again appeared on the scene, notwithstanding a threatened action of breach of promise, and, assisted with the "wherewithal" so cast her magic spell around him, with the assistance of Bacchus and Cupid, spirited him away. The pair left with the direct train for Dundee on Thursday night, and are now supposed to be in Glasgow. On Friday a telegram was sent to Montrose, giving information of the state of matters, and a special messenger was dispatched from Montrose to Forfair to ascertain if said telegram was true. The young girl, who has been so fortunate in escaping being joined to life to such a heartless scoundrel, and ne'er-do-well, is in a sad state of mind, and, we understand, on learning the true state of matters, threatened to destroy herself. There is, as yet, no word of the graceless rascal and his first ladylove.—Dundee Courier.

THE NEW YORK FRAUDS.

Garvey Turns State's Evidence.

(FROM THE GLOBE.)

NEW YORK, March 8th.—Garvey returns to New York under an arrangement by which he agrees to give up the whole gang, and reveal the whole conspiracy from its inception. It was stated last evening that he would not only swear that sixty-six per cent of his entire claims, including the one for which Hall is indicted, were fraudulent, but that Hall, Tweed, Connolly, Woodward, Watson, and the rest, knew them to be false when they signed and approved them. This much is certain, that Garvey has agreed to tell all he knows, and that in consideration of his doing so the Attorney-General will enter a nolle prosequi in his case and pursue him neither civilly nor criminally. Garvey has agreed to restore the portion of the money which he derived from the frauds, and tell how the rest was divided. Already 60 per cent of the stolen money has been traced to Tweed, Sweeney and Tradesmen; and Garvey will tell in what proportions the other 40 per cent was divided. It is further said that for a month or more the authorities have been in communication with Ingersoll, who was anxious to make terms. It is rumoured this morning that Connolly has fled; his present hiding place is unknown to any person in the city, unless it be his wife. She sails on Saturday for Savannah, probably to join him in the South or abroad.

The proceedings in the case of the people, v. Mayor Hall, were again resumed this morning. Great excitement prevailed within and without the court room, owing to the re-appearance on the witness stand of the Court House plasterer, Andy Garvey. The court was very crowded.

Mr. Stoughton rose and resumed his objections to the admission of testimony as to the fraudulent nature of the bill. He argued that nothing could be found in the indictment which suggested or implied any dishonest motive on the part of the Mayor in not auditing the account, so far as the first count went.

The Judge ruled that the witness might be asked the questions objected to, and he might be asked to tell all he knew about the claim down to the time of its payment.

Garvey, recalled — Testified that the claim paid to him, and of which Tremaine held a copy, was a just and honest one.

Question—What did you then do in consequence of anything that was said to you?

Answer—Up to August, 1870, I wanted to pay myself for work, alterations and materials in the new Court House, so as to leave myself a profit of $110,000. I claimed $78,600 for the county buildings, and for armories and drill-room $75,000. That was the amount I required to be paid to me, so that I might have a profit. There was also due to me by outside parties $125,000, which I was expected to charge in my bills. There was $5,000 for Tweed and the Albany Legislature. This arrangment of ours was all concocted before we made out any bill at all. The bills were then sent in, an average proportion of this money in them. I claimed altogether $264,660 for work in the Court House and armories. There was due from others that I was expected to square in my bills $126,000. I added $5,000 for political expenses for myself, making in all $395,000, and which I expected to get paid. I received $397'000, and this was one of the bills which I made out.

NEW DOMINION MONTHLY.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1872.

This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. It aims at being a Canadian Magazine, both in the character of its matter, and in opening the way for Canadian writers. In the latter field it has up to the present been a failure, so far as remunerating its contributors and its publishers is concerned; but as its circulation is fair, we are in hopes that a good advertising patronage may yet put it on paying basis. We do not our Canadian homes our first elsewhere, so interesting and so Canadian, and we ask all Canadians to sustain it. Its circulation is 3,500. New Dominion Monthly 1,50 per annum in advance, Old subscribers sending the name of a new subscriber with their own will get the two for $2. Advertising in New Dominion Monthly per page, $6.00.

THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, purely a preparation of six of some of the best Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certian fixed proporations of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combination. Thus in the preparation of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alchol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to bush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have been converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what more he writes that he paid Doctor Squils over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

The Manliest Man.

BY GEORGE W. BUNGAY.

The manliest man of all the race,
Whose heart is open as his face,
Puts forth his hand to help another.
'Tis not the blood of kith or kin,
'Tis the true heart that beats within
Which makes the man a man and brother.

His words are worm upon his lips,
His heart beats to his finger tips,
He is a friend and loyal neighbor.
Sweet children kiss him on the way,
And women trust him, for they know,
He owes no debt he cannot pay;
He earns his bread with honest labor.

He lifts the fallen from the ground,
And puts his foot upon the round
Of dreams that Jacob's angels ladder,
Which, step by step higher, day by day,
Toward the bright and heavenly way,
And further from the tempter's sway,
Which stingeth like the angry adder.

He strikes oppression to the dust,
He shares the blows aimed at the just,
He shrinks not from the pogs of danger,
And in the thickest of the fight
He battles bravely for the right,
For that his mightier than might,
Though cradled in an humble manger.

Hail to the manly man, he comes;
Not with the sound of horns and drums,
Though grand as any duke's and grander;
He dawns upon the world, and light
Dispels the dreary gloom of night,
And ills, like bats and owls, take flight;
He's greater than great Alexander.

Proper Position for Preserving Or Packing Eggs for Hatching.

The famous discussion as to which end of the egg was the right one to open at the breakfast table, was not by half so interesting to the connoisseurs as the knowledge to poultry breeders would be which end of a hatching egg should be placed uppermost, when stored away for hatching purposes. Mr. Geyelin, in his well-known pamphlet, advocated the placing of all eggs intended for hatching with their large end downwards. But Mr. Geyelin was ahead of his time—few people paid much attention to his recommendation; and like many others of his suggestions which were opposed to all practical knowledge of the subject, they went unheeded—breeders still stored and packed their eggs in the old way, with the small end downward.

We have recently obtained more information on this subject however,—whether through the instrumentality of Mr. Geyelin's pamphlet or not we cannot say—but it seems a lady at Wickham Market (Hartland), whose name has not reached us, nearly three years ago, wrote a letter to Mr. Wright, the well-known poultry writer, on the subject, which he recently gave to the public, after keeping it secret for two years, for the purpose of experimenting on the information conveyed by it. We don't know that breeders will thank this gentleman for withholding such valuable information so long; it is, however, satisfactory to know that the experiments made by Mr. Wright during that period all go to confirm this lady's recommendation. She said. "Keeping eggs on the small end appears to me to cause the air-bubble to spread, detaching it from the shell, or rather from its membraneous lining; and after being so kept for a fortnight, the air-bubble will be found to be much spread, and the egg to have lost much of its vitality, though still good for eating." She then described her success by keeping the eggs in the contrary position, saying: "Owing to this method of storing, such a thing as a stale egg has never been known in my house; and, as regards success in hatching, for several seasons, when I was able to attend to my poultry myself, of many broods set every egg produced a chicken."

Such is the testimony of this lady.

Let us now hear the result of Mr. Wrights experience.

He says: "After considerable and patient testing of both methods, throughout two seasons, I can say, without hesitation, that there really is a marked difference between the vitality of eggs kept more than a few days, according to the position in which they are placed. It will be found, as this intelligent lady states, that the air bubble in one case is much more spread than in the other. This can be tested at once, but of course of itself proves nothing. The great point is—and it is in this way the matter is especially interesting to all farmers—that eggs are perfectly good for hatching at a month old when stored with the large end downward; and thus the eggs of valuable birds may be kept till the hen is ready for them, or eggs may be sent from distances which, under the old plan, would give little hopes of success." This information is interesting to breeders, and ought to be acted upon. The importance of preserving the vitality of hatching eggs is too well known by fanciers and requires no comment from us.—Canadian Poultry Chronicle.

BARLEY.

Barley draws more mineral substance from the soil than does wheat. It is an exhaustive crop, but unlike wheat or oats, its roots spread through and gather their food from a few inches in depth of the soil. The roots running through the top soil, keep it loose, and a barley field ploughs easier after the crop than one sown with oats. It is a much better crop than oats to precede wheat.

A light, fertile soil is required, and it should be well pulverised to the depth of four or six inches. An inverted sod is not safe; it should follow a hoed crop or a fall fallow. Weeds injure the yield. Drilling is preferable to broadcast sowing, but the seed should not be covered deeper than two inches—better shallower than deeper. The roller should be used after sowing, if the soil be suitably dry. It is the best of all spring crops to sow clover or grass seed with. Ashes are found to be an excellent special fertiliser.

Number of Eggs in a Hen.

It has been ascertained that the ovarium of a fowl is composed of 600 ovules or eggs; therefore a hen during the whole of her life cannot possibly lay more than 600 eggs, which, in the natural course, are distributed over nine years in the following proportion:—

First year after birth	.....	16 to 20
Second	do	100 to 120
Third	do	120 to 135
Fourth	do	100 to 115
Fifth	do	60 to 80
Sixth	do	50 to 60
Seventh	do	50 to 60
Eighth	do	35 to 40
Ninth	do	1 to 10

It follows that it would not be profitable to keep hens after the fourth year, as their produce would not pay for their keeping, except when they are of a valuable and scarce breed.—G. K. Geyelin on Poultry Breeding.

Sugar Making.

The agricultural journals begin to talk of a new industry, the manufacture of sugar from sweet potatoes. The average product, of a bushel of potatoes (the yam varieity being preferred), is said to be over two gallons, and as the average yield per acre on poor sandy soil is from a hundred and fifty to a hundred and eighty bushels, it follows that the product will be from three hundred to three hundred and fifty gallons of syrup. This syrup, moreover, is said to surpass that of the beet, and even that of the sorghum in delicacy of flavor, and in nearly all the other qualities which should commend it for the use of the table. The residum, after the juice is extracted, is pronounced a valuable article of food for either man or beast. In the Southern States, where yams grow spontaneously, the manufacture of potato syrup may be very profitably carried on; and if it has the effect of cheapening sugar, the consumers of saccharine at the North can have no serious objection.

Prussian Explanation of Prussian Success.

Penning the official history of the war in France, which is in the able hands of the Prussian Colonel von Verdy, we are left entirely without the means of judging to what causes Prussian officers ascribe their own vast success. Colonel Borisstaedt has given in the introductory volume of his unfinished history a very complete review of many of them, not omitting the personally temperate and hardy habits of his Sovereign which [illegible] contrasts with those of the ex-Imperor Napoleon, to the great disadvantage of the latter. But an excellent [illegible] to this inquiry, and one [illegible] right a matter hitherto [illegible] says the Pall Mall Gazette, may be found in a pamphlet containing some lectures, delivered [illegible] before the late campaign, at [illegible] War School at Cassel, by [illegible] Instructor of Tactics, [illegible] lately translated by Captain E. M. Jones, Historical Professor of Sandhurst. Captain Laymann shows, more plainly than has been done by anyone before, how in the recent wars the Prussian commanders have deliberately elected the part of attack in preference to that of defence, at considerable risk, often, and a certain heavy loss always, in order to obtain that "moral force" without which the finest training is thrown away. The old maxim, "Unquestionably the defence has the best of it" is shown to be very doubtful in application; for, as Captain Laymann explains those of the attack are not less certain, though they did not lie on the surface. And if the first few attacks do succeed, then comes that moral force (or rather moral superiority) which was sought for, growing intensified at every new advantage, until strategy is almost superseded by the collapse of the enemy whatever he can be got at. Such were the lessons drawn from a study of the operations of 1866. If Captain Laymann's modest book—which is too little known—should reach a new edition, he will surely be able to illustrate the new tactical principles, to which boldness is the key, with greater abundance out of the rich materials offered him by the events of 1871.

Death of a French Count in Jail.

Any one who is at all familiar with the crumbling walls or unpleasant records of the Recorder's Court here, will be familiar also with the name of "Le Comte de Santos." For several years past, scarcely a week elapsed that did not bring before His Honor the cadaverous, quixotic countenance and trembling limbs of the notorious Count—notorious in the annals of drunkenness and debauchery. The manner and mien of the old man, at the worst of times, had always something about them which commanded respect, and spoke of better days and better things, and of an education and derivation vastly superior to the ordinary habits of the Court. Notwithstanding this, however, there were many who disbelieved in his nobility and considered his title pinchbeck as his countenance, but whether they believed or disbelieved the old man, whose head was gray with intemperances and age, would drink whenever he could find the means, and per consequence would appear before the civic court with that air of haughty humility so peculiar to him, and listen to the sentence imposed on him. On three occasions His Honor would, if the comte were out of funds, impose a small fine, knowing well that his "spree" was at an end for he time being, and his friends would soon pay the fine; but if, on the other hand, he had money still in his possession he would send him to jail for a short period until he had recovered from his debauch. In this way his miserable life has dragged us slow length along, until some months ago when he was taken very ill and sent to a hospital. After he came out he was attacked with delirium tremens, his system being quite broken down, and he was sent to jail for protection, where he closed his sad career on Sunday night last. Of

HIS HISTORY

we can only learn that he belonged to a very old family of Nates, in France; that he studied with considerable success in the College of Louis the XIV., in Paris, and was preparing to submit himself for examination for admission into the Polptechnic school when he contracted a fearful passion for absinthe—the use of which was then becoming very popular in France—and became so enslaved by it that he was obliged to abandon his studies and return to Nantes. His conduct there was such as to become the scandal of the city. He passed his days in coffee houses and his nights at play, and scarcely a week passed that he was not found by some night patrol dead drunk in the street. His parents being scandalized by the fearful career he was pursuing, after trying everything in vain to reform him, sent him to this country with the promise of a monthly allowance sufficient for his wants. He came first to New York, traveled over the United States, in almost every city of which he remained for a length of time, but instead of improving, his passion for stimulants grew on him, and when he arrived in Montreal the polished gentleman of France was reduced to a miserable sot, the companion of the vicious and debauched. He was married while in the United States and has a family of several children, who would on several occasions have been reduced to starvation but for the charity of strangers. For some time past his remittances from France have come through the hands of Dr. Picault, Vice-Consul of France, who have given them to his wife, and by this means they have been saved from the dram shop and the City Treasury. His death, so far from being unexpected, leaves only the wonder that his system so long survived the treatment it received.—Montreal News.

If any person faints place him instantly flat on the floor, or bed, on his back, and let him lay quietly for ten minutes or so; it is simply a fainting fit, and the blood flowing on a level will speedily equalize itself through the system. If you are troubled with rheumatism, pleurisy, pain in the side or back, cramps in the stomach, burns, frost-bites, &., procure at once a bottle of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," which is a certain cure for all such complants. Sold by all medicine dealers.

"There is much pleasure and profit in the service of a good horse, and but very little of either in a bad one;" no person from choice will retain a bad horse, many, however are in possession of such who need not be. We think there are few horses so bad but that their condition can be improved and rendered more valuable and useful for their owners, to effect which, there is nothing equal to 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;' it has effected astonishing results in thousands of cases. Remember the name and see that the signature of Hurst & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Is your throat sore, or are you annoyed by a constant cough? If so, use promptly "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers." They will give you instant relief. They relieve the air passages of phlegm or mucuous, and allay inflammation, and no other remedy can be had for coughs, colds, or any complaint of the throat or lungs, and if taken in time their efficacy will soonbe proved. Sold by all Druggists and country dealers. Price 25 cents per box.

Sufferers from coughs, colds, bronchitis, croup, influenza or whooping cough, will find relief in Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, which has now been in use for nearly half a century, and still maintains its long established reputation as the great remedy for all diseases of the throat, lungs, and chest.

A want has been felt and expressed by physicians, for a safe and reliable purgative; such a want is now supplied in Parsons' Purgative Pills.

"Little boy, can I go through this gate to the river?" politely, inquired a fashionable dressed lady. Per'aps so: a load of hay went through this morning," was the reply.

"I'd have you know, Mrs. Stoker, that my uncle was a bannister of the law!" "A fig for your bannister," retorted Mrs. Stoker, turning up her nose. "Haven't I got a cousin as a corridor in the navy?"

A lady had her dress trimmed with "bugles" before going to a ball. Her little daughter wanted to know if the bugles would blow when she danced. "Oh, no," said her mother, "papa will do that when he pays the bill."

"Mr. Speaker," said a member of the Jamaica Legislature, discussing a bill for regulation of the timber trade. "I know these timber merchants to be most egregious rascals—I was in the timber line myself twelve years.

A sleepy deacon, who sometimes engaged in popular amusement, hearing the minister quote the words, 'shuffle off this mortal coil,' started up, and rubbed his eyes, exclaiming, 'Hold on, squire, it's my deal!'

A saloon keeper, having started business in a building where trunks had been made, asked a friend what he had better do with with the old sign, "Trunk Factory." "Oh," said the friend, "just change the T to a D, and it will suit you exactly."

Conversation in a Wisconsin store—Polite Clerk—"Can I show you anything else to day?" Lugubrious customer—"No, I reckon not. I lost two horses and my wife last fall, and I feel putty poor. Good span of horses, too."

A well known preacher being seen in the streets of New York in a Shaker garb, was asked by a friend, "What in the world sent you into that community?" The reply was, "Three good meals a day and plenty of warm clothing are not to be sneered at."

A connecticut fisherman one day baited his hook with a live frog. After patiently waiting some time for a bite, as he chatted with a friend, he found that his lively bait had swum ashore, and was sitting quietly on a rock by his side. He wound up his line and went home.

The handsome young girls in the churches at Kalamazoo, Mich., are deputed to take up the collections The scheme is said to have worked very successfully.—Some of the very attractive collectors are frequently called back by young men to receive a second contribution. The Kalamazoo deacons know something.

Two little boys sat listening eagerly while their grandmother was telling the Bible story of Elijah going to heaven in a whirlwind with a chariot of fire, when little Willie interrupted her with: "O, Sammy! wouldn't you have been afraid?" Sammy hesitated a moment and then replied, "No, not if I had the Lord to drive."

The following is the statute in the old Saxon code referring to leap year. "Albeit, as often as leape yearre dothe occurre, the women holdeth prerogative over the menne in matters of courtshippe, love, and matrimony; so that when the ladye proposeth it shall not be lawful for the manne, to say nae, but shall entetaine proposall in gude courteeie."

A young lady who has been taking quinine in large quantites, became so impregnated with iron that one cold evening, when her lover kissed her at the door, he had the same experience that small boys do who approach their mouths to lamp-posts, and before he could seperate his lips from hers, was caught by his ought-to-be-mother-in-law. Moral—don't take quinine.

The correspondent of a suburban exchange in a vivid description of the land whereon stood the scool house of his childhood, the school children sometimes plantdd a few flower seeds there, but they never germinated. The only thing ever known to root there, with any degree of success, was a hog, and he only did it by the excercise of the most obstinate will-power against the laws of nature then prevailing.

An economical Iowan, who had a toothache, determined to remove it in the Indian fashion. Accordingly, he bent down a sapling in the woods, lay down himself, and attached a stout cord to his tooth and the sapling. Then he touched the spring, and the next he knew he had jumped over a grove of about forty small trees, and was trying to get out of a small pond that he happened to alight in.

An editor whose subscribers were remiss in payment, lately published the following announcement in his paper: "To save our readers the trouble of sending their subscriptions by post, and to relieve two unfortunates, we shall send to each of our debtors, in the course of a few days, two collectors, one of whom has hardly recovered from the small-pox, and the other of whom has just taken the itch." The deliquents did not wait to be called on, but paid their dues promptly.

A school teacher in Omaha, having inordinate dread of the small-pox, sent home a little girl because she said her mother was sick and had marks on her face. The next day the girl presented herself at the school house, with her fingers in her mouth, and her little bonnet swinging by the strings, and said to the teacher, "Miss——, we've got a little baby at our house, but mother told me to tell you it isn't catchin'."

A Baltimore lady, who had been greatly annoyed by mischievous urchins who rang her door-bell and then made off, made a bad mistake one afternoon. She laid in wait for him, and soon came a step on the porch and a vigorous jerk on the bell. She cried out, "I see you, you little rascal," caught the unresisting figure by the coat collar, and shook him vigorously. When her strength was nearly exhausted and hoarse with exultment, she discovered to her horror that it was the diminutive minister of her church, very red in the face, and very short for breath. An explanation followed.

A day or two since a man not over and above familiar with the dark ways of telegraphing, went into one of the offices in Bangor, Me., with a despatch, which he insisted on having sent off immediately. The operator accommodated him, and then hung the despatch on a hook. The man hung around some time, evidently unsatisfied. At last his patience was exhausted, and he bellowed out, "Ain't you going to send that despatch?" The operator politely informed him that he had sent it. "No, you ain't," replied the indignant man, "there it is now on the hook."

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A Dressing which is not only agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre and a graceful perfume.

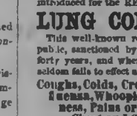
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.



The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. In scrofula disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination of the blood, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the blood, saps the very basis of life, undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to lie dormant, the infection brought into the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develops into one or other of the hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, humors are may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or ulcerous formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the economical use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following maladies generally find immediate relief, and, after taking it for the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter or Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of impure blood. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Tic, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the human female system.

Liver Complaint and Hereditary Diseases, such as Jaundice, Dropsy, Tumors, Ulcers, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Pustules, Blains, Sores, Scurfs, Ringworms, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Malignant Ulcers, Syphilitic Diseases, Mercurial Diseases, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness, Female Complaints, and even Consumption itself, are conquered by its use, when perseveringly taken according to the directions, which are constantly being received from the afflicted, and from those who have been restored to health and vigor by the use of this powerful antidote for the diseases arising from impurities of the blood.

Minute descriptions of these complaints and the treatment they require, are given in Dr. Ayer's American Medical Antidotes, which will be sent gratis to all who apply for it. Physicians, clergymen, and others are requested to give it a careful perusal.

The Workingman.

Who shall judge him by his manners?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes,
Princes fit for something less;
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May clothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feeling—
Satin vests can do no more.

There are streams of crystal nectar,
Rivers flowing out of stone,
There are purple beds and golden
Hidden, crushed and overthrown;
God, who counts by souls not dress,
Loves and prospers you and me,
While he values thrones the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man appraised above his fellows
Oft forgets his fellows, then,
Masters, rulers, lords, remember
That your meanest kinds are men,
Men of feeling, men of labor,
Men of thought and men of fame
Claiming right to golden sunshine
In a man's unsbling name.

There are fioms embroidered oceans,
There are little wood clad rills,
There are feeble lash-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills,
God who counts by souls not stations
Loves and prospers you and me
For to him all vain distinction
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth and fame,
Titled laziness is pensioned
Fed and fattened on the same,
By the sweat of other foreheads
Living only to rejoice,
While workingmen's outraged freedom
Vainly lifts its feeble voice,

Truth and justice are eternal
Born with lovingness and light,
And secret wrongs shall never prosper
While I have the strength to write
God, whose world-wide voice is ringing
Boundless love to you and me,
Heeds oppression with it titles
But as pebbles in the sea.

The Mason's Child.

CHAPTER I.

Faster and faster spread the flames, and now the ship was enveloped in a fiery sheet. Men and women rushed madly over the side to make a quicker but less painful death. The boats, with one exception, had been overladen and capsized. There were hasty prayers, and heartrending cries of misery and despair. Death hovered, vulture like, over his victims; some clung desperately to the vessels side, some supported themselves in the water by articles snatched hastily from the burning ship, and with which they leaped wildly into the sea. The captain sang through his trumpet. "Take heart and sustain yourself as long as possible. A ship is coming to our relief."

James Durant stood upon the almost deserted deck with his only child, but four years of age, folded closely in his arms. He discovered it at last, but it was at least four miles off. Before the ship could arrive, they must be burnt to death; or if he springs, as others had done into the water, both he and the child would be drowned for he was no swimmer.

The little arms were twined about his neck, the pale cheek rested confidingly against his own, but the brave child did not tremble.

'O my God is there no help?' cried the despairing father as the flames swept nearer, and felt that his present position could be held but little longer.

'Here, give the child to me, and I will save her,' and turning quickly Mr. Durant stood face to face with a stranger who had a life preserver in his hand.

'Quick! there is no time to be lost! The child can have my life-preserver and it will float her easily. Yonder is another ship; I have been watching it for the last five minutes. It will reach us in half an hour at the most. There, that is fastened securely. Now little girl I am going to throw you into the water. You are not afraid?'

'No, no, but father?'

The father caught her frantically in his arms.

'My darling Eva, you may never see your father again; but do not fear God will guard you, and somebody will find you and take care of you. If you never see papa again, remember he is in heaven with mamma.'

'Has she no relatives?' asked the stranger.

'None in this country; I an from England, and am travelling for health.'

'Take that pin from her bosom and fasten it in her clothing.'

'Heaven help you for the thought,' said the father; and in a moment the square and compass was glistening on the bosom of the child; and the stranger took her from her fathers arms saying; I am stronger than you she must be cast beyond the reach of these poor drowning wretches, or they will rob her of her life preserver.'

The white drapery fluttered through the air, and sank below the waves; then rising, it floated lightly on the water.

James turned to the stranger with tearful eyes.

'May God bless you and preserve you noblest and best of men. But you, as well as myself, must be lost.'

'No I am a good swimmer, and here is a piece of board with which you can sustain yourself until relief arrives.

The father cast another glance at the white speck floating rapidly away, and with an inward "God preserve her!" sprang into the sea, followed by the stranger; but the two floated in different directions, and they saw each other no more.

Two hours later, James Durant awoke as from the sleep of death, and found himself in the cabin of a strange ship, with kind and sympathising faces all around him, in a moment he had remembered all that passed, and cried eagerly, though feebly, 'My child, little Eva, is she safe?' There were no responses, and a low moan escaped the father's lips.

'Courage, sir,' said a lady with tearful eyes, 'some passengers were saved by the other ship.'

The father's countenance lighted.

'God grant that she may be safe.'

Mr. Durant recovered his usual strength in a few hours, and sought among the saved for the stranger who had proved himself so true a Masonic Brother, but he was not to be found.

'He must be on the other ship,' said Mr. Durant, 'and he will care for Eva.'

Both ships were at port for the following day, but though Mr. Durant found the stranger who had befriended him, and who had proved to be a Mr. Wordsworth, from a southern city, Eva was seen by no one and given up as lost.

CHAPTER II.

'Here, wife, is a child that has just been washed upon the beach. She is cold and stiff, but I think she is not dead. Let us have some warm flannels immediately, and tell Thomas to run for Dr. Hunt.'

It was long before those quivering lashes and beating of the heart gave token that science would crown the efforts of Mrs's measure; and by-and-by the lids parted and revealed two large, liquid, sky blue eyes, that wandered from face to face in a bewildered way, and then closed wearily.

'I fear she will not recover very rapidly,' said the doctor. 'She has a delicate constitution and will require the best of care.'

'Poor child!' said Mrs. Turner, 'I do not wonder she is nearly dead; but who can she be? Some terrible accident must of occurred at sea.'

'You had better examine her clothing,' said the doctor.' 'Perhaps you may find some clue to her relations.'

Mrs. Turner lifted the grammer white dress, and turned it over and over.—The square and compass placed there by Mr. Durant flashed upon the eyes of all at once. The doctor and Mr. Turner looked at each other, but neither spoke, and Mrs. Turner did not notice the tears that glistned in her husband's eyes.

The doctor fears that Eva would not recover rapidly proved to be well founded; days and weeks of fever succeeded in awaking her to life, during this she talked incoherently of "papa" and "poor mamma," and of the burning ship and of hunger. She finally awoke to consciousness, and asked many questions as to where she was and how she came in the dark room, and who were those who attended her, and Dr. Hunt forbade her being questioned till she was stronger.

How interested were all in the little convalescant whom the elements had cast into the little seaboard town. The ladies declared that never before did a child possess such lovely eyes, or such beautiful curls, while the gentlemen seemed no less interested, and brought her gifts of everything that might please her childish fancy.

'My dear little girl,' said Dr. Hunt when Eva was at length able to ride out, 'will you tell me your name?'

'Eva' said the child. 'I thought you knew it.'

'Yes, I know your name is Eva, but I want to know the rest of your name—your father's name.'

'Eva Durant. Mr. Durant is my papa.'

'You see I want to know all you can remember about your father and mother.

Eva's eyes filled with tears. 'Oh, sir, my mamma died and went to live with the angels. And I don't know where papa is. He said if I never saw him again I must know he had gone to mamma.

'Where were you when he told you this?'

'On the ship; and oh, the fire burned me so; and papa held me in his arms until a strange man took me and threw me into the water and I have not seen papa since. Oh, sir, can you tell me where he is?'

No, dear child; but perhaps we may yet find him.'

And this was all that Eva's new friend could discover. It was plain she had come from the ship which had been burned a few weeks before; that she had been cast upon the sea, and floated to the shore; but where was her father? Had he been saved, and was he searching for his child? Every possible effort was now made to find him. The circumstances of the case, with the statment of the child, were published in the newspapers of the neighboring cities, but the grief striken father, believing his child to be lost had sailed a week before for Europe, and it became settled in the minds of Eva's protectors that he had perished. But the little one still prattled about her "papa," and said he would come back by-and-by, those who believed differently would not pain her by contradiction.

The square and compass that had been found upon her clothing was regarded as a powerful appeal from a Mason brethern to care for his child.—So it came to pass that Eva became, as it were, the special charge of Hiram Lodge No. 93. Mr. Turner would gladly of taken the entire care of the little waif, and the wealthy Senator W—— requested to be allowed to adopt her as his daughter, but the Brethren of the Lodge assembled, declared by a vote that Eva should be reared, educated and protected by the Lodge, and that as Providence had placed her in Brother Turner's house that should be her home.

And so on years went by, and Eva became a healthy, joyous child, flitting here and there, and everywhere meeting the warmest of welcomes. The Masonic Hall was but a few rods from Mr. Turner's residence and Eva often went with him as far as the door, and then returning alone always bidding the Tiler "take good care of Pa Turner, and send him home early."

CHAPTER III.

The six years that followed the death of his wife and the loss of his child pas and wearily to James Durant. He visited nearly every country in the Old world, seeking among scenes of natural beauty and grandeure as well as of historic intrest, for the mental rest that could never be found. Once more he turned his steps toward America, and sought his Masonic friend Wardsworth. Finding that gentleman about starting out with his family on a journey to the Atlantic coast, Mr. Durant accepted the invitation to accompany them to Saratoga and Niagra, then to New York where leaving the ladies, Mr. Wardsworth and Mr. Durant wandered from town to town along the coast, enjoying the beauty of the scenery and the rural hospitality at greeted them more than the crowded hotels and the fashionable styles of the popular watering places.—Finger and the kind hand of Providence at length led them to the little town of B——, and the second evening after their arrival they visited the Masonic Lodge. A warm welcome was extended to these Brethren from their distant home, and both made inquiries as to address of Roger Mr. Durant left.

'Brethren I have travelled much and long. I have found Masonic sympathy in every part of the globe, and everywhere is Masonary substantially the same. I am hardly tell where I reside. The world seems to be my home, as I remain but a short time in any town or country, but my name is recorded in an English lodge. I love my English brethren, for they first brought me from darkness to light,' and I love English soil, for with it sleeps the life of my youth. But I love American soil, for here I have found the warmest of welcomes, the kindest of brethren. And here, too, my child is sleeping in American waters, and here I shall rest when the waves that wash her shore shall bathe my tearful village.

Six years have passed since this dear friend and brother robbed himself of his life-preserver, that my little Eva might perhaps escape, and we hoped the elements might be kind, and that Heaven would send her relief but she was beyond our hearts more.'

The voice of Mr. Durant was quivering with emotion, and unable to speak further, he seated himself and covered his face with his hands.

Glances of surprise and pleasure were cast from one to another among the Brethren of the Hiram Lodge. No one spoke, however, but all eyes turned upon the Master Mr. Turner. For a moment he seemed reflecting, then taking a slip of paper from the Secretary, he wrote:—

'Mrs. Turner—Do not allow Eva to retire until I return home; tell her I am going to bring a strange gentleman who wishes too see her.' and calling the Junior Deacon, Mr. Turner gave him the note, saying in a low voice, 'Take this to Mrs. Turner immediately.'

'Why, Eva,' said Mrs. Turner, when she had read the message, 'you are going to have company. A strange gentleman is at the lodge who wishes to see you.'

'Who can it be?'

'Eva looked perplexed and thoughtful, suddenly her cheek flushed, her eyes lighted, and clapping her little hands, she sprang to her feet and exclaimed, "Oh, it must be papa! No one would wish to see me no one in the world,' and before Mrs. Turner comprehended the child's interpretation, she had passed the threshold and was flitting through the moonlight toward the lodge room. The Tiler looked amazed when Eva burst into the ante-room, her cheeks burning and her eyes flashing with joy and excitement.

'Do not stop me; I am going in?' she exclaimed. But the inner door was fastened, and impatient Eva nearly cried with vexation.

'Wait a moment,' said the Tiler, who having heard nothing of what had transpired within, was at a loss to account for the strange conduct of the child; 'wait a moment, and I will send your request to Mr. Turner. He will come out and see you.'

I shall not wait. I do not want to see Mr. Turner, I want to see my papa.'

The child is crazy, that is evident' said the perplexed Tiler to himself; but calling out the deacon, he bade him say that Eva was there and determined to get into the lodge room.

The deacon went to the East, and delivered his message in a low tune, and a moment afterwards moved 'that the craft be called from labor to refreshment.'

And Eva did come, or rather bounded into the hall, more beautiful in her excitement than ever before. She advanced to the centre of the room and stood beside the altar; half poised upon the spot she scanned rapidly the faces of all. Her eager eyes soon detected the strangers, who were seated behind the rest, and for a moment irresolute, then darting forward with a glad cry, she threw her arms about the neck of Mr. Durant, crying, 'Oh, papa, my dear papa, you have come home at last! You were not burned on the ship!

We will not attempt to paint the scene further, but will leave our readers to imagine the joy of the fond father, and also leave them to decide whether the tears that wet the cheeks of the Brethren of Hiram Lodge were causes of sympathy with the happiness of the little charge, or grief that they should lose one whom they all loved.

End Of A Famous Lawsuit.

A sudden and ignoble end has been made to the great case of Tichborne vs. Tichborne, which, for more than a year has been on trial in England. Perceiving that his cause was lost, the claimant yesterday decided to withdraw whereupon he was arrested for perjury and is now lying in Newgate jail. He has failed to obtain possession of the Tichborne estates, have proved himself only a swindler, and is lodged, at last, in a felon's cell. The history of this case is one of the most remarkable and romantic on record, and the claimant, Arthur Orton, or Thomas Castro, will be invested with a certain interest which will remind men of famous rascals as well as noted mysteries personages. In spite of the unveiling of Arthur Orton, he will always bear some suggestion of the Man in the Iron Mask, as well of Dick Turpin,, or any of the famous impostors of history.

The claimant pretended to be Roger Tichborne, son and heir of the late Sir James Francis Douglas Tichborne. The real Roger Tichborne, who, if living, would be the eleventh baronet of that name, sailed from England to South America, in 1853, on a pleasure journey to the latter country. After a short stay in South America, he left on the ship Bella from Rio to New York; that ship was never heard of, and, in due time, the insurance officers gave her up as lost, and settled their risks accordingly. In 1863, the father of Roger Tichborne died, and the title and estates descended to a posthumous son of a younger brother of the absent Sir Roger. them given up for dead. Lady Tichborne, mother of the missing baronet, never could be brought to believe that the ship Bella and all on board had perished, and the [illegible] lingered to childhood's [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THERE IS NO DISEASED CONDITION OF THE BODY, in which Dr. WHEELER'S Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya may not be used with positive benefit. Being a Chemical Food and Nutritive Tonic, it acts physiologically in the same manner as our diet. It perfects digestion, assimilation, and the formation of healthy blood. It sustains the vital forces by supplying the waste constantly going on, of nerve and muscle, as the result of mental and physical exertion, enabling mind and body to undergo great labor without fatigue. Its action in building up constitutions broken down with Wasting Chronic Diseases, by first living and bad habits, is truly extraordinary, its effect being immediate in energizing all the organs of the body. Phosphates being absolutely essential to cell formation and the growth of tissues, must for all time be Nature's great resto rative and vitaliser.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 21, 1872.

The Assizes will be held in Peterboro on the 15th of April next, Judge Wilson presiding.

Revival services are being successfully held in connection with the Wesleyan Church, under the charge of the Rev. Mr. Davis, assisted by Mr. Eason, an Evangelist.

The new iron bridge is every day impressing itself upon our people as a beautiful structure. After being so long accustomed to the old wooden bridge the unaccustomed eye at first would convey the idea that the present bridge was a frail thing, but unequal familiarity increase our respect for it, and we have come to the conclusion that it is the best and cheapest bridge for large waters. Messrs. White and Davis need not be afraid to refer to it as an advertisement.

Rowdyism:—On Friday evening, the 8th inst., the usually quiet Village of Keene, was the scene of a species of blackguardism such as is seldom witnessed in Canadian villages in this enlightened and civilized age. At the close of the singing school which was being held in the Presbyterian Church by Mr. Galletly, on the above mentioned evening four roughs who had been sitting rather long over their cups, rushed into the church hooting and yelling, and without any respect for themselves or for the feelings of ladies' and gentlemen present, indulged in the most profane and disgusting language. A pretty spectacle any where, certainly, but much worse when it occurs within the walls of a sacred edifice. Happily, however, the Village Constable was present, who immediately seized the most offending culprit and quietly reminded him that he was in the church, and requested him to conduct himself decently, in return for which the rowdy lashed him with his vile and abusive tongue; by the intervention of some other parties they were all soon outside, after which quietness was restored. To prevent a reoccurrence of such conduct on their part, and to warn others who may feel inclined to indulge in Bacchanalian pleasures at the expense of sense, reputation, and respect, they were summoned to appear before two magistrates on Thursday, 14th inst., and made to pay the penalty of their deeds, the most offending one being fined $8.00 and his share of the costs, the others $4.00 each and an equal share of costs. It is to be lamented that they were so leniently dealt with.—Com.

Grand Junction.

The Town of Lindsay has voted $50,000 to the Grand Junction Railway. We will be glad to see this road built. The sooner the better; but, as they are in alliance with the Midland Railway Company, and have bound themselves not to build a branch northward from a point east of Pigeon Creek, they must not expect our sympathy. The construction of that road will enable us to draw trade from the doors of Lindsay and from the East. The day is gone by when the enterprise of Peterboro need fear the rivalry of neighboring villages. Let our citizens develope their trade, manufactures, etc., offer large stocks and cheap goods and we will get customers. Our great danger is in letting our enemy cut off our rear. On our North Country to a great extent depends our prosperity. A road that cuts off our northern trade, by making greater facilities for leading it elsewhere, strikes our vital part and leaves us helpless. The Nipissing to-day is wounding Lindsay and she feels it sore. If we dont command the trade of North Peterboro we will have but ourselves to blame.

The Elections.

We understand that some of the gentlemen who are ambitious of running for the Commons under the auspices of the renegade Sir John A. McDonald—him of the Washington capitulation—thinking their only chances of success is by early application, are busy canvassing. We just warn all men who think that the man who was not to the fore at the time of the Fenian Raid—who sold us at Washington—who would not punish the murder of a loyal Canadian,—we warn you against allowing yourselves to be committed. Don't promise to any specious Jonn A. man, and particularly, if they are unmanly enough to claim support under false colors, ashamed to acknowledge John A. as their leader, and afraid to deny him. We will have a good man in the field, one who will come out clean, not calling himself by any new name to disguise himself, a clean party man, a reformer, going in to support McKenzie and Blake, and to put an end to this inglorious bartering of our rights for power. Again we say, don't be led away. The game of the Tory is the old one, ashamed of their past history, they would give themselves a new name, as if that would change them, "Natoual Party," "No Party" "Liberal Conservatives," "Moderate Conservatives," any name to get rid of the responsibility of defending their acts of the past. Take the attempt to throw dust in your eyes as an insult, and spurn the applicant who thus approaches you. In good time our candidate will be before you. The Riding is ours, and nothing can take it from us.

How to Improve Our Time.

In these days of telegraphs and railroads, when we are accustomed to pride ourselves on our fastness, and when so much depends on the exact computation of time, that the old saying: "Time is money," in the motto of every business man, it seems unaccountable that in a country like Ontario there is no uniformity or certainty in the matter of the time of day. Not only does every town and village keep a "time" of its own, but even in many places, as in our own Town of Peterboro' for instance, each watchmaker—and in fact almost every person who carries a watch, keeps a time different from that of his neighbors, and swears by it accordingly.

To remedy the inconvenience that is every day experienced in consequence of this state of affairs, we urge the adoption of the following scheme:

That all the Towns between Toronto and Kingston should keep Toronto time, getting the time every day direct from the Toronto Observatory by means of the telegraph: In order to accomplish this object our Town Council should enter into communication with the Councils of Oshawa, Whitby, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Hindsay, &c., and if possible get them all to unite in the project. It surely could not be a matter of such difficulty to have the Toronto system of striking the time at five minutes past noon every day, from the Observatory, extended to the various places between that city and Kingston that are reached by the telegraph. The cost could not be very great when shared by so many towns. Each town should then provide itself with a good chronometer, or at least have the telegraph wire connected by the proper instruments with a large bell, on which the time would be struck.

If this plan were carried out we should have uniformity and certainty, instead of the uncertainty and inconvenience of which we now have to complain. As it is a matter of public importance, we urge our Town Council to take it up. Perhaps our Mayor could give us some information as to the feasibility of the scheme, so far at least as the Telegraph Company is concerned.

Negotiations on the Washington Treaty in England.

Considerable interest, not to say excitement, exists in England just now in respect to the correspondence between the American and Home Governments on the indirect claims alluded to in the Treaty. Mr. Disraeli, the leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, is anxious to ascertain the views of the American Government in reference to these claims, there being a very general feeling of discontent at these very objectionable claims being introduced at all. The Opposition very naturally are watching an opportunity to embarrass the Government, and could they at this particular juncture excite the popular indignation against the Government on so irritating a subject, they would not be tardy in doing it. Mr. Gladstone, however, is too astute to be caught napping. His former explanations on this same subject have been very generally applauded—and they have shown that both himself and his colleagues are as sensitive both of the honor and benefit of the Kingdom as any set of men in the Country.

On Monday night last, Mr. Disraeli repeated his enquiry for the reply to Earl Granville's note. Mr. Gladstone stated that the reply of the American Government was both pacific, courteous and even friendly in its tone, notwithstanding that the English views of the Treaty have not been adopted. That a rejoinder would be in the hands of the American Minister by to-day, (Thursday.)

Mr. Gladstone informed the House that it would be inconsistent with the public business to lay the correspondence before Parliament at present, especially as the Congress of the United States had declined to ask it of the President, and concludes as follows: The tenor of our communications while it shows we are anxious to carry the Treaty into execution, will I trust not fail in that sense of the state and nature of the case, which the honor of this country demands."—The statement of the Premier was received with cheers. Earl Granville in the House of Lords made a similar statement in answer to the enquiry of Lord Malmesbury concerning the correspondence, adding that the papers would be produced as soon as possible.

A somewhat laughable story appears in the New York Herold—a paper in the fore front of sensational items of news. It appears that one Inglefield is attached to the British Legislation at Washington. According to a "special" this son of Neptune has not only been looking around at the houses in the Capital, but has actually been finding out the state of the American Navy—the torpedo system—as well as taking a sketch of the approaches to the harbors of New York, Portland, Boston, Portsmouth, &c., &c., and that there are good grounds for believing that his movements have been directed by the British Minister under instructions from the Home Government. It was surely bad enough for a British Officer to be making enquiries into the state of American defences, the size and calibre of its guns, and making maps to guide, if necessary, a British fleet to their chief cities: But all this lacks the spice so necessary for an article in the Herald, unless the British Government is dragged into connection therewith. The Herald at once sees the "war cloud" arising in the east and would have the country on the alert. We have no apprehensions of any rupture between the two nations at this time, and we unite most fervently in the prayer "Scatter those who delight in war."

The next resolution was moved by Rev. Mr. Rogers—That the neglected condition of the moral and religious state of our lumbering population calls loudly on the sympathy of our religious Societies, and since the evil results of this neglect will affect our country at large, therefore the whole country, but more especially this portion of Ontario, must be regarded as participating in the responsibilities of such neglects.

The Rev. Mr. Rogers expressed the great pleasure with which he had listened to the statements of the last speaker, and heartily approved of the Mission with which Mr. Bone was connected: These sailors often took home with them at the close of the navigation, the books or tracts they had been presented with, to read over again in their family circle in the winter. Young men from this neighborhood, sons of the members of his own church, were thus visited and spoken to in the canal as they followed their sailor work in the summer time.

He much regretted that a similar work was not long ago undertaken among the lumbermen when they were nearer to us and therefore more easily accessible. He thought that as the work of the Canal was only in the summer season, while the work at the shanties would be only in the winter, some arrangement might be made whereby we might be able to secure the services of so well tried a missionary as Mr. Bone. He felt assured that as the mission to the sailors in the Canal was most liberally supported by the friends at St. Catharines, where it was best known, and its importance more fully appreciated—so also, with reference to the proposed mission to our lumbermen, our people of Peterboro and these counties would be found most ready to forward the work, and most hearty and liberal in sustaining it as it should be sustained.

The anxiety of many a parent's heart would be relieved, when they considered that their lads at the shanties would be under the notice of the Missionary, and be supplied with the words of everlasting life.

Mr. A. H. Campbell said he had much pleasure in seconding the resolution, no one could be ignorant that the northern parts of this and the adjoining county were being gradually occupied by settlers, many of whom were immigrants from Europe, and who had come to our shores in hope of being able to acquire that competance which in the densely populated countries of the old world it was so hard to secure, and that they were lured hither by the tempting offer of free land. Population is the great want of a country like this, and which it behoves all interested in its advancement to use their endeavors to obtain. But in doing this, and inducing settlement, on our unoccupied territory, it must not be forgotten that we incur a responsibility—the responsibility of seeing that no effort is wanting on our part to supply these new comers with the means of instruction in the more important matter of where their final and everlasting home is to be. We have no right to tempt them here with promises of peace and plenty unless we are prepared to some extent at least to supply them with those christian privileges which they abandoned when they left their native shores. Let us not shut our eyes to the fact that our object in bringing them here is a selfish one, viz., to increase the wealth, the strength, and prosperity of the Dominion, and that we shall not be held guiltless, if having obtained our object, we leave those who have been the means of obtaining it, to perish from want of religious opportunities and privileges. One of the great sources of the rapidly increasing wealth of this town, is the Timber Trade, which gives employment to a large number of men, and provides a market for the farm produce of the county. The shanties, in which these men live during several months of the year are widely scattered, and generally far removed from any means of religious instruction or observance. It is a state of things which isolated efforts cannot meet, but I am glad to learn by the Report that a scheme of a comprehensive character is proposed to meet this great want, and I hope that it will be fully carried out, and that this Society and the Bible Society will conjointly organise Missions to the different districts of our back country, and by acting together effect a greater amount of good, than they can do by seperate and distinct efforts. The objects of the two Societies are the same, the bringing of men to a knowledge of the gospel, and there is no reason why they should not work together.

Mr. MacKinnan desired to support the resolutions. He had some knowledge of the sailors in our Inland waters, and some interesting reminiscences of them. The work in the Welland Canal Mission is evidently in good hands, and in a hopeful condition. At St. Catherines, where it is well known, it awakens a lively interest and secures a cordial support. Why should not the like manner take up the good work among the lumbermen? They labor for members of our own community. The importance and wealth of this community are increased by their toil, and while they are employed in their arduous calling they are removed from the Christian privileges which we highly enjoy. If we can find suitable agents, there need be no lack of money to sustain the effort, all that is wanting is a thorough determination to accomplish this work as peculiarly our own, and the commencement of it in simple faith that He in whose service it is undertaken will own and prosper it. We shall all be the better for bearing a part in such Christian works, and another anniversary may be attended with the actual work done.

Rev. Mr. Davis followed with a few very appropriate remarks and closed the meeting with prayer.

The meeting was on the whole highly interesting, and the sympathies of the audience well sustained and occasionally very demonstrative.

St. Louis, Missouri, March 15.—A revolt in the Missouri, penitentiary at Jefferson City was discovered and frustrated yesterday without serious results. As the prisoners were going from their cells to breakfast, yesterday morning, Pat Duffy, who murdered Fred. Ostermeyer in St. Louis over a year ago, broke from his gang, ran into a shoeshop, ascended to the roof, and armed with a knife and iron bar defied his pursuers. He was shot in the arm and captured. Charley Clark, a mulatto armed with a knife, attempted to assist Duffy, but he was felled with a bludgeon and secured. About forty convicts were in the plot, and from papers found in possession their contemplated plan was to overpower the guard, fire the various shops, force the gates, rob the offices and escape. Timely notice and the vigilance of the officers, however, prevented any attempt of action on the part of the prisoners.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—The Review of the 15th has an article headed "Oh No," saying that a would be candidate for the House of Commons for the East Riding, has gone largely into the wheat business this winter in order to secure his election."

The above is what the Review says, and every person that reads the article will know that he means your humble servant. As I have bought wheat largely this winter. Supposing all that Mr. Carnegie says is true, is there anything wrong in it. I believe I have paid for all the wheat that I have bought. I am only following the example set me by Mr. Carnegie, he bought largely at Blythe Mills once, and I suppose made an independent fortune and retired to Parliament. May I ask Mr. Carnegie, is it wrong for me to do at Keene what he did at Blythe Mills,—any thing to turn an honest penny." Should I become a candidate and be defeated, I may turn my attention to gas or water works. O, yes, or might be fortunate enough some day to be President of the Peterboro and Haliburton Wooden R. R., with or without pickings.

I remain,
Your o'bdt servt.,
JAMES MILLAR.

The Erie—Mar. 19—At a meeting of the Erie directors this morning it was resolved to open the stock and transfer books to-morrow. When the announcement was made to the Stock Exchange the Erie rose from 49 to 51 and 54.

The New Indian Viceroy—London, March 19—Lord Northbrook, successor to the late Earl Mayo in the Viceroyship of India, will be entertained at a farewell banquet at Portsmouth, previous to his departure for Bombay on the 25th inst.

The Treaty—Washington, March 19.—Gen. Banks' bill to carry out the fisheries clauses of the Treaty of Washington which he reported to the House several weeks since, is a special order for to-day. Nothing will be done with it, however, as Mr. Banks wishes its postponement until all doubts about the intention of England to go before the Geneva Conference are settled. The bill will probably be laid over until some time in April or May. The friends of the Administration are very desirous to have the bill postponed without debate, they do not want to have the Alabama controversy opened and the Washington Treaty discussed, for fear that no good to them will come of it.

Mr. Colin McNichol, of Downie, had his arm caught in a thrashing machine on Friday last, and dreadfully smashed. His internal injuries are severe, and besides other hurts, he has had three or four of his ribs fractured.

A meeting of a number of parties intending to emigrate to Manitoba was recently held in Listowel, when the Rev Mr. Brown, of Elma, was selected to make the necessary arrangements in regard to the route and the cost of travel.

The party is to start about the later part of the month.

An amusing chase took place in Biddulph on Thursday. Two constables from London were in pursuit of a coloured man who eloped with a white girl. They spent the previous night with a brother chip in the village; and the pursuers getting on his track, treed the coon, put on the handcuffs, and after a few hours delay all took the road to London.

One day last week, some men blasting on the Midland branch, near Longford, left a blast ignited when going to dinner and on returning they found it had not exploded. Two men went up to ascertain the cause of the failure, and while examining it the powder exploded. One of the men was so severly injured that his recovery was considered doubtful; the other escaped better, and was conveyed to his house.

A St. Joseph, Missouri, paper of the 10 ult. says: Yesterday a colored lad, arrested at Agency Ford under the Vagrancy Act, was lodged in the county jail for safe keeping, and as the county court meets and assigns a day he will be sold to the highest bidder for cash, to serve out an approximately until he is twenty-one years of age.

The Window of the old Synod building Londonderry the scene of their Remonstrance at last evening. Tremendous excitement prevailed while the guns were being loaded, and a bullseye was fired through a pane of glass in the window of the room in which the Prince, seated with Lord Londonderry, was engaged in signing the Treaty. The shot passed over the head of the Prince and struck the wall behind him.

Splitting the Difference.

Who shall find a good ——— For its price is greater than rubies. And yet Table Talker has one which has not been published. One of the foremost lawers in Canada, is the famous Queens Council, Mr. O'Reilly, Kingston, who gained such reputation by his successful and highly dramatic management of the prosecution of Whelan for the murder of the Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee. Tall, handsome, florid, portly, jolly of eye and mellow of voice, he recalls irresistibly the councillor of fifty years ago, alike prepared for the battle of the bar, ready with a joke, or challenge, demurer. Well Mr. O'Reilly was once engaged for the plaintive in a suit where it was sought to recover $2,000, alleged to be due by defendant, who denied the existence of any liability what ever. It was on a country circuit. The jurors were of the agricultural persuasion. For two mortal days the council on both sides pelted them with authorities, references, objections, cross examinations, rebutting evidence, testimony in surrebuttal—Heaven and the Chief Justice only known what, till the honest farmers were reduced to a comatose condition. All this time O'Reilly had sat aloof, an when he rose a mournful sigh broke from the twelve jurors, sure that he too would bring down a perfect avalanche af authorities. Judge of their surprise and relief when the eminent counsel, in his blandest voice commended: "Gentlemen, I shall not seek wilfully to confuse you with false quotations, which cannot effect the judgement of honest and sensible men. The case is a very plain one. My client says the defendant owes $2,000; the defendent says he owes my client nothing.

They have been talking the matter over these two days and can come to no conclusion, I ask you to look at this question from the standpoint of your own plain, practical common sense. Suppose that any of you were about to trade horses, (here the jury pricked up their ears)—trade horses with me. I repeat, with me. You asked $100, I offered $80. We could not come to terms. We naturally went to some honest and sensible neighbor, as it might be your worthy foreman, and he decided that we should split the difference as the fair thing between man and man. This is all I ask you to do, just deal fairly between us, as you would be dealt by. I leave my case in your hands." In five minutes the Jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $1,000; that being the way of splitting the difference between $80 and $2,000; and the plaintiff has not ceased to regret to this day that he did not bring his suit for $4,000.

The Check Census.

The numbers given by the check census of the city were known and published some days ago, and on Wednday they were formally laid before the Council, and refered to in our next day's report of its proceedings. We have already commented on the returns, and much more need not be said. The population of the city is stated to be 117, 865, or 10,640 in excess of the figures given by the Government census. The mode of taking that census would unjustly exclude many that are now very properly included, and the population, notwithstanding the present excessive mortality, has doubtless had a natural increase during the almost twelve months which have elapsed between the taking of Government census and the one just finished by order of the Council. The Government enumators maintain that the difference in the mode of coutting under the two systems would make a difference reducing the results by fully eight per cent. There is reason to believe that the last census but one exaggerated the true rate of increase; and moreover it must be remembered that a certain proportion of the increase during the last decade has taken place beyond the imaginary lines known as the city limits. The census shows that the number of females exceeds that of males by 9,041. The proportion of Catholics to protestants remains pretty much unaltered—the former being 85, 480; the latter, 32, 385. Amongst those set down as Protestant are the Jews, who numbered between four and five hundred.

All things considered, the census is not quite so disappointing as it was at first felt to be. Our great expectations were to some extent based on grounds that were themselves open to question and the imagination was allowed too much play in case that should have been a matter for mere sober calculation. But the growth of the city can be correctly declared only by including the growth of the suburbs, which are virtually part and parcel of the city itself, though not allowed to figure in the census. To obtain an absolutely correct enumeration is next to an impossibility and if it really be true that some families or individuals have been unintentionally omitted, this may be counterbalanced by similar omissions on the part of the Government census.

The cost of taking the census has been $1, 765, being $235 less than the appropriation therefor. This is rather a novel, as well as a pleasing feature.—In any undertaking for the city to be excuted by contract, or where a given sum has been set apart, as in the present case, there is generally a little addendum of "extras" which, like the poscript to a lady's letter, contains the gravest matter of all. Montreal Witness.

Mrs. Radcliffe, whos chastity the claimant in the Tichborne case had impugned, gave her evidence on the 23rd ult, and aided considerably in proving him an imposter. She detailed the history of her relations with her cousin, and mentioned certain presents given to her by Mr. Roger, among which was no such article as a gold crucifix, which the claimant had specified. On the 22nd June, 1862, Roger left her, having given her on that day a paper in which he promised to build a church to the Virgin if he married her within three years. She had never seen him since. That she repeated, "I solemnly swear." Then she described minutely the appearance and habits of Roger Tichborne, and narrated her interview with the claimant, when he addressed her as "Lucy," and and Mrs. Townley, who accompanied her as "Kate." She expressed herself as "perfectly certain" that the claimant was not her cousin Roger an assertion which, after a rigid cross-examination, she again repeated with emphasis to Serjeant Ballantine. She also emphatically answered "Never" to the question whether he had ever said or done anything which might not be said or done by any honorable young man to a parentless girl.

A Terrible Case of Hydrophobia.

The Pittston (Pennsylvania) Gazette gives the following particulars of a most distressing case of hydrophobia:—About eleven weeks ago a young lady named Cox, daughter of Miles Cox, of Shoddarville, went into the yard to kill some chickens. The dog followed her, and picking up one of the chickens ran off with it. She chased him with a stick to recover it, and coming up with him he turned upon her and bit her upon the arm lacerating it fearfully. Her mother and brother coming to the rescue, were also badly bitten by the infuriated beast. The wounds healed however, and nothing more was thought of the matter. The young woman was engaged to be married to a young man living at Goldsboro', named Alfred Kerrick, and the wedding was appointed to come off at that place about two weeks ago. On the wedding morning as she was about to perform her ablutions the sight of water sent a shiver through her whole system and frightened her, and at the breakfast table the sudden bad news an effect upon her that she spilled it over the table. She then complained of feeling unwell, and her friends advised her to remain at home; but she said she did not want to disappoint Al, and accompanied by a sister, proceeded to Goldsboro, where the ceremony was performed, immediately after this she was seized with spasms, bearing all the indications of hydrophobia. In one of her lucid intervals she warned the company that she would bite them if they did not keep away from her. "Bet," she said to her husband, "Al, you need not be afraid I won't bite you." In one of her paroxysms she bit a lady who was endeavoring to soothe her. It was the wife of Dea. Hoffman, who drives the stage from Goldsboro to the Sand Cut, on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad. Soon after entering her husband that she would not bite him she was seized with convulsions, and laying back in his arms, she died. We have seldom been called upon to record so sad a case as this. For one moment a happy bride and then the victim of a horrid death. The other members of the family who were bitten by the dog have not as yet, displayed any symptoms of the disease, but they live in hourly dread.

Tragedy in a Theatre.

The Alexander Opera House and The Star, situated in Block-street, Sheffield, was on the morning of the 31st of Feb., the scene of a shocking tragedy. In the night time the place is left in charge of a watchman, and the person who has for the last two months filled the office was a man named Thomas Bradshaw, 34 years of age, a discharged soldier, who had served in India and China. He has only recently returned to Sheffield, after 14 or 15 years service. During his absence his wife received information that he had died, and married a table-blade forger named Wilson.

On the return of her last husband, she left Wilson and went back to Bradshaw, but they have not been happy together. It appears that it is against the rule of a theatre for her to visit her husband whilst he is engaged on duty, but on Monday night she disregarded this regulation, and remained with him in the wardrobe, after bringing his supper. There, according to her statement, he beat her, first with his fist, then with a poker, and afterwards, snatching up a hatchet, he struck her insensible, inflicting a terrible wound on the right side of the head, through which the brains protruded. Evidently supposing that he had killed her, he took off his scarf, coat, and boots, and by means of a winding staircase he proceeded to the "flies" over the stage. There he took up a rope about 20 feet in length, fastened one end to a piece of timber in the roof, the other end he twisted round his neck and, having done so, he took a leap in the direction of the stage. The "drop" being some 14 or 15 feet, his neck was dislocated, and death must of been instantaneous. At half past seven in the morning, a woman went to clean the theatre, but was unable to obtain admission. She waited until 10:30, when a number of persons, including one man named Moseley, the day man of the theatre, appeared on the scene. Moseley borrowed a ladder, and effected an entrance by a window in the rear of the stage. In the wardrobe he found Mrs. Buadshaw lying insensible weltering in her blood. Nothing had been seen of Bradshaw himself, but in a few minutes a young boy named Glossop observed the body of the suicide hanging from the roof, and came runing to tell them that the "dummy" policeman of the pantomime had hanged him. The body was immediately cut down, but was found to be cold and stiff. The unfortunate woman was removed to the Sheffield Infirmary, where her death is hourly looked for. Jealousy arising from the conduct of his wife during his absence is supposed to have led Bradshaw to commit the double tragedy.

A Terrible Earthquake.

An earthquake has destroyed the city of Schemacha, in Russia. According to the official report 118 persons were killed and 44 wounded, but all the inhabitants were left without shelter. Schemacha is or rather was, a city of 25,000 inhabitants, and lies on the road Tiflis and Baku, at the foot of the Caucasia Mountains, about seventyfive miles distant from the latter city. Schemacha is 2,316 feet above the Caspian, and 2,230 above the Black Sea, and was formerly the seat of government of the province, which, however, on account of the frequent earthquakes in that region, was transfered, about ten years ago, to to Baku, on the Caspian Sea. The inhabitants of Schemacha are nearly all Armenians.

EARLY DEATH OF A JOURNALIST.—Port Hope, March 15,—Mr. Henry James Buchanan, editor of the Port Hope "Times," died here to day of meningraitis after eleven days' illness. His funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, the Orangemen accompanying his remains to the grave. Deceased was a young man of marked ability, and gave promise of gaining eminence as a journalist. He was a native of Bathurst, New Brunswick, and was only twenty six years of age. He was for a short time engaged on the Montreal and Toronto press.—Port Hope Guide.

Real has been seen near St.-Paul.—He is reported to have expressed his intention to return to Manitoba, when he would submit to legal investigation. He declined to tell his destination, or to give any information as to whereabouts of Scott's body.—London Advertiser.

An American paper says:—"Mr. Kimball tells us that 8,000,000 of our free and independent citizens consume each an average yearly of eleven pounds of tobacco, to say nothing of one hundred and sixty-seven cigars. Perhaps no argument in favour of the use of the weed can be deduced from this; but it cannot be denied that this is an indulgence which is followed by no well-marked evil effects, moral or material. It is not just, therefore, to contrast tobacco with alcohol, and there is probably less difference between them than is usually supposed. At the same time, a young man anxious to lead a wise and well-ordered life, may well pause before he fixes upon himself a habit of which the advantage is not established, and certain, and especially a habit which may cost him a great deal of money.

THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certain fixed proportions of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combinations. Thus in the preparation, of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alchol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to bush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you wouldn't have seen converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year. Simon Tickler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what's more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

The Green Carpet Bagger.

A good story is told about a green carpet-bagger, who came to Washington some time last session with a considerable pile of greenback, and more curious stowaway, fell in one night with a lot of sharpers and robbers for a faro bank not far from the National Hotel. They took him around in a very genteel way; treated him copiously, and showed him some sights, and then, when they thought the proper time had arrived, proposed to take a little game of the tiger. The carpet-bagger nothing loath, followed them to their headquarters; and in order to make it appear perfectly fair, they proposed that the man who had the largest amount of money should be the dealer. The green carpet-bagger revealed his pile, which the crowd were very anxious to see, and to their delight it proved to be the biggest pile.

"You are to be dealer!" cried all.

"Oh, no, boys," protested the green carpet-bagger, "I can't deal; I dont know anything about it. I've backed many a time, but I've never dealt; I can't deal."

They all pounded that to be had the biggest pile, and had won the chance, he must be the dealer.

"No, no!" cried the green carpet-bagger. "I'll give ten dollars, twenty dollars, yes, fifty dollars, to any man who will deal in my place."

They all insisted that he should deal. He took up the cards in an awkward way, shuffled them with many a grimace, and as he was about to put the cards into the box from which they were to be drawn, his hand accidently slipped and pushed under the top card, the king of hearts, so that they all saw it. Every gambler immediately peppered on the king of hearts.

The green carpet-bagger at once cried out:

"Now, now, come boys, come, this wont do; you're taking advantage of me. There is something wrong, or you wouldn't all beat in that way directly. I won't play unless I can have another shuffle."

They all insisted that the game should go on just as it was, and after many protestations that it was not the fair thing to take in a stranger so, the green carpet-bagger proceeded to deal.

He slipped off the top card, and there beneath, sure enough, was the king of hearts.

They all pushed forward to sweep off the money, but the very green carpet-bagger, drawing off the king of hearts, exposed another king for the third card. This made spoils.

"I'll take half that pile, boys," said the greenest of green carpet-baggers. And he passed out with a serene expression of countenance to look at the statue of Freedom on the summit of the Capitol. They play no more with green carpet-baggers there.

Sunday Work don't Pay.

It being now the season for making maple sugar, and presuming that many of our country Sunday-school boys, are gathering the sap and boiling it down to sugar, it occurs to me that I can give them a short lesson in that line, that I have long remembered.

My lesson was taught me more than fifty years ago.

It was a sorry lesson; and the more so because my father taught it, or at least took a part in it; my father deeply regretted the part he took in it. And so have I But to the story.

It was before the hour of Sunday-school, one Sunday morning. Father and mother and all the children were at the breakfast table, when our father said; "I am at a loss what to do. Our practice is do no work the Sabbath day. I never boiled sap on this day; we ought to keep the day holy to the Lord, to keep our place in God's house But the sap has been running day and night, and though day and night we have been boiling it our sap-tubs are full, and we have no room to store it—it is running to waste." Turning to us, his two boys, he asked: "Could not you, boys, go to the north boiling place, and I to the south one, and quickly boil down the sap. It is far off in the woods; we shall not be seen, nor shall be disturb anybody."

We boys could not answer him a word—we were amazed.

But after family prayer it was resolved to carry out the suggestion, and our father went his way, and we worked faithfully the entire day.

As we boys were returning home at night, we were met by one of our neighbors who was a notorious Sabbath breaker and sceptic, and being glad to find the occasion, said to us: "What have you been about to-day? I know all about it. I saw the smoke from both your boiling places, you mean Sabbath-breakers! Your father a church-member, and you Sunday-school boys, you have been making sugar to-day; and now remember what I tell you; you will loose more before next Saturday night than all you have made to-day. God will punish you for this—depend upon it."

Thoroughly ashamed of ourselves, we escaped from him and went home.

On Monday morning, by our fathers direction, we proceeded to syrup down the entire boiling of the previous day. I should say that in those days we used the round-bottomed deep kettles, instead of the shallow flat ones now used.

By degrees we dipped from the several kettles the entire product into one, and as the process went on we stirred the fire with a pole used for the purpose, when the writer struck the bottom of the kettle, which had long been badly cracked, and the bottom fell out, and the whole work of the Sabbath went into the fire in a moment. But not quicker did the days work of the Sabbath disappear before our eyes than the words of our neighbor came back: "You will loose more before next Saturday night than all you have made to-day."

In after years, as the sugaring season returned, we made it all on the six days of the week, "and we rested on the Sabbath day according to the commandment."—Workman.

Courting Under Difficulties.

I made the acquaintance of a young lady once at a party, who was rather good looking, and I, being rather susceptible, of course fell in love.

I accompanied the young lady home, but had a very polite invitation to 'stay away,' from the young lady's father. But, nothing daunted, I resolved to win Jane Ann at all hazards. If anything, I rather liked old D——y's objections, for that made the thing romantic you know.

The next evening, knowing that Jane Ann would be at church, I borrowed a horse and carriage from a friend, and went there for the purpose of taking Jane Ann home after church was over.

I am afraid I did not pay much attention to the sermon that evening, and I thought at that time, it was the longest I ever listened to. But as everything earthly has an end, so had that sermon; and I thought it the happiest moment of my life when I assisted Jane Ann into the carriage.

We of course took the longest road possible to Mr. D——'s; and we it was an opposite direction to my horse's home, and as he had not had his supper, he did not care much about going; but I at last got him under way, and then I gave my attention to my companion, and commenced thus:

"Dear Jane, isn't this a beautiful——whoa, there! Where are you going to?"

The last was addressed to the horse who had suddenly taken a notion to turn around.

"See how beautiful the moon——whoa, there! Where in the dickens are you going to?"

The horse was going square into the fence.

"Oh, Jane, I long wished for this opportunity to tell you how much I——Come out of that you cat-muncher! Where in the mischief are you going to?"

The horse was going into the fence again but I straightened him and commenced again.

"I have long wanted to tell you, how much I love you——Come out of that you son-of-a-gun!—And oh! Jane, if I thought you——Where in the deuce are you going! Whoa, there!——loved me half as well as——confound that hungry old brute.—Can't you keep on the road?—Yes, Jane, I would be perfectly——darn that horse! Whoa there!"

It was too late. The horse turned clean around, upsetting the carriage and sending it all to smash, but fortunately not hurting Jane or I. I walked home with Jane but never finished my speech.

The carriage cost me forty dollars to get it repaired, and I have not indulged in the luxury of falling in love since.

A Kentucky girl says that when she dies she desires to have lemons planted over her grave, that the weed nourished by her dust may be cherished by heartbroken lovers. There is poetry in the idea.

"Good morning, Patrick; you have got a new coat on to-day, but I observed it was too much."—"Och! there's nothing surprising in that sure I was'nt there when I was measured for it.

"My dear sir," said his partner, when you finish this letter I will go." "No matter, no matter," said he, "I'll wash my hands when I get through."

A young lady of Logan county, Kentucky, has shivered a threefold gauntlet for her hand and heart. It is not stated whether she will take the lowest tender.

A pretty girl says: "If it was wrong for Adam to live single when there was not a woman on earth how guilty are old bachelors with the world full of pretty girls."

An old lady took her son to let the door, in order to keep out the wind. 'That will make it worse,' he replied, 'for you will know the wind whereit blows it indeed.'

An old lady, not remarkable for the clearness of her ideas, describing a fine summer evening, said: "It was a beautiful bright night; the moon made everything as light as a feather."

At a church collection for missions, the preacher said: "My christian brethren, let me caution those of you who put in buttons, not to break off the eyes; it spoils them for use, and they will not pass among the heathen for coin."

Why are potatoes like boys? Because the drier they are the better they crack.

A lady was lately hugged to death in Minnesota—another illustration of the "power of the press."

Why do young ladies confess that Ritualistic outrages are abominable? Because they are pretty in principle.

"My Lord," said the foreman of an Irish jury when giving in the verdict, "we find the man who stole the horse not guilty."

A private in the army recently sent a letter to his sweetheart, closing with,—"May heaven cherish and keep you from yours truly, John Smith."

At a dinner party in France a toast was given: "The land we live in." "With all me soul," responded an Irishman," "here's to poor auld Ireland."

A young lady says that a gentleman ought never to feel discouraged when the "momentous question" is negatived by the object of his choice, "for in life, as in grammar, we always decline before we conjugate."

Market Notice.—"No whistling near the sausage stalls."

Artemus Ward says, "George Washington's forte was not to her eany publis man of the present day resemble him to eony alarming extent."

Cricket Conundrum.—What passage of Scripture proves that St. Paul was a cricketer? "And Paul stood up before the eleven and was bold."

"Gentlemen of the Jury," said a Western lawyer, "I don't mean to insinuate that this man is a covetous person, but I will bet five to one that if you should bait a steel trap with a new threepenny piece, and place it within six inches of his mouth, you would catch his soul."

A Gentleman once boasted that he had drank two, three, or four bottles of wine and all the children were at the breakfast table, when our father said; "I am at a loss what to do. Our practice is do no work the Sabbath day. I never boiled sap on this day; we ought to keep the day holy to the Lord, to keep our place in God's house But the sap has been running day and night, and though day and night we have been boiling it our sap-tubs are full, and we have no room to store it—it is running to waste." Agricultural.

A CONDENSED 'PHILOSOPHY OF FARMING.'—Feed your land before it is hungry; rest it before it is weary; and weed it before it is foul.

INFLUENCE OF HOME.—A neat, clean, fresh-aired, sweet, cheerful, well-arranged house exerts a moral influence over its inmates, and makes the members of a family peaceable, and considerate of each other's feelings and happiness. The connection is obvious between the state of mind thus producing and respect for others, and for those higher duties and obligations which no laws can enforce. On the contrary, a filthy, squalid, noxious dwelling, in which none of the decencies of life are observed, contributes to make its inhabitants apathetic, and regardless of the feelings of others, and the constant indulgence of baneful passions renders them reckless and brutal.

DON'T WEAR TIGHT CLOTHING.—Never wear anything in the shape of clothing that can press upon the bloodvessels so as to impede the circulation. Put this down as a part of your hygienic philosophy. No matter what the fashions may be, insist upon carrying out this method of dress. Better have a good, round, plump, healthy body under a loose slouchy looking dress, if so it must be, than to have a poor, feeble, cadaverous body all but dead, covered up under a very nice, well-padded, well-fluted dress. Take this fact in, and never let it go out of your mind. It is curious, when one studies the human body, to see its vitality expressed for its own preservation, how it resist any incursion on the vital domain.—Laws of Life.

Maple Sugar.

Last spring in painting a lot of new covers for sap-buckets it occurred to me to make one side red and the other white. The object is this: in gathering sap where the trees are close together, and of course not in rows, it often puzzles a man to tell which trees he has visited. It is harder still if two or three men gather to one team or when you have to go and empty the barrels, or when night suspends the work until the next morning. The best local memory needs some help. Now, if when tapping you place all the covers red side up, for instance, and at the first gathering turn each covering white side up when you take the sap from the bucket, there never will be any uncertainty. You will never need to run to a tree the second time, nor miss one. You can tell ten rods off by the color of the cover whether there is sap in the pail. Each gathering will change the color of all the covers. If one does not wish the expense of planing and painting both sides, a simple 'dab' of red paint on one side will answer the purpose. One stroke of the brush will do. Still the covers ought to be planed and painted on both sides to keep them from soaking water, and from warping in the sun; and they can just as easily be painted different colors on different sides. They ought to be turned over, too, at each gathering, or they will warp, even if painted. So this device makes no extra expense or work, and saves many steps and much leaving of sap.—W. I. Chamberlain, Hudson, C. in American Agriculturalist.

Harrowing Winter Wheat.

It will be generally observed by farmers, that when spring opens and the snow leaves the soil, that the fields are more or less solidified on the surface by the action of the winter frosts. This is more especially the case with those on which winter wheat has been sown the fall previous. Often they are apparently more or less winter killed on the surface spots. Now what is wanted is to loosen the hard surface crust that has been formed, in order to let in the sunshine and warmth to the roots of the plants, and to let the surface water formed by the spring rains find its way readily into the soil instead of lying on its surface till evaporated. To do this, only requires the use of a tolerably fine sharp toothed harrow drawn over the surface early in the spring as soon as the ground is thawed out. We have on several occasions, in our experience, tried this plan and found it of great advantage to the wheat crop.

The fact is, that the harrow as a farm implement is not yet sufficiently appreciated. Most of those in use are too heavy, and their teeth too coarse. What we want is fine, sharp, steel teeth that will go through the soil without clogging up, and thus tearing out the roots of plants If the soil on which spring crops, such as peas or barley, has been sown, could be stirred up on the surface, after the plants have taken a good hold, it would be of great advantage; but at the same time it must be so done as to only stir up the surface soil without dragging over it. It is the dragging that tears the plants, out the sharp stirring up, if done with a harrow with fine, sharp steel teeth.

A WRINKLE ABOUT THE AGE OF HORSES.—The following information as to ascertain the age of a horse, after it has passed the ninth year, is quite new to us, and will be to the most of out readers. After the horse is nine years old, a wrinkle comes on the eyelid, at the upper corner of the lower lip, and every year thereafter he has one well-defined wrinkle for each year of his age over nine. If, for instance, a horse has three wrinkles, he is twelve. Add the number of wrinkles to nine, and you will always get at his age.

WHITEWASHING TREES.—An old farmer of the Germantown Telegraph says: The practice of coating the bodies and of ornamental trees with white-wash is one that cannot be too severely condemned. The obstruction of respiratory glands and orifices, whether effected by the application of whitewash or any other adhesive material, always acts as a fruitful source of disease, and is time proven fatal to the tree. When the bark becomes rough or encrusted with moss, it should be cleansed by scraping and washing down thoroughly with a solution of potash or soda water, affording smoothness to the surface, without obstructing the pores."

FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES is prescribed by the first physicians in every city and town where it has been introduced, and it is a thoroughly orthodox preparation.

Ayer's Cathartic Pill,

tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its compounding. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of its cures of the most distressing and dangerous diseases, but as these appear in every neighborhood, and we have not room to publish them, a few only will be given. It is adapted to all ages and constitutions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, and may be taken with safety by anybody. Children, who dread the nauseous compounds in sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and tempting, pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal visceras, to purify the blood, and stimulate into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure;—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colics and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Putrefaction of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and regenerative effect on the digestive apparatus.

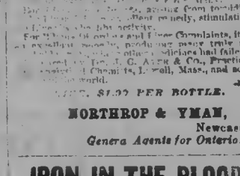
IRON IN THE BLOOD



MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protoxide of Iron, free from alcohol, is a perfect remedy for all diseases that arise from impoverished blood, or a debilitated condition of the system, such as the simplest forms of indigestion, loss of appetite, want of energy, nervousness, neuralgia, rheumatism, dyspepsia, blood purifying, creating an appetite, curing dyspepsia, strengthening the nerves, curing kidney complaints, and all diseases arising from a disordered liver, and new life infused into every portion of the body. In short, it is the great blood purifier, and new life giver, and a perfect remedy for all diseases of the system, arising from an impoverished condition of the blood, or a debilitated state of the system, from whatever cause originating. In Consumption, it has cured when all other remedies have failed. In Scrofula, Erysipelas, Scrofulous Humors, Boils, Pimples on the face, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores, Tetter, Salt Rheumatism, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in fact, in all diseases arising from impure blood, or a low state of the system, one trial will be proof to the most skeptical that Peruvian Syrup is what is claimed for it. Thousands have been changed from weak, puny, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women, and have testified to the wonderful curative powers of Peruvian Syrup, after all other remedies had failed. Pamphlets free. Send for it. Depot 36 Dey St., New York. Sold by Druggists generally.

Select Poetry.

The Year's Twelve Children.

January, born and grey,
Like an old Pilgrim by the way,
Watches the snow, and shivering, sighs,
As the still embers round him fires;
Or, huddled underneath a fleece,
Sits praying for the lingering morn.

February, third and cold,
Our farmers plodding, enters the wold,
And with his hearers two abreast,
Makes the keen plow do his behest,

Bright March comes blustering down the road
In his wrathy hand the axes goad;
Or, with a rough and angry haste,
Destroys the cowl o'er the coats.

April, a child: half tears, half smiles,
Trips full of Beltz playful wiles;
And laughing 'mid her rainbow hair,
Hails the wild Robin in the wood.

May, the bright maiden, singing gone,
In spring
In laughs lamp in the dells,
Lighting the simple village bells.

June, with the mower's scarlet face,
Shrivel'st for the clover field space,
And that his exercise o'erthe sweeps
Our spots from whence the lark has flown.

July, the farmer, happy fellow,
Laughs to see the corn grow yellow;
The heavy grain he tosses up
From his right hand as from a cup.

August, the reaper, chooses his way,
Through the golden wastes to hunt all day;
Or do his wagon piled with corn,
At sunset home in panoply thorns.

September, with his braying friend,
Leaps fierce and pale in every bound,
And casts into the wheat's seam
All carnivorous dangers from his barn.

October comes, a woodman old,
Fenced with tough leather from the cold;
Round swings his sturdy axe, and lo!
A fir-branch falls at every blow.

November cowers before the flaws,
Blear eyed, forgetting her own name!
Watches the kites native during the,
And broods upon old memories.

December, fat and rosy, strides
His old heart warm, well clothed his sides,
With kindly work for young and old,
The sheerier for the bracing cold;
Laughing a welcome, open flings
His doors, and as he does he sings.

LOVE UP A GUM TREE.

AN AUSTRALIAN STORY.

New South Wales is a colony peculiarly liable to floods. Its rivers usually take their rise amongst the lofty mountain ranges of the interior, and in the early part of their course are joined by numberless tributary streams. When the rainy season has set in, which generally commences about the middle of may. the down-pour sometimes continues for six weeks at a time, and then these rivers overflow their banks and flood the surrounding country far and near, forming in many places miniature seas. When these rains hundreds of farmers are ruined, thousands of sheep and cattle are generally destroyed, and not unfrequently many valuable lives lost. The "Weekly Dispatch" in a recent article on emigration to New South Wales, which, by the-bye, is more full of errors than it is of truisms, ignores all this, when, in touching upon farming, it speaks in terms of unqualified praise of the rich lands lying in proximity to the rivers, as if all those seeking the "new arrivals" should unhesitatingly settle down. With all due deference to the Dispatch, I would remark that if any one desires to run a great risk of being ruined every three years, and at the same time, very probably of being drowned in the bargain, he could not do better than to farm the rich river land; but if he wishes to thrive and grow rich with any degree of certainty, he could not do a more foolish plan.

Perhaps the district most liable to disastrous floods in the whole colony is the broad vale of the Hunter, whose every few years thousands of acres are submerged with a suddenness that is truly appalling. Houses are frequently buried even above the chimney-tops beneath the waters, which rapidly forms an inland sea of at least 15 miles long by 9 or 10 in breadth.

In the year 1851, I being then of the Australian mounted police, was quartered at Windsor; a neat little township about eighteen miles distant from Sydney, the metropolis of the colony, and the scene recorded. I had been lately engaged in the arduous and by no means unremunerative duty of hunting the illicit stills of which it was supposed there were several in the neighborhood. I certainly did my best to discover their whereabouts, but was completely unsuccessful, and after traversing the country day after day, in every kind of direction, until I must have travelled on foot each on horseback many hundreds of miles, I at last gave the matter up as a bad job.

If I had not discovered a still, I had, however, in the course of my wanderings found what gave me far greater delight, for I had fallen across one of the prettiest and most demure little girls that an Australian wilderness ever was ever had the honor of clapping eyes, and when was better, I had so far ingratiated myself in her good graces as to win her promise that she would never marry any one but me.

Our acquaintance had commenced in a romantic manner enough; I had rescued her from a wild cow, who would certainly have gored her had I not interposed and shot the heifer. She was too frightened to walk home alone, and as I accompanied her, was introduced to her parents as a matter of course, and as they were very profuse in their thanks, and begged me to consider myself as their guest as a matter of course, I readily took them at their word, and subsequently every other evening, and sometimes oftener, my company would be complimentarily solicited. Between the two I soon became very much smitten with the pretty Gertrude, and naturally I could not be insensible to the many little attentions which she showed me, studying my every wish, and, in fact, doing everything in her power to render my visits agreeable. Her father, too, was very kind to me, and I was a great favorite with the whole family, and I was a great favorite with the whole family, and I was a great favorite with the whole family

THE REASONS WHY
LAZARUS, MORRIS & Co's
CELEBRATED
Perfected Spectacles,
AND EYE GLASSES,
have met with such extraordinary success and are so much in demand:

1st. Because they are found to possess all the qualities claimed for them.

2nd. Because they will retain their adjustment to the sight of the wearer for a much longer period than any other Spectacles.

3rd. Because no glimmering or dazzling is experienced by their use, and, each lens being fitted on optical and scientific rules, they will suit any defective vision to the greatest nicety.

4th. Because the system of fitting is so simple that any person can select their own glasses with the greatest accuracy.

5th. Because being the best they are the cheapest.

Opticians, public lecturers, and others who have used inferior Spectacles and Eye-glasses, will best prove their inestimable value by procuring a pair of the above celebrated Spectacles.

A Continent Covered with Ice.

Prof. Agassiz comes to the conclusion that the continent of North America was once covered with ice for a mile in thickness; thereby agreeing with Prof. Hitchcock and other eminent geological writers who have already published reports of their observations, and say that the slopes of the Alleghany range of mountains are glacier-worn to the very top, except a few points which were above the level of the icy sea. Mount Washington, for instance is over six thousand feet high, and the rough, unpolished surface of its summit, covered with loose fragments, just below the line of which glacier-marks appear to an end, tells that it lifted its head alone above the desolate waste of ice and snow.

In this region, then, the thickness of the ice cannot have been much less than six thousand feet, and this is in keeping with the same kind of evidence in other parts of the country; for when the mountains are much below six thousand feet, the ice seems to have passed directly over them, while the few peaks rising to this height are left untouched. The glacier, he argues, was God's great plow, and when the ice vanished from the face of the land it left it prepared for the hand of the husbandman.

The hard surface of the rocks were ground to powder, the elements of the soil were mingled in fair proportions, granite was carried into lime regions, lime was mingled with the more arid and unproductive granite districts, and a soil was prepared fit for the agricultural uses of man. There are evidences all over the polar regions to show that at one period [illegible] of the tropics extended all over [illegible]. The ice period is supposed to [illegible] subsequent to this, and next to the last before the advent of man.

THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgment of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, a combination of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Eclectic physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certain fixed proportions of greater power and producing effects which could hardly result from the use of any one of them, or the different combinations. Thus in the preparation of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alcohol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as one and alike. It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to hush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have been converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Thrifter who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if PAIN-KILLER can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

The Maple Tree.

Hail to the pride of the forest—hail
To the Maple stout and green;
The bravest it yields the while never fail
When the winter winds are keen;
When the moon shines bright
On the wintry night,
And silvers the frozen snow,
Of the maple trunk,
As the sleighs dart to and fro;
Then it brightens the mirth
Of the social hearth,
With its red and cheering glow.

Hail to the Maple, proud tree!
It lifts its head on high,
When the crimson tint of daylight fades
In the glowing sunset sky;
And the sun's last beams
Through the foliage stream,
And brighten the gloom below,
And the deer bounds by,
With his flashing eye,
And the shy swift-footed doe;
And the sod winds cold
Through the branches wide
With a tender plaint of woe,

The Indian hunter [illegible]
With his bow in his red right hand;
And mourns that his race like a stream has sunk
From the glorious forest land;
But, blithe and free,
The maple tree
Still seems to sun and sir

[illegible]
Tree will [illegible]
But how soon not a trace
Of the red man's race
Shall be found in the landscape fair.

When the [illegible]
And the biting breath of the frozen blast,
Yields to the spring's [illegible]
Then away to the wood!
For the Shall [illegible]
And boys and girls,
With their sunny curls
Bring their vessels brimming over
With the luscious food,
Of the brave tree's blood
In the [illegible]

The blaze from the sugar bush gleams red,
Far down in the forest dark;
Its burning glow on the trees is shed,
And lights up the rugged bark—
And with noisy shout,
The busy rout
Watch the sap as it bubbles high;
And [illegible]
Of the [illegible]
And the yell and the song pass by,
And brave tales of old
Round the fire are told,
That kind'le youth's beaming eye.

Hurrah! for the sturdy maple tree!
Long may it [illegible]
In native strength, stalwart and free,
Meet emblem for the brave—
And a nation's peace
With its growth increase,
And its worth be widely spread,
For it lifts not in vain
To the sun and the rain
Its tall majestic head;
May it grace our soil,
And ward our toil,

Agricultural.

Early Vegetables.

The first of the spring months have arrived, we are reminded that real vegetation will soon be looked for even in northern localities. Soon the [illegible] in the warm sunshine, and eat their crisp lettuce and early radishes from the open ground long before we can produce them here in our hot-beds; but as a rule, where nature is prodigal, her productions are not so highly appreciated as under circumstances quite opposite. Consequently, our rigorous climate stimulates us to greater exertions in producing luxuries, as well as the necessities of life.

Making Hot-Beds.—Every one who has a garden now-a-days is [illegible] of hot-beds frames and sashes for [illegible] should be any reader of the Rural New Yorker who has not provided himself with these very convenient if not positively necessary adjuncts of the vegetable garden, it is time he commenced. A half dozen sash three feet wide, and five or six long, will answer very well for starting early vegetables sufficient for a small family. The sash should be made strong, and of well seasoned pine plank, two inches thick. Glass 6 by 8, or 7 by 9, are good and economical sizes [illegible] larger, they are more liable to break; the sash will be correspondingly heavier, on account of less [illegible] the number of longitudinal bars—there being, of course, no cross-bars, as in common window sash. Frames on which the sashes are to rest can be made of any [illegible] plank, a foot or more in [illegible] together with a [illegible] to increase the strength.

Making the Hot-Bed.—Fresh stable manure should be used, and that which is unfermented. Place a sufficient quantity in a heap, and [illegible] it will begin to ferment briskly, then place it in some sheltered position, such as the south side of [illegible] cut-building, remembering that the deeper the manure the stronger and more lasting will be the heat. Eighteen inches is a good depth, but two feet is better; and be careful to have the heap of equal consistency throughout—not light and loose in one place and compact in another, for the [illegible] would not [illegible] manure should be made firm, but not packed or tramped down. Make the bed at least a foot [illegible] than the frame, and when the surface is made level, put on the frames and sash. The outside of the frames are banked up with manure, and the back side raised a little to give the sash sufficient inclination to [illegible] water which may fall upon them in showers. This [illegible] frame also be [illegible] bottom [illegible] frame, but narrower than the back; but when the frames are banked with manure this can be done by raising the back side five or six inches and securing it in this position. The soil may be put on immediately, or delayed a day or two until the manure is quite hot. Good, rich, friable soil should be used, and put on to the depth of five or six inches; [illegible] has become rather [illegible]

There should also be a sufficient room left at one end of the [illegible] transplanting the tomato and egg plants, which [illegible] few good lucky plants are worth more than a great number of weaker, weakly specimens, and these can only be secured by giving plenty of room, and perhaps occasionally pinching off the [illegible] Another [illegible] plants is in giving plenty of air on warm days; this prevents what is usually called among gardeners "drawing up plants." In very cold weather it will also be necessary to cover the [illegible] old sacks, or some similar material. Watering—Care should be taken to [illegible] operation, [illegible] two or three, but not [illegible] enough to keep the soil moist. Cold water from a [illegible] should not be used, as it will be very likely to check the growth [illegible] warm a few hours before [illegible] it into a barrel or [illegible] ahead, and then placed in a warm place. Tender plants are often ruined by applying cold water to them.—Rural New Yorker.

A Preacher's Strategem.

When Lorenzo Dow preached under a large spread pine, in South Carolina he [illegible] another appointment for [illegible] day [illegible] The year passed, and as Lorenzo was entering the neighborhood the evening previous [illegible] appointment, he overtook a [illegible] boy [illegible] a long tin horn, and could [illegible] forth such a blast [illegible] and swell, and cadence as woke the echoes of the distant hills.

Calling aside the blower, Dow said to him—

"What's your name, sir?"

Sure enough at that moment the trump of Gabriel [illegible] the women shrieked, and many fainted, the men sprang up and stood aghast, some ran, others fell and cried for mercy, and all felt for a time that the judgment was set, and the books were opened.

If a colored boy with a horn can frighten you almost out of [illegible] will you do when you shall hear the trumpet of the archangel? How will ye be able to stand in the great day of the wrath of God?" He made a very effective application.

Select Poetry.

The Wind and the Rose.

A little red Rose blossomed all alone
In a hedge by the highway side;
And the Wind came by with a pitying moan,
And thus to the flow'ret cried:

"You are choked with dust from the sandy hedge;
Now see what a friend can do!
I will pierce a hole in the tangled hedge,
And let the breeze come through."

"Nay, let me be—I am well enough!"
Said the Rose in deep dismay;
But the Wind is always rude and rough,
And of course he had his way.

And the breeze blew soft on little red
But she was sore afraid,
For the naughty boys—her ancient foes
Came through where the gap was made.

"I see," said the Wind, when he came
And looked at the trembling flower,
"You are out of place; it is very plain
You are meant for a lady's bower."

"Nay, let me be," said the shuddering Rose,
"No sorrow I ever had known,
Till you came here to break my repose;
Now please to let me alone."

But the will of the Wind is as strong as death
And little he recked her cries;
He plucked her up with his mighty breath,
And away to the town he flies.

Oh, all too rough was the windy ride
For a rose so weak and small;
And soon her leaves on every side
Began to scatter and fall.

"Now, what is this?" said the wondering Wind,
As the Rose in fragments fell;
"This paltry stem is all I find—
I am sure I meant it well!"

"It means just this—that a meddling friend,"
Said the dying stalk "is sure
To mar the matter he aimed to mend,
And kill where he meant to cure."

Choice Literature.

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner

SIR,—

I doubt not but many of your readers will be interested to hear the termination of the proceedings instituted by Mr. John Rea, of Belfast, against Col. Hillier, for illegal arrest and imprisonment on the anniversary of the closing of the gates of Derry in 1870. I therefore forward you the charge of the Lord Chief Justice:

Having advised them not to be influenced by the impassioned speeches they had heard, but to look into the matter with stoical composure, he observed that the defendant, Colonel Hillier, as Deputy Inspector General of the Royal Irish Constabulary, represented the principle of authority, which was always to be respected. The plaintiff complained that he had been assaulted and falsely imprisoned by the defendant. A vast number of topics, historical, political and rhetorical, had been introduced into the case. This, however, was not a court of politics, but a court of law, and the issues the jury were sworn to try were, whether the pleas and defences put in by the defendant were true or not. Many observations had been made by the learned counsel who opened the case for the defendant as to the necessity of upholding the authority of the Government in the country. Those general observations might be well founded, but on the other hand it might be said that that meant government and authority according to law. He knew of no other principle of government than that which this court sought to maintain and to enforce. It had been said more than once by the learned counsel that the convenience of the government in doing what they thought right should be carefully observed and consulted by the jury. In his opinion, the convenience or inconvenience which their verdict might give to anybody was not of the slightest importance. They were not at liberty to give a verdict to the plaintiff unless he deserved it, and they were not at liberty to deny him the justice that he sought (if he had a claim to it) by reason of his loud voice, or his intemperate manner—his past political adventures, or his future political speculations. (Laughter.) Mr. Rea might think, for all he knew, that he was about to redress the grievances of the age. Many people had indulged in fancies of that nature. Whether, when they had lived long enough, they had found themselves able to realise those anticipations, he need not stop to inquire. (Laughter.) But, if he was a demagogue—and the greatest demagogue that ever walked in Ireland—still, when he came into a court of law, the question was not what ought to have been done to him in past times, but whether, in the particular question which he submitted to the court and jury, he was right or wrong. In this country, where, he hoped, this court would always stand apart from, and above all, political men and political parties and factions and cliques, it would never answer to reply to the demand of any man who sought redress from the law by saying, 'You have been a very troublesome sort of a man, and you seem likely to go on talking in the same way you have hitherto done, and therefore the jury ought not to give you any damages.' If he did not deserve damages on the facts and the law of the case, they were bound to find a verdict against him; and if he was entitled to damages, why then, the very definition of justice was, that they were bound to give to every man his due. The defendant seemed to have given his evidence with the utmost fairness and candour. There was no doubt that he was a gentleman of honour, and a credit to the administration which he served—However, in dealing with any one of those estimable officials—those respectable men who had appeared before them—they must apply even to the consideration of their conduct and their acts, the same rules of law, unbending and impartial, which they applied to the consideration of the conduct of every man in the State. This trial certainly ought to inspire with a just respect for the law all the subjects of the Queen for they now saw, that if a man, whether he were in a high walk of life or in an inferior condition, were injured in the slightest particular by any man—and must he might be an official in the State—the injured man had a sure and certain remedy by submitting as he ought, to that authority which was put in force against him, and then appealing to the law, which watches over, controlled, and, if necessary, punished a man in authority, just as much as a man who had no authority, and rendered to the person injured that justice and that reparation to which he could fairly lay claim. The plaintiff complained first that he was assaulted and given into custody there, and dragged thence to the courthouse, and there imprisoned for a long time. The first defence put forward by the defendant was a denial. His second defendant was a denial.—His second defence recited the Act of Parliament of the 13th of Victoria, chapter 2, which enacted that all assemblies of persons in Ireland who should march and parade together, or join in procession, and carry flags, banners, music, &c., should be unlawful assemblies. Then it appeared that the plaintiff was a member of an unlawful assembly, who met and paraded, and joined in procession, and carried flags, the display whereof was calculated to excite animosity, that Colonel Hillier had persons' view of this, and repeated aloud to the plaintiff and the other persons unlawfully assembled the command provided by the Act of Parliament, that they should disperse, and that the plaintiff and the others who so assembled did not after a quarter of an hour disperse, whereupon the defendant, to prevent the plaintiff from further parading in procession, caused the constables to prevent him from coming out of the Corporation Hall to further parade in the streets, and to preserve the peace, to apprehend the plaintiff, and convey him from the Corporation Hall to the courthouse there to be dealt with in the due course of law. In dealing with the issue knit on this defence the jury would have to inquire whether the plaintiff was a member of an assembly parding the streets of Derry; whether there was any such procession at all in the streets of Derry: whether he wanted to come out from the hall to parade again; and whether it was for the purpose of preventing him from doing so that the defendant had him arrested. It seemed to him to be exceedingly difficult to maintain that plea on the facts. In the next defence the defendant stated that while he and the constabulary were acting in the preservation of the peace, and there was a great riot, tumult, and disturbance, and before it was fully quelled, the plaintiff committed a breach of the peace, by attempting to continue and increase the riot, and thereupon the defendant, for the preservation of the peace, commanded the constable to take him into custody and convey him to the courthouse, there to be dealt with according to law; and he was accordingly apprehended, and afterwards dealt with according to law. That plea involved the consideration of what was a riot. Where was the evidence of that riot. The next defence was something like the former, and the questions that would arise on it for their consideration would be, was their a riot at all? Did the plaintiff share in it? Was it nearly over? Did the plaintiff insist on coming out to renew it? And was it on any such ground that he was arrested? The last plea was, that the plaintiff was obstructing the defendant and the other constables in the execution of their duty. It was a serious offence to interfere with or obstruct any of the officers of the law in the execution of their duty. The first Procession Act was the 2nd and 3rd of William IV. It recited that—Whereas great numbers of persons belonging to different religious denominations, and distinguished respectively by various emblems expressive of party feelings and differences, are in the habit of meeting and walking in procession in Ireland upon certain anniversaries and other occasions; that these processions were calculated to create animosities and excite sanguinary conflicts. It was hereby enacted that any body of persons who should meet and parade together, for the purpose of celebrating or commemorating any festival, anniversary, or political event, connected with religious or other distinctions, or who should bear, or have among them firearms, or other offence weapons, or any banner, emblem, flag or symbol, should be deemed an unlawful assembly. He suspected that the people in Derry were pointing their attention to the first act, and thought they had a case to take themselves out of the operation of it, for the words were that the persons must be parading in procession, and, commemorating a festival, anniversary, or political event, connected with religious or other distinctions, and that the shutting of the gates of Derry was not one of the anniversaries pointed at by this Act of Parliament; it was levelled at the great processions that had been held on the 12th of July, and at other times throughout this country. The jury had often heard and read—and it had done a great deal of mischief in this country—that the Legislature—in its wisdom: and he desired to vindicate the Legislature from the accusation—passed an act in a provincial illiberal spirit, and aimed and levelled it at those men, at whom it ought to be levelled, if they desired it, in Londonderry, and excluded from its operation processions of Individuals who might be engaged upon much more dangerous work elsewhere. Now, that was not so; and very likely those people had fallen into a mistake upon the subject. The act was set out in the plea. It stated that a number of persons had been in the practice of assembling and marching in procession in Ireland, in a manner calculated to create and perpetuate animosities between different classes of her Majesty's subjects, and endanger the public peace, and enacted that all assemblies of persons in Ireland who should meet and parade together or join in procession, and who should bear, wear, or have amongst them any firearms or offensive weapons, banners, emblems, flags, or symbols, the display whereof might be calculated or tend to provoke animosity between different classes of her Majesty's subjects, or who should be accompanied by any person playing any music or singing any song which might be calculated to provoke animosity between different classes of her Majesty's subjects, should be an unlawful assembly; and every person present at it should be guilty of misdemeanour. Upon the working of that Act it was quite plain that what would have been necessary in framing an indictment upon the first Act—namely, to state the particular anniversary in the indictment—was not at all necessary under the second Act, which was couched in more general and comprehensive language, and, in his opinion was levelled at all processions, north, south, east, or west, or which might take place in the city of Dublin, though it was not to commemorate an anniversary. It might be a funeral, it might be anything, provided that the evidence showed that it fell within this general language—that it was an assembly which met and paraded in procession, and which bore flags, or banners, and was calculated to provoke animosity between different classes of her Majesty's subjects, and therefore, he was certainly inclined to the opinion that if the shutting of the gates of Derry with a crimson flag, or one of any other colour—and it was an odd thing that a colour, which was an innocent and beautiful thing in itself, should be calculated to provoke animosity—that the doing of that thing was calculated to provoke animosity between different classes of her Majesty subjects it would come within the meaning of the Act of Parliament just as much as any other anywhere else. The second portion of the act was preventive, and this was evidently what was running in Colonel Hillier's head. It provided that any justice of the peace might proceed to the place where there was any such unlawful assembly and read aloud the following words, 'Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth charge and command all persons here assembled immediately to disperse and peaceably to depart upon pain of fine and imprisonment according to the statute of the 13th Victoria. God save the Queen; and if within a quarter of an hour they would not leave and go home to their respective places of abode he may apprehend them, either with or without warrant for that purpose. It was for them to consider whether one or other branch of the Act of Parliament was applicable to the state of facts of the present case. The jury had heard a great deal about the proclamation. The history of the proclamation was contained in the evidence of a very respectable gentleman who was examined, Captain Keogh, who stated that he drew it up. Captain Keogh said that on the Sunday he had seen Mr. O'Donnell, who was described as the leader of the Working Men's Association, who had issued their proclamation. Now, that was a little unusual. He had thought that the prerogative of issuing proclamations belonged to her Majesty and to her representatives in this country. Whether Mr. O'Donnell had been raised to such a position as to justify him in issuing proclamation, he was not aware. (Laughter.) The proclamation was to prevent the procession by force. Probably this Mr. O'Donnell was a good-natured sensible man, like Mr. Rea, talked a good deal of nonsense in the country—(laughter)—but if he really meant to take the law into his own hands, and really meant to march into the streets and do anything of that kind by firearms, and if he happened to be present now in court, he had only to tell him as delicately as he could that he had been on the verge of high treason. Capt. Keogh said he had refused to see a number of members association as a deputation, but he consented to see one, who told him he was not satisfied with having the magistrates allow the Apprentice Boys to go to the church in the way they did on Sunday. That was an extraordinary communication, and not a little presumptuous to make any magistrate. He trusted no man would ever again venture to call upon one of the justices of the peace to state anything of the kind. Captain Keogh said this man was violent and excited upon the ground of some persons having gone to church, and that to calm him he told him no further display would be allowed. A meeting of the magistrates was held, and there appeared to have been a division of opinion as to the propriety of prohibiting these processions. However, a resolution was adopted to the effect that they should be prevented; and the question as to their power to do that by proclamation was submitted to a functionary only known in Ireland. In England if such a question was submitted to the Home Secretary, the answer would be 'You must decide that for yourselves; you are justices af the quorum, and are, therefore, assumed to be perfect Solons.' However, here those gentlemen could take counsel of an official who, he believed, was asked a great number of questions every day on a great variety of subjects—the Law Adviser; and who, it would seem, gave the sanction of his authority to the proclamation which had been made so much of in the progress of the case. What did that purport to do? This—to prevent the burning of the effigy, and to prevent 'persons with or without flags, banners, sticks or bludgeons,' walking on the walls of the city. Now, if he was pinned into a corner and forced to give an opinion on that—which he was not, and which, therefore, he would be very delicate about doing, seeing that so many learned gentlemen had already considered the matter—he would say that those gentlemen—that body of magistrates—could no more law by proclamation than they could build a house by proclamation. Lord Coke, one of the greatest legal atborities of all times, had, writing before the time that even Derry was built, laid that down. It was the custom in those olden days for the king when any question arose, to call in his most eminent judges, for the purpose, cleverly enough contrived, of making them prejudge a case before it arose; and on the occasion to which he referred the sovereign was in a perplexity as to the overgrowth of London, and as to the danger of being unable to feed the population. Accordingly the judges were consulted, and Lord Chief Justice Coke being pressed for an opinion as to whether the erection of further buildings in the city or the use of wheat in the manufacture of starch, could be prohibited by His Majesty's proclamation, said—'The king cannot change any part of the common law, nor create any offence by proclamation which was not an offence before, without the sanction of Parliament.' It was therefore no answer to a complaint for false arrest that the person so complaining had been arrested under the authority of a proclamation, unless it was shown that he had offended against the law of the land. It might be a warning to persons to behave themselves, but could not give jurisdiction to the magistrates beyond what they had already. The defendant, however, use it in this way—he read it at the Castle, he saw appended thereto the signatures of several magistrates; and, without criticising its contents—which being unacquainted with the law he was probably unfit to do—he went down to Derry, feeling bound to accept it as his instructions, and determined to carry out its provisions. The first practical question they would have to consider was, was the plaintiff asserted as a matter of fact? As to that they could have no doubt; five or six witnesses had proved it, and the defendant himself admitted it. The question was, what was he arrested for, which they would find the cardinal consideration in the case. Having analysed the evidence of M'Neely, Sub-Inspector Joyce, the defendant, Colonel Peyton, and Dr. Miller, the mayor, as bearing on this point, his lordship said they would perceive that he had been arrested for two reasons because that he was a ringleader, and because that he had obstructed the defendant in the discharge of his duty. Now, Colonel Hillier, when asked how he had obstructed him, replied that he complained to the mayor that his detention in the hall was illegal; that he (the col.) interposed, and that Mr. Rea, in a loud voice reprimanded him for interfering. Unless that could be deemed interference or interemption, in his opinion that defence failed. Let them look at the matter in this light. If the plaintiff did interrupt the defendant in the execution of his duty that was an indictable offence; and he ought to have been indicted, and had the charge been sustained, would have received heavy punishment; but how could that have been proved? Had the evidence given at that trial been tendered, he did not think the case was one that he could have left to the jury. Again, however, the defendant said he ordered his arrest because he was a ringleader. That was a very vague offence. A ringleader of what? Expounding the law to them, he was bound to state that there was nothing of which the Constitution was more jealous than depriving a subject of personal liberty. But the defendant said that Mr. Rea was a member of an illegal assembly; that he was a ringleader, and that, therefore he was arrested. What was he doing? What did the illegal assembly do? The defendant replied—'I don't know, for he was inside and I outside, therefore I don't know what was done.' Was there an illegal assembly in the Corporation Hall? Was there an assembly for illegal purposes, armed and congregated with the design of committing violence, or inspiring terror, though under the pretence of carrying some harmless resolution? What were the resolutions proposed and adopted, who were the speakers, and that flags of a certain color were exhibited—crimson, he believed—that they were called upon to decide upon that whether or not that assembly was an illegal one. A great deal had been said to colors in the progress of the trial. Green, in his opinion was a beautiful color, crimson was a charming color, blue was a handsome color, and orange was not an ugly color. Why should there be anything offensive in it he did not know, except the association which the sight of it recalled excited as a certain color was said to excite a turkeycock. in speaking of the things proved in connexion with the meeting he had omitted to mention the fact that ladies were there to adorn and grace the assemblage. In dealing with this part of the case they should guard against allowing the right of their fellow-subjects to be interfered with in the expression of any political opinion which they might choose to ventilate. Further he was bound to tell them what he had mentioned, and what had been proved in regard to the meeting were not the marks and token of an unlawful assembly. If they came to that conclusion, then the plaintiff ought not to have been arrested because of his being a ringleader of an unlawful assembly, there having been no such thing. But they came to another point—the burning of the effigy that they had heard so much about; and, en passant, he might observe, that he had been not a little struck by the manner in which counsel had consistently spoken of this, as if the people on that 19th December were engaged in the act of consuming by fire a living man. (A laugh.) Landy, he was happy to tell them, had been dead 150 years, and according to the Whig historian, his memory is held in execration by the Protestants of the North of Ireland'; and judging from his character, as painted by Macauley, his doings would have been execrated by even the gallant Sarsfield or King James. That eminent authority said his effigy was annually burned in London, but the celebration years ago fell into the hands of children and coalporters, and latterly had been altogether discontinued. He collected from the writings of Swift that this was exhibited in Dublin and it was reported that the dean, on one 4th of November, asked a watchman at the deanery, whom he heard was a great maker of rhymes, to put something in rhyme for him about the following day's anniversary; when in ten minutes the man responded—

'To night's the day, I say it with great sorrow,
When we were all to have been blown up to-morrow;
Therefore be aware of fire and candle light:
This is a cold frosty morning, so good night.

(Laughter.) Had the people went through the thoroughfares with this effigy, and had that been likely to create a disturbance, there might have been reason for interfering; but he was not so sure that they had authority to go before houses or himself built for that purpose. However, he would not say that their action was illegal, and he would certainly not say that it was legal. It was not necessary that he should give any directions on that, inasmuch as he had to tell them that if that meeting was convened for a lawful purpose, and that some individuals without the privity of the whole assembly could not be visited upon them so as to change a lawful meeting into an unlawful one. They had it in evidence that the manufacture of the little Landy from materials artfully introduced into the hall in the interior of a big drum, had been kept secret to five or six individuals as they had Mr. Rea's oath that he knew nothing of it. If they were satisfied upon that, then, that the plaintiff at the audience when he addressed was not aware what was doing on the roof, and the assembly, in its inception, was lawful, it continued lawful, and there would be no reason for arresting Mr. Rea with or without a warrant for anything he had done in connexion with the meeting. What the plaintiff next complained of was a detention in the courthouse till seven or eight o'clock, and on that subject he would give them the authority of Lord Tenterden, who had laid it down that after a person was known he could not be detained in custody pending a charge to be brought against him at a future time. A very peculiar incident in the case was, that on information made by Capt. Redmond, R. M., subsequent to the discharge of the plaintiff. He thought that in cases having a political complexion things of this kind should be done above-board; and it was evident that Mr. Butt, in his cross-examination of that gentleman, (Capt. Redmond), gave it to be understood that this, in his opinion, was an afterthought, for the purpose of giving a different color to the transaction, from that which it in reality it presented. He would not go further than observe that it was not a very correct 'record' of what had occurred, and it was certainly peculiar that though these gentle men were magistrates, and ought to have been conversant with what ought to have been done, this information had not been returned in the usual way to the proper officer. Other elements had been introduced into the case—various persons had been named in what he must style a burlesque manner, by the plaintiff, but the only question they had to decide—were those raised upon the issues which he had already explained to them. If they came at all to the question of damages, they must leave out of consideration the fact that the defendant was likely to be indemnified by the Executive. They ought not to give one sixpence additional to the plaintiff because of that. He had only to receive damages for the wrong he had sustained, if any, for the affront to his person, for the deprivation of his liberty, and for the seizure of him in open day, without warrant—he at the time committing no offence. They would consider the case with their usual good judgement and good sense.

The jury then retired, and after a lapse of about 15 minutes returned with a verdict for the plaintiff assessing damages at £100, and 6d costs. The result was received with applause in court, which was at once checked.

With reference to this case, the Derry Sentinel says: "There is still hope for the citizens of Derry that a victory was obtained for Constitutional government in Ireland. The Star Chamber of olden time was uprooted, and now 'Proclamation Law' is ended for ever: for which we thank a mixed jury of patriots, and an upright and constitutional judge." The verdict and costs will cover £100, but that is a bagatelle when compared with the check given to Castle hacks usuing there influence to extinguish the immortal memories of the Maiden City, which shall never be forgotten by Irish freemen.

Men who have neither energy nor brain deride Mr. Rea as an Ishmael, but it needed a man like him to test Constitutional Law, and he has succeeded.

Throughout the whole country one feeling is manifest with regard to this extraordinary case—that of triumph at the victory won, which is not confined to one party for the sympathy of the Dublin Roman Catholic population appears to be entirely with the Apprentice Boys, as in all quarters of the city the feeling was similar to that exhibited so strongly every evening in the hall of the Four Courts, where the case was tried.

English and Scotch Borderers—A Border Story.

It was some years before the union of the two countries—when Lord Scroope was Warden of the West Marches of England and Governor of Carliale Castle—that some of the notorious Armstrongs, in a raid on English soil, for want of better booty robbed a poor fool—who was his Lordship's jester, by the way—named "Dick o' the Cow," of his three cows, which they drove off to Liddesdale, and, not content with that, brutally stripped off and stole the coverlets of the fool's wife's bed.

Probably, "innocent fule" though the old ballad calls him, Dick was not quite so silly as he looked. By way of consoling his better half, Dickie told her that where she had lost one cow she would soon have three. Seeing that he was anything but a fighting man, and that all the Armstrongs were little else, it no doubt must have puzzled the good woman to think how the jester would keep his word.

So Dickie went off drearily to consult master, and for once his jesting stock have been of rather a lachrymose order for Lord Scroope cut him short in the talk. Whereto, with refreshing brightness, after naming his loss, the poor fool replied:

But I may nae longer in Cumberland dwell
To be your puir fule and your hush;
Unless you gie me leaves and beal.
To gae to Liddesdale and fesh.

The wardies of the English marches had no special objection to the payment provided that Dickie gave his word that he would rob those only who had stolen from him. Leave granted, the jester started away in his capacious breeks a bridle and a pair of new spurs, and started alone for the stronghold of the Armstrongs on a mission which boded little good to his neck. When he got there, to his dismay he found no fewer than thirty-three stout fellows of that wild clan at home. "The Laird's Jock"—as they called the son of the Laird of Mangerton, the chief of the Armstrong clan—sat at the head of the old hall table feasting. But, nothing daunted at the show of numbers, up went Dickie to him with a characteristic greeting,

Well may ye be, my gude Laird's Jock,
But the ill bite o' your companie.

He then made formal complaint that Jock's man, Johnnie and Willie Armstrong had robbed him of his three cows last night. Johnnie instantly proposed that the "impostor," with a good pummel cuff, should rather equivocal, ludic Dickie sit down and eat a bit of cum of his own cows. His heart was too heavy, naturally enough, for his appetite to be very good under such circumstances. As the night wore on, his sharp eyes saw something which suggested what must have looked to anyone but a half-witted person a very hazardous revenge. Wet, tired, and sleepy, it did not occur to the mastrooopers that there was any occasion for them to exercise any vigilance over a "pair innocent" like Dick o' the Cow. So they were all soon asleep, but not before he had seen one of them hide the key of the stable above the "doorhead." When the mastrooopers were nearing Dickie was off to the stable "where there stood thirty horses and three." Thirty of them, by way of preventing pursuit, he coolly hamstrung then and there, which the old ballad-singer calls tying them with St. Mary's knot:

He's them a' o' St. Mary's knot,
A' these horses but barely three;
He's loupen on ane, ta'en another in hand,
And away as fast as he could hie

And it was high time Dickie did hie away. The horse—that of the Laird's Jock—which he had left behind, out of gratitude for saving his life overnight, was still available, and pursuit was not long delay

Hay sold in Town on Tuesday at $26 per ton. Famine prices surely.

Mr. Carroll will D.V. preach in the Baptist Chapel next Sunday at 11 a.m., and in the Music Hall at 7 p.m.

Sleighing here has been continuous since November last. The oldest inhabitant remembers not a more stubborn winter.

Hay sold in our market this week at $25 per ton, and is scarce at that. Much distress is felt in parts of the County for want of fodder. All winter straw has sold at $10 and upwards per ton. The early grass will be welcomed by all.

We understand that J. A. Roseborough is so well pleased with the liberal patronage his friends and the public in general have bestowed upon him during the past season, that he is now encouraged to add millinery, mantles and dress-making to his prospering business. We wish him every success in his undertaking.

We are happy to be able to announce that our Member, Mr. T. M. Fairbairn, has been able to arrange his business affairs so as to permit his removal to Peterboro, where he will resume his practice. We much regretted Mr. Fairbairn's departure, but rejoice more at his return. All classes of our community will be glad to again have in our midst one who has always been so good a citizen.

The Peterborough Review has set afloat the statement that the water on the gravelly flats in Peterboro is bad. And this item of news has been copied by the Provincial press. We do not know from what impure fountain our contemporary has been drinking, but this we know, that the water on the gravelly flats in Peterboro is not bad. On the contrary, there is not better water in Canada than we are favored with. We don't take kindly to such wholesale slander, and we think it ill becomes any lover of our good town to spread broadcast such mischievous statements.

The Intelligencer of Friday last says—"One year ago yesterday the ferry plying between Belleville and Prince Edward commenced running. To-day the ice bridge is as firm as it was in the middle of winter, and from present prospects it will be a month before navigation is open." Rather a poor show for this wonderful harbor. We believe it closes a month earlier in the fall than the Lake Ports. The Cobourg and Port Hope harbors are all but clear of ice.

The committee of the Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the following donations for February & March; from the Curlers Club, a barrel of flour; from the Presbyterian Church, per Miss Roger, a basket of cakes; Mrs. Alex. Smith, a parcel of clothing, jam, apples and biscuits; Mr. White, a qtr. of lamb; a friend, nine cups and saucers.

Mr. Keefer and Mr. Hubertas were in town on Monday, and appeared before the Council to obtain a grant towards a survey of the line for the Ottawa and Toronto Railway. These gentlemen are going over the Country to form a general idea of the engineering facilities for the line. They assert that the country is much more favorable than they anticipated. We wish them success.

The School Board met on Tuesday evening. Present, G. A. Cox, D. W. Dumble, Wm. Toole, George Edmison, Jno. McClelland, A. Smith and A. B. Kidd.—The Board decided that more trees are to be planted in and around the school grounds. A play shed for the younger children at the primary school, with wood shed and earth closets are to be erected. It was also decided that the fees for tuition in music are to be paid quarterly in advance.

New Town Hall.—It has been found that the ground set apart for the New Town Hall will not allow of the construction of a much larger public room than the present Music Hall. The ground is 70 by 80 feet. When from this are taken the passages, stairway, platform and two dressing rooms, we will have a room 60 by 55 feet, for our public Hall—a size wholly below the requirements of the town. Before wasting money on a Hall which will be hardly any improvement on the old one, we advise our City Fathers to stop and consider. We don't want to build another Town Hall in a few years. So let us have this one built right. Ground that was deemed sufficient twenty years ago is not by any means sufficient to-day. Let us have this thing right or not at all.

On Monday evening at the Council, Mr. H. T. Hubertas stated that he in company with Mr. Keefer, left Ottawa to explore the route of the Railway spoken of from Ottawa to Toronto, by way of Peterboro'. That they found the route much more feasible than they had expected, in fact it was a very easy matter comparatively to build a road as far as they came, and they imagined that no serious obstacle was before them to Toronto.

The distance along the line travelled from here to Ottawa was 150 miles, and they expected to follow a route to Toronto from this town, of only 70 miles,—thus causing a saving of 55 to Ottawa and 30 to Toronto. If any new Railroad is to benefit Peterboro', it is this one, and we trust our citizens generally will so view it and give it that encouragement which it deserves. This projected road was once called the 'Central Railway," but Mr. Hubertas says it is now called the "Ontario and Quebec Railway." It is intended to cross the Ottawa a short distance above the Chaudiere Falls, and connect with the North Shore Railway to Montreal and Quebec. This will give us direct communication with Ottawa and Montreal. Our merchants will have all the benefit afforded by the Grand Trunk both in respect of transit and freight—in fact we believe that this road being a competing line with the Grand Trunk, improvements in both conveyance and freight will be made.

Mr. Hubertas also stated that throughout the whole route they had received the most distinct assurance of cordiality and aid by the numerous Municipalities they had seen. That the City of Ottawa had advanced $1,000 for the temporary survey and as soon as the weather would permit, the road was to be located.

A vote of thanks was given to Mr. Hubertas for his lucid detail of the route and the advantages the road would confer on the country through which it passed as well as to the country generally.

A meeting of Prostition Fire Company No. 1, was held on Tuesday evening last, when the following Officers were elected for the ensuing of the year:

Captain—M. Robertson.

1st Lieutenant.—Geo. Hutchinson.

2nd " —J. Marshall.

3rd " —T. Goldsby.

2nd Branchmen.—S. Way, J. McWilliams and Wm. Hetherington.

The names of E. Poole for Chief Engineer, and C. Stapleton for Assistant Engineer, are to be handed into the Council for their approval.

It was moved by J. Robertson, seconded by George Hall, that a vote of thanks be tendered to Capt. J. O'Donnell for his past services.—Carried unanimously.

The Mail.—This long expected newspaper made its debut on Saturday last—Like Minerva, it sprang full armed into life. It is a handsome sheet, neatly printed on good paper, and claiming freedom from all the faults which characterize the papers of the province, particularly the Globe. This paper, while it claims to be moderate and not devoted to any party, is yet the offspring of political necessity. The inability of the Telegraph and Leader to cope with the Globe has inspired a new effort to maintain the fading glories of the Conservative party in Canada. Sir John A. and the powers that be at Ottawa with their sympathisers have made a united and desperate effort —a forlorne hope—to save themselves. It is all in vain. Ichabod is written on the wall. And though a new paper is launched every week—and though they may claim non-allegiance to any party—(why so ashamed of themselves?) they cannot again hood-wink the people of this province. The people have risen in their might against the lesser—the greater McDonald must follow him. We welcome the Mail into newspaper life, but we candidly think it would be more creditable to come out under true colors than by suppressio veri to attempt to regain confidence from a people who have none to give where none is deserved.

The Cobourg Railway.

We are waiting with anxiety the action of the Marmora Railway Company to be determined at the Company's Meeting on the 17th inst. Rumor states that Mr. Fowler is arranging to sell out to them in which event, the work will be speedily prosecuted to Mud Lake, and northward. We eagerly look for this result. The $40,000 already voted to the railway on reaching Mud Lake will be handsomely supplemented in case the railway is extended to Fenelon Falls or Dysart. Our true policy is to secure the trade of the north. The other railway lines, if built at all, will be built without our aid. And if we can bring trade from the north to Peterborough, we will be doing the best in our power to support the lines running southward and east and west. Aiding to secure a road to the north is in effect aiding all the other lines, while we are making sure of aiding ourselves, and if we think of ourselves rather than Port Hope, Cobourg, or Belleville, we must be excused, as it is natural.

$100 REWARD!!!

To the Editor of the Post.

Dear Sir.—Being led to believe, and from what we have heard, do believe, that the Grand Junction By-law submitted to the people of Lindsay on the 15th inst., and carried by a small majority, was carried, in our belief, by bribery, we hereby agree and bind ourselves to deposit One Hundred Dollars in the Ontario Bank here, to be paid to any person or persons who shall come forward and prove that they received money for voting for the said By-law; and after the said By-law has been quashed on their evidence they shall receive the above reward of One Hundred Dollars, which will be placed in the Bank for that especial purpose.

THOS. FEE,
WM. THORNHILL.

Lindsay, March 20, 1872.

The above advertisement speaks for itself. From what we saw of the Deputation from Belleville, we are not surprised at the charge made in it of bribery. The five per cent offer to procurers of bonuses, caused us to smell a mouse a long time ago. However, as Lindsay has bound the Grand Junction Company if they build their Bobcaygeon branch, not to construct it nearer to Peterborough than Pigeon Creek, she has a right to pay for her whistle. We hope she may enjoy the music. This we know, if it pleases her it will not hurt us, because we are going to take the trade of the north county at all hazards. It is ours and we have not yet made up our minds to allow anyone to take away what naturally and legitimately belongs to us.

The Grand Junction Railway

It is asserted that the contract for the building of this Railway is let, and that there is a probability of its early construction. We are also told that the opening of the Toronto and Ottawa road is now in progress. We cannot fail to congratulate in the early completion of these railways. Our policy is to become a railway centre. The more lines by which we can get raw material in, and send our manufactured stuff out, the better. Our manufacturing facilities will never be utilized until we can make our town a radiating centre from which we can quickly and cheaply reach all parts of the Province.

We need not fear that these railways will take trade from us, they will lead trade in. The Port Hope Railway brings to our market purchasers who formerly went to the front. The old bridge built over the Otonabee River in South Monaghan to lead trade to Cobourg, in a few years was used to bring people to Peterborough, and now that it is down Cobourg would not re-build it if a word would insure its construction. Peterborough commands the situation, nothing but want of enterprise in her citizens will prevent her being a city. One thing, however, must not be forgotten—Lindsay, Belleville, Cobourg, Port Hope, Toronto —all are trying to get the trade of the county. If our town offers good stocks at cheap rates, a lively market, intelligent manufacturers, broad and liberal dealers, we need not fear. If, however, we grow careless, the natural result will follow, and our trade will be diverted, and that peaceful time will come upon us, when as augured by one of little faith,—the grass will grow in our streets.

Let us be vigilent and active, and with railways diverging from Peterborough to Cobourg, Port Hope, Belleville, Lindsay, Ottawa, Toronto—and to the rear, we will indeed be the hub of Canada, and prosperity and wealth will be our inheritance.

Hen Thieves.

We observe from the Globe that some party in Toronto steals hens, but the gentleman who does the little theft always selects black Spanish. Now we have a hen thief, he lives on Smithtown Hill and his name is M——e, and we say to his credit, that he is not so particular. He lately took a houdan and a grey Dorking hen from Mr. Dumble's yard, and on two other occasions he took seven or eight common hens. At Mrs. Gilmour's and other places he shewed no particular choice, but took them as they came. It is a great relief to know that owners of black Spanish fowl are subject to no greater risk than others. Our friend generally twists the necks of the birds in the hen house, sometimes he even bleeds them. The fact of his offering hens for sale with strangely twisted necks, the birds sometimes not cold, has caused some of the house-wives to refuse buying from him or from his wife who often sells the chicks. We don't like to interfere with a man's private matters, but perhaps our friend will not take it unkind of us, if we suggest to him that one of Stethams big bear traps, now intended for him, may put him in a tight place, where he will require the aid of a brother to relieve him.

The Chief Superintendent again Rampant.

The Venerable Dr. Ryerson is once more roused and again appears on the defensive. Paper number one appears in Tuesday's Mail, addressed to his old enemy, George Brown. It is thus headed and thus opens:—

DR. RYERSON'S DEFENCE.

REPLY TO HIS ASSAILANTS.

PAPER NO. 1.

CONTENTS:—Character of the "Globe's" attacks—The new "Tichborne pretender" exposed—First accusation of monopoly refuted—Historical retrospect of steps taken to provide text and library books—Details given—Object of these proceedings—The "Globe's" interested attacks on this patriotic policy of the Department—Object of Hon. G. Brown's selfish war on the Irish National books exposed.

TO the Managing Director of the "Globe" Newspaper:

Sir,—I now sit down to answer the numerous accusations and attacks which have appeared in the Globe newspaper for months past against the school law and regulations, the Council of Public Instruction, and myself. So far as I am personally concerned, your attacks are of little importance; but when such attacks affects the principles and working of the public school system, mislead and exert a malign influence upon a large number of persons throughout the land, and thus impair the efficient operations of the school system, it is due to the persons thus unwittingly led astray, it is due to the friends of the school system, and it is due to the parties assailed, that your attacks should be met, and your misrepresentations exposed. I say your misrepresentations; for during the months and in the many columns of your attacks, you have not specified one of the regulations assailed, but you have misrepresented them all, week after week, and then, on your own misrepresentations, you have demanded their repeal, the abolition of the body by which they were made, and degradation of their alleged author. Like another Tichborne claimant, you have had your own way for months, in asserting and bolstering up your pretentions against the Educational Department and its managers; it is, at last, my turn to expose the falsifications, and even forgeries, on which these pretentions are founded.

First Accusation.—Your first accusation is, that the Council of Public Instruction is a monopoly, of which I am the chief manager, for the publication and printing of school books. This charge you have repeated for years in every form of offensive assertion and vituperation—so long and so often that many well-meaning and otherwise well-informed persons think it must be true.

In defence, I have to say, first, that the Council of Public Instruction has never published or printed, or contracted for printing a single school book during the whole twenty-six years of its gratuitous labors in behalf of the country. You have never named one book published by the Council; you cannot name one; but you repeat continuously your groundless assertions, and then launch your denunciations as if such assertions were established facts.

In the next place, I will state what the Council has done in regard to the selection and printing of school text-books; and my statement will show that my own doings, and the proceedings of the Council on the subject, are the very reverse of your accusation."

He then gives a history of what the Council of Public Instruction and himself have done with regard to text-books, and winds up number one as follows:—

In my next, I will show when and how you commenced and carried on a war against these Irish National School Books in order to get series of your brother-in-law's school books substituted in their place; and that, though with great noise you and your confederates did succeed in making the national books unpopular, and compelled a change of them against the wishes of the Council of Public Instruction, and my own efforts to retain them, you did not succeed in the end, as I shall show by extracts of correspondence, &c., which were then found necessary to expose the unfounded charges you had made against them. I began to raise a hue and cry against the Council of Public Instruction and myself for making changes of text books, and subjecting teachers and parents to needless trouble and expense! I shall exhibit your selfish conduct and false pretensions in this whole matter, as the Attorney-General Sir John Coleridge has exhibited the deceptions and falsehoods of the Tichborne pretender.

Toronto, March, 1872.

We warn our good friend, George Brown, not to think of offering himself as a representative of the people in any branch of the Legislature, as he may expect as of old another dozen of papers that will be circulated assiduously by the party the good Doctor has cast his lot amongst. His fertile and versatile brain will produce accusations more fanciful than real, and if we judge of what is coming by the closing paragraph of the above extract, Mr. Brown will be nowhere. He has already put him up as the Tichborne claimant, and feels confident that he will level him as easily as did Sir John Coleridge the veritable claimant. Dr. Ryerson is great on the "defensive" side. Long ago when a Tory Governor got into a fix by unconstitutional conduct, he was advised that there was one man in Upper Canada and but one that could help him out of the dilema and that man was Egerton Ryerson. But the difficulty in the way was that this gentlemen was a Reformer, and how could he be had to vindicate acts so much at variance with what he has for life time advocated and struggled for; nevertheless he was approached and the tempting bait of the Chief Superintendent of Education held out as the reward of his being able to extricate His Excellency from his awkward position. The bait was too tempting to resist, and the "great man" set about his difficult task and produced six mortal long letters over the signature of Junius, in which he "made the worse appear the better part." He so far succeeded that Sir Charles Metcalfe in his appeal to the country had a bare majority of 1 or 2. The promised offer was accepted and so the country has had the mortification of witnessing a man placed at the head of one of the most important departments in the country, who sold his principles for a mess of pottage—and who has incessantly attacked the party he was identified with.

We can well remember the excitement produced by that "Managing Director of the Globe newspaper" some years ago, bringing to light certain questionable doings of the worthy chief in pocketing some $1,500 of interest accruing at the bank on deposit of the School Fund, and how the Dr. vindicated the appropriation designating it as merely "casual advantages" incident to the office. We also remember the 12 long letters addressed to George Brown, in which all his sins and shortcomings were laid bare, and how he succeeded in preventing his being returned to Parliament at the following election. In the issue of the present missiles, there is some object in view. It may be to prepare for the coming election, to scatter through the country the misdeeds of a chief enemy, so as again to prevent his return to Parliament for any constituency.

It will be noticed that the first charge against Mr. Brown is not in his (Mr B's) words, but a general one prepared by the Defendant. The more recent notices by the Globe of the Educational Office was the critiques of several little books—pointing out the blunders both of spelling, syntax, matter, and style, abounding therein, and showing that such glaring errors were alike unworthy of the Chief who compiled them, and the Council of Instruction who endorsed them and ordered their being published. But who thinks of convincing our worth Superintendent of an error—he has never made one yet—and he will come out of the present struggle, as he has done before, immaculate—and as he brought out Sir Charles, "not guilty."

It is devoutly to be hoped that he will soon obtain what he desires so much—his discharge from active duties, and that he may be allowed to write his history book in peace, and bury the hatchet of strife forever.

Town Council.

Monday, April 1st, 1872.

The Council met. His Worship the Mayor in the chair.

Present—Messrs. Smith, English, Lundy, Hall, Patterson, Stevenson, Robertson, Edmison, Toole, and Helm.

The minutes of the former meetings were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from J. T. Burrows, Hon. Secretary of the Kingston General Hospital, to the Clerk in answer to the letter sent to him some time ago, informing him that the town had not sent any patients to the Hospital. Mr. Burrows named three individuals as coming from Peterborough to be treated there, but no one remembered any such individuals. The communication was received.

An account from V. M. Clementi for making map was referred to the Finance Committee.

In consequence of some remarks from Mr. Stevenson, His Worship the Mayor was instructed to employ Messrs. Joseph Landy and Wm. Cumming to take the census of the proposed enlargement of the town.

Messrs. Hubertas and Keefer who have been surveying the route of the proposed Railway between Ottawa and Toronto being present, were requested to lay before the Council any statement they wished to make. Mr. Hubertas then stated that he and Mr. Keefer had left Ottawa last Monday, and having examined the route, found it very favorable for building a railway, and pointed out the advantages which such a railway would confer upon the section of country it would pass through, as well as the whole country.

The thanks of the Council were given to Mr. Hubertas.

Messrs. Stevenson, Lundy, Paterson, and Edmison were appointed a committee to consider the several By-laws of the Town, and report to the Council their opinion as to the advisability of having them revised and printed.

A By-law to amend a By-law for granting Billiard Licences was read a first and second time.

Mr. Toole moved, and Mr. Stevenson seconded, the following resolution:

Whereas application has been made by the Trustees of the Separate School for a certain sum of money, and as the amount which from time to time becomes payable to said Trustees is based on the cost to the Town of the Grammar and Common School Buildings, and the relative amount of the Catholic assessment to the assessment of the Town. And, whereas it is [illegible] that there should [illegible] of the Separate School, and the basis on which former settlements have been arrived at, and report to-day on the matter to the Council.

Messrs Smith, Hall, the Mayor, Edmison and Robertson were appointed to consult with the Butchers as to the course to be pursued in relation to Slaughter houses within the Municipality.

The Council then adjourned for one week.

North Monaghan Council.

April 1st, 1872.

Council met at 11 o'clock. All the members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

A petition signed by Joseph L. Walton and seven others asking for certain changes respecting the height and form of fences was received and read.

Mr. James Z. Rogers informed the Council that he owned a Park lot adjoining a narrow strip of land on the north side of Park lot No. 26, being part of Park lot No. 12 in the 13th con. caused by changing the road on the north side of said lot by the County Council's By-law No. 25, 1848, and signified his intention of purchasing said strip if the Council would sell it to him. Ordered to remain over till the next meeting of Council and Surveyor's report be given in.

Committee report.

Councillors Birney, Brownscombe and Howden reported that they had carefully examined the road petitioned for by C. Leary and others, and were of opinion that under existing circumstances it would be unwise to take the matter up at present, as the road is not sufficiently described for any action being taken thereon. Mr. Leary being present, was questioned on the matter, but said he knew nothing further than having attached his name to the petition.

Orders.

Mrs. Glynn $3, charity; G. Hovey 75 cents, repairing scraper; R. Walton $5.50 lumber for Town Hall; Auditors, $3 each; Mr. Dobbin $5.00, acknowledgement for gratuitous services as Treasurer; Mr. Carley, [illegible] to Toronto.

By-laws.

By-law appointing Overseers of Highways and assigning to [illegible] and Smith passed.

Considerable discussion took place respecting the petition of J. L. Walton, praying that fences might be changed from 4½ to 5 feet as originally, and a By-law granting same was read a first time.

Deputation on Town Limits Extension.

The Reeve gave a detailed statement of his proceedings at Toronto whilst there as a deputation to prevent the extension of town limits into Monaghan, stated that the Reeve of Smith and he had a most courteous reception from Attorney Gen., Crooks, and Provincial Sec., Gen. that the most minute details connected with the matter were examined into with such exactness as impressed them that whatever may be the result, they will rest satisfied of justice being done to all parties concerned.

Auditors' report.

Township accounts for 1871 as presented by the Auditors were finally audited by the Council, and fifty copies ordered to be printed for distribution.

On motion of Mr. Robson the Council adjourned to the 3rd day of May, then to meet as a Court of Revision, and for other township business.—Com.

"There is Life in the Old Dog Yet."

The "old dog," Toryism, which many supposed to be defunct, or at least materially crippled in the hind legs, in this our good Province of Ontario, has been so—sometimes, indeed, a little more Constitutional than the Constitution. And the Leader—when did it cease to suit "the views of moderate politicians?" Ah here is the unkind cut. Friend Beaty, we grieve to see you, after your long and faithful defence, not only of the Constitution, but of the cause in general, your chivalrous upholding of the "double shuffle," and every other shuffle, thus cast off in your old age, thus rendered, by implication as hinted, with "the revolutionary sentiments of the Constitution." We fancy we hear the good old cause shouting forth, with his head upon that head which has been the study of his life, "Oh, if mine enemy had but cutted me, I could have borne it."

But let him take heart. The Mail will come and go like the spirit of mornings, it will be thin and vapory, and will be no means soon of [illegible] Leader will resume its [illegible] ability of the Editor [illegible]

[illegible] Town. [illegible] sympathizer [illegible] week men while wishing and working for their defeat. The "our mercial enterprise" hypocrites command the [illegible] of our contemporary

A word to our own friends. The occasion calls upon us to say to you—be up and doing. This is a homely expression, but suited to the hour and the object. It is an hour of subtle scheming on the part of the Tory enemy. Our honourable object is to secure for our adopted country an open, honest administration of her affairs, and for ourselves a proportionate share of the honor and advantages thereof. We can no longer submit to ostracism. We contributed some one-sixth of the strength which hurled the soulless Sandfield from power; let us follow up the blow till we see prostrate those whose fitting representative he was the Coalition at Ottawa. We are bound to contribute our proportion, according to our numbers and intelligence, to the good government of the Dominion; and a proportionate share of the good results will then be our right, and the inheritance of our children.—Irish Canadian

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

No Indirect Damages to be Paid

Washington, April 2—The steamship Baltic brought Mr. Thornton's copy of Earl Granville's second note, but did not bring General Schenck's copy to Fish. As that did not leave until the steamer of the 24th ult., and is not expected until Wednesday, Mr. Fish will await that.

New York, April 2—The World's special says the reply of Earl Granville to the note of this Government, on that feature of the American case which submits claims for indirect damages under the treaty of Washington to the Geneva arbitration, will be laid before the Cabinet to-day the most that can be said of it authentically is that it is an elaborate document and does not present an ultimatum yet it is believed it makes the situation quite plain that England does not intend to appear before the Geneva Conference for an arbitration, either on the preliminary question as to whether the treaty admits any claim for consequential damages or that being waived on the direct issue itself as presented in the American case. The "Herald's" special says nothing was made public in regard to the contents of Earl Granville's note, but the line of argument is the same as has been indicated already. The note is long, courteous and argumentive, but unyielding on the question of consequential damages. To-day the whole question will come up in the Cabinet meeting. The President's trip to New York being delayed in consequence of the receipt of the note, the terms of the answer will probably be discussed at the same time, our Government insisting that the Geneva tribunal alone can settle the disputed points of the treaty.

Washington, April 2 (evening)—The letter of Earl Granville in reply to Secretary Fish, was read at the Cabinet meeting to-day, occupying nearly all of the two hours' session.

A Telegram from New York states that Prof Morse, the father of the electric telegraph, died in that city at 7:30 last evening. The deceased gentleman Samuel Finley Breese Morse was the first son of the Rev Je[illegible] Morse, not unknown in our literature as a writer on geography. He was born in Charlestown, Mass. April 27 1791. He graduated at Yale in 1810. His tastes led him to the fine arts, and his father was finally induced to second his aspirations to be an artist. The year after graduating he went to London to study painting under Benjamin West. While there he became quite intimate with C. R. Leslie. They agreed to paint each other's portraits as a first attempt in London. Mr. Morse made some progress in his art, exhibiting in 1813 at the Royal Academy his "Divine Herculus." This picture merited high praise. A plaster model which he had constructed to aid him in painting was also shown, and won the Adelphi gold medal. Shortly after he returned to America. He came unto his own of Boston and Boston knew him not. He therefore betook himself to New Hampshire, where he eked out a living by painting portraits at $15 a head. In Charleston, S. C. he reaped a more bountiful harvest, but in 1822 he took up his residence in New York. The corporation authorised him to paint a portrait of Lafayette, when that general was on a visit to this country. In that city, in 1824, he, with some other artists, organized a drawing association, which was the basis on which the National Academy of Design was erected in 1826. Mr. Morse was the first president, holding the office for sixteen years. In 1829 he returned to Europe and remained there for three years. His return to America in 1832 must be forever memorable, for in that year, while returning from Havre in the packet ship Sully, he first laid the foundation of his great invention.—Leader.

The New "Marchmount Home."

Some time ago we published a circular from the Hon. Billa Flint, Belleville appealing for pecuniary aid towards re-establishing the above Institution, the former which had been set in operation through the indefatigable exertions of Miss McPherson, a benevolent lady, now in England, having been unfortunately destroyed by fire on the 29th of January last. The Home was established for the purpose of receiving young lads sent out from different places in England, in order that they might on their arrival be put in a position to earn an honest living by being trained to habits of soberity and industry. During the past two seasons over 700 boys and girls out from the old country have found homes in our New Dominion. A valuable property has been purchased in Belleville consisting of three and a half acres of land on which is a building which with some slight alterations can be made to answer very well for a Home. The whole expense will be somewhere near $4,000. Out of contributions already received $750 have been paid on the purchase, leaving considerable balance still due. To meet this, contributions from the benevolently disposed are respectfully solicited. They may be forwarded to the address of the Hon. Billa Flint, or Miss Billtrough, the lady in charge, and will be thankfully received and acknowledged.

The Printers Strike.

The strike has not yet been avowedly abandoned—But the end is close at hand. Printers from the country are flocking into the city; and spite of all the efforts of the Typographical Society to intimidate or bribe them from going to work, the "closed" offices are fast filling up their vacant frames. Twelve or fourteen new hands went to work yesterday. Several more members of the Society have cut connection with it and made engagements [illegible] their employers—and in three or four offices, a majority of the union [illegible]

The Ottawa Cl[illegible] ing, commenciated by [illegible] arrived from Lake Temiscamingue:—

"At the Abetobe Lake (or Obetthee, as some persons call it) five hundred miles from this city, a tribe of Indians are to be found called the Abetobes, supposed to be a remnant of the great Algonquin tribe, who manage to take out a miserable existence by hunting and trapping. They make no effort to till the ground; they are more dingly lazy in their habits, and do not even hunt until driven to it by the pangs of hunger. They trade their furs at Fort Temiscamingue, where they get their supplies of powder and ball, and other necessaries which they require; and as they have had missionaries and fur traders amongst them, occasionally, they have a slight knowledge of the French and English languages. Until lately, very little has been known of their manners and customs, and the tough yarns related by lumbermen and fur traders of their mode of living, were laughed at as being romances. Stories of cannibalism amongst the Abetobes were related at the Fort by traders who had been amongst them, but they were laughed at as being improbable. A half-breed trader said that one day while trading with a camp of Indians on one of the tributaries of the Abetobe Lake, he asked them for something to eat, but they told him they had nothing to give him. He persisted in his demands, and told them he had eaten nothing that day, and was nearly starved. They at length told him to go to a pot that was simmering on the camp fire and help himself. He lifted the cover from it and took some of its contents, which appeared to be soup and drank it. He returned for some more, and while stirring up the mess to his horror he fished up a human hand, the sight of which made him so sick that he could hardly stand. Other stories are told of the Indians when hard pressed with hunger having often hawked their younger children for food and the whole family would join in the horrid feast. The latest story comes from the head of the Abetobe Lake, where Mr. Wright has had his shanty this winter. The shanty is one of the most remote from civilization of any of the lumbering works in the Ottawa region, and is situated about ten or twelve miles from an Indian camp containing a family of five persons, an Indian and his squaw and three children, two between five and nine years of age, and a boy of fourteen or fifteen. Early in the winter they visited the shanty occasionally to trade furs for pork and flour, but as provisions was scarce and there was scarcely sufficient to last until fresh supplies would arrive from below, the Indians were told not to come near the place again. As the winter advanced the snow became deep and game was scarce that the Indians were for days at a time without food. They ate up the carcasses of what mink and martin they caught, and at length resorted to singeing the hair off some beaver skins and eating the hides. Hares, which had been their principal food, were very scarce, as they had been thinned out by a disease which had attacked them during the summer, and starvation stared the Indian and his family in the face. One evening he returned to his camp after a three days' moose hunt, in which he had been unsuccessful, and found his squaw and two of his children making a meal of the youngest child, which had been tomahawed by the squaw and cooked for food. The Indian, without asking any questions, sat down with the rest and assuaged his hunger with the same food. Two days after he started on another hunt, from which he returned unsuccessful, and savage with hunger he drove his tomahawk through the skull of the next youngest of his children, and the family used the child's flesh as food for several days." In the meantime a terrible snow had set in and it was impossible for the Indian to go on a hunt, and as their horrid supply of provisions had again failed he turned suddenly on his squaw one morning and drove his hunting knife through her heart. The father and son lived for several days on the carcass of the dead squaw, which lasted until the weather cleared up, and the Indian went on another hunt to a deer-park several miles from the camp. The snow, although deep was light, and the deer had no difficulty in making their way through it, so that the hunter, although he tried for three days, failed to get a shot at any of them. He returned to the camp mad with hunger, and as he approached the boy, who was watching for him, saw that he had nothing with him, and either himself or his father had got to die. Without waiting to discuss the question with his parent, the sweet youth raised his rifle to his shoulder and sent a bullet through his father's brain, and before the blood was cold he was assuaging his unconstrollable hunger with the raw flesh. The boy remained at the camp until he had eaten the whole of the body, and he had made his way on snow shoes out to the Hudson Bay Co's Fort, near Lake Temiscamingue, where he related the above story. The men would not believe the horrible tale until

This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgment of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certian fixed proportions of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combination. Thus in the preparation of this Oil a chemical change takes place forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients. Entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alcbol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to every good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to hush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have seen converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what's more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

BREATHING THROUGH THE NOSTRILS.—We are no believers in "fussing about our health," yet there are some simple rules which we may, with much advantage, convert into habits. One of them is this: when breathing all that is dusty, or ill-smelling, or other-wise impure, draw the breath slowly through the nostrils. In this way the dust or other impurities are in part arrested in the moist and narrow nasal passages, and are prevented from being thrown upon the lungs. When we breathe through the mouth, they are carried more directly thither. Many would lengthen their lives by resolutely breathing through the nostrils.

The New York Herald estimates that forty-five thousand Irishmen paraded the streets of that city on Monday in honor of St. Patrick's day, at an average cost to each one of ten dollars. It thinks the grand total of four hundred and fifty thousand dollars could have been more usefully employed in bringing over nine thousand brawny lads from Ireland to the United States. It could have been done with the money, and enough would have been left over to give each one a small sum with which to start him on his way to Canada or the North-west, where there are great inducements held out to immigrants.

FRANCE—being one of the largest purchasers of American Tobacco, it is not encouraging to growers to find that the National Assembly have decided to advance the price of the common kind 26 per cent. The French Government monopolizes the sale of this article, which a gross return of $60, 000,000, leaving a net profit of $35,000, 000 to the revenue. It has now been decided to raise the Government prices from $2 to $2 50 per kilogramme (1 1-10 pounds). The extent to which this may diminish the consumption is, of course purely a matter of conjecture; but it is significant that the advance in price is not expected to realize as large a revenue as it the present demand for the fragrant weed continued.

CAUTION! In our changeable climate, coughs colds and diseases of the throat, lungs and chest will always prevail. Oreol consumption will claim its victims. These diseases, if attended to in time can be arrested and cured. The remedy is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

Manufacture of Sewing Thread.

The cotton is received into the mill in the raw state in bales. The kind best adapted for making thread is that known as the "long fiber" or Sea Island, raised along our Southern and Eastern coast, also a similar but somewhat inferior imported staple termed "Egyptian."

This cotton is taken from the bales and passed through a machine called a picker, which separates it and passes it out in a downy sheet, and rolls it up into a woolly-like bundle. From this machine it is taken to the carding machine, where it goes through another separating and refining process, and leaves this machine like a continuous untwisted rope, coiling itself round into a circular tin can placed to receive it. From thence it is taken to a machine called a Frooch comber, an ingenious machine, the peculiar duty of which is to select or separate the long fibres and reject the short ones, as the long ones only (as before stated) are used in the making of thread. From this machine or comber it is passed through other machinery or processes of uniting, drawing, reducing and partially twisting, necessary to its preparation for the spinning-frames, upon which it is finally adapted and placed.

The spinning frames (or males, as they are called) are self acting, drawing out the fibers and spinning them into a very fine thread or cord (six of which are twisted together to make the thread), and wind it, when spun sufficiently, upon small bobbins or cops. The spinning frames used in this mill are about 90 feet long, and spin about 960 threads at once. When these bobbins are full, they are taken to a winding machine, and two of these little threads are wound together upon a larger bobbin. When full, these are taken to a twisting machine, the two threads drawn off and twisted tightly together, and again wound upon cops or small bobbins. This is the first process of twisting, and the second is similar to it, except that three of these twisted threads are wound off and again twisted together, thus making the six cords required to give the strength for which this thread is celebrated.

The thread thus made is reeled off and tied up into hanks or bunches and taken to the bleachery, where it passes through the different processes of boiling, bleaching, washing, scouping, blueing and drying, or to the dye-house, where it is boiled and prepared, and colored by various dyes, the colors being very rich, and some of them very costly, the dying being done by what is called the aniline process. When a number of the variously colored spools of this thread are placed together, they present every appearance of silk.

After this process of bleaching or dyeing is completed, the hanks are again returned to the mill and wound upon large bobbins, and from these it is finally wound upon the small spools, where it remains until unwound by the busy fingers of industry throughout the world.

Before leaving the subject of thread-making, it would be as well to speak of the ingenious machine used in the final process of winding the thread upon the small spools.

These machines work automatically, or in other words, go through all the motions necessary to wind the thread on the spool, cut the nick, insert and fasten the end of the thread, cut it off, draw off the spool, and drop it into a hopper, completed and well done. It also takes up the next spool puts it on its spindle, and goes on with its winding. All that is required is simply to feed it with empty spool and collect them when wound. These machines each wind eight spools at a time, or eight spools in a little over a minute of time, or 300 dozen per day.

These finished spools are passed through various departments, where they are labeled, assorted, and placed in neat paper boxes, neatly labeled, or in larger quantity (assorted) in the drawers of handsome black walnut cabinet cases.—Manufacturer & Gazette.

Don't Be Ashamed.

Don't be ashamed, my lad, if you have a patch on your elbow. It is no mark of disgrace. It speaks well for your industrious mother. For our part, we would rather see a dozen patches on your jacket than hear one profane or vulgar word escape from your lips. No good boy will shun you because you cannot dress as your companion; and, if a boy laughs at your appearance, say nothing, my lad, but walk on. We know many a rich and good man who was once as poor as you. There is our near neighbor, in particular, now one of our wealthy men, who told us, a short time since, that, when a child, he was glad to receive cold food from his neighbor's table. Be good, my boy, and if you are poor you will be respected a great deal more than if you were the son of a rich man and addicted to bad habits.

Table Talk.

Pleasant conversation at the table while eating is conducive to health and pleasure. This eat-and-run habit kills more people than any one can realize. No where in the world is it practised so much as in America, where people live to make money instead of making money to live.

Here brains, bone, muscle, blood and life are coined into money, money, money! Nobody amounts to anything without money, and health and comfort are sacrificed to obtain it.

It is a curiosity to sit down at a public table and notice the business people impose upon their digestive organs by hasty eating, swallowing the food without proper mastication.

Many eat in five or seven minutes and are off for business, when in justice to health, they should occupy from twenty to thirty minutes in eating the same amount. Those who have not yet realized the miserable conquences will carelessly pass these words, saying they have not time for nonsense. But the poor dyspeptic nods his head at the truth, and wishes he had taken warning in time to live a world of suffering.

HE WISE.—Two often a cold or slight cough is considered a very ordinary, trifling affair, just as well let to go as it came, and hence systematically neglected until a simple curable affection is converted into a serious pulmonary disease. The more prudent, aware that a cough or cold should never be trifled with, promptly use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers," which has sustained their reputation for over 30 years. They are always efficacious, and exert a most beneficial influence on all the bronichial and pulmonary organs. Sold by all Druggists and country merchants. Price 25 cents per box.

THE HORSE.—"Of the great number of animals under the control of man, the horse is unquestionable the most serviceable," but is it not strange that so many who own horses, and who are dependent on their labor for a living, should neglect to give them that care and attention which their own interest demands. The best medicine for horses is "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" of this there can be no doubt—it is safe and easily given. Remember the name and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A want has been felt and expressed by physicians, for a safe and reliable purgative; such a is now supplied in Parsons Purgative Pills.

Henry K Bond, of Jefferson, Maine, was cured of spitting blood, soreness and weakness of the stomach, by the use of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

CAUTION! In our changeable climate, coughs colds and diseases of the throat, lungs and chest will always prevail. Oreol consumption will claim its victims. These diseases, if attended to in time can be arrested and cured. The remedy is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

A Temperance Song.

Water bright our noble bowl,
Filled emblazon'd hoof and hoof;
One choral burst of gladness,
One thrilling wave of song!
No wine-cup's lamination
We ask on this glad day;
The crystal waves are flashing,
The bright rills court our lips,

Oh, fresh as if living waters—
Oh, streams of silvery light—
Oh shining, dew drops gleaming
Oh jewelled robes of night!
All hail your starry beauty,
Your sparkle fresh and free!
Your feathery spray wreaths flinging,
Abroad sweet melody!

Ye gird the purple heath-bells,
The lily's fragrant chalice,
Ye touch the pearly clusters
In dell and glade that shine.
The silvery mosses brighten
Beneath your rainbow showers;
All gorgeousness the woodlands,
A galaxy of flowers.

We quaff your cool bright nectar.
No poison-chalice crave;
The red wine's called—up adder
We will not, dare not brave.
Avaunt the fiery Tempter
That learns to death and woe!
We plant our Temperance banner,
And triumph o'er the foe!

Agricultural.

Stock Feeding.

The following article we find in the Rural American:—The foundation of good farming is the keeping of as much stock as can be kept well, and no more; but some farmers make the mistake of over stocking their farms, by which means their stock feed on poor pasturage, and in a drought frequently suffer for the want of food. In the winter seasons too many cattle are crowded into small barn yards, and the result is, the strongest ones eat the most fodder, and the smaller and weaker animals are hooked about, and have to take up with the leavings of the others; and when all are provided with stalls some portion of the stock suffers, when let into the yard, in consequence of there being too many for the space allotted to them, especially in stormy weather, when they all crave to get under the sheds.

A great deal of stock can be advantageously kept on most farms, if proper means are taken to provide for their comfort and support. In the first place, the necessary change of pasturage must be provided, and a plan to sustain the stock in a severe drought, if one should occur, or good crops should be grown to "soil" the cattle when the pasturage is too short. The "soiling" system alone is often made to support a large number of cows on farms that could not give pasture for half the number and allow sufficient winter fodder to be cut.

In the next place, ample and warm winter accommodation must be provided, so that the stock can feed in sheds quickly, when not stalled; and with an abundance of good fodder every farmer will find that keeping stock is profitable, as it is admitted by all good farmers that fodder fed on farms is better than to sell it, as the manure produced by the stock keeps such farms in a good state of fertility.

Every farmer should raise all the young stock that he can feed well, and give good winter quarters. A choice lot of good dairy cows can seldom be bought; they must be raised on the farms.

As regards the breeds of cows to be kept if better for the object, the Ayrshires, or their grades, are considered best in proportion to the quantity of food consumed. This is a small breed of cattle, and their milk is exceedingly rich. They do not produce more milk than ordinary cows, but it yields much more cream.

If the selling of milk be the object, the Ayrshires are the best breed that can be procured, as the cows of that breed have a world-wide reputation of being the most abundant milkers known. In many cases, however, our native cows are equal in value for both milk and butter to any blooded stock in existence, but such cows are scarce, and cannot be found for sale, except in rare cases.

Thorough Bred and Full Blood.

Quite a discussion has arisen in several of the agricultural journals as to the meaning of these terms. Our own idea of the matter is that no animal can be considered thorough bred, in the case of cattle, unless it can show a pedigree that can be distinctly traced unchallenged to the English herd book. Any animal, however, that can muster four crosses from thorough bred sires and thus become admissable into the Canadian or American herd-book, may be called a full blood, as it is then capable, according to rule, of pouching in the above ring for honors with the best blood of Albion. The value, however, of the animal for transmitting the best qualities of its race is entirely dependent upon the amount of pure blood in its pedigree. A full blood may do very well to cross upon common stock, but will be likely to cause a deterioration if used upon pure-blooded stock. The comparative value may be given for practical purposes in this scale: common stock 0, 1 cross pure blood 2, 2 crosses 6, 3 crosses 6, 4 crosses 8, 5 crosses 10, 6 crosses 12, and so on, provided the animal is in every way good in quality and constitution.

Rotation in Crops.

Every farmer practises in some degree a rotation of the crops which he cultivates. Experience has taught him that her soil will not produce a paying crop of the same plant, on the same soil for several years in succession—That is, unless that soil is highly enriched by fertilizing substances, so as to keep such agents in the soil equal to what is taken away by the plants. Thus gardens are usually kept so highly manured as to require no rotation, and it might not be necessary on the farm, if it were so highly enriched in the same way. A field has been pointed out to the writer of these lines by one of the oldest towns in Massachusetts, which was planted with corn for more than fifty years in succession. In this case the land was originally good and doubtlessly received the wash from a broad hill-side, pastured with cattle. By means of this wash, on natural manuring and careful culture, a good crop was secured each year for more than half a century.

Gardening in the Evening of Life.

I would recommend to every man, especially in the autumn of his life, to take to gardening, if he has not already experienced its pleasures. Of all occupations in the world it is the one which best combines repose and activity. It is not fatiguing, it is not stagnation, and yet it is perfect quietude. Like all things mortal it has its failures and its disappointments, and there are some things hard to understand. But it is never without its rewards, and perhaps if there were nothing but successful cultivation, the aggregate of joy must would be less. It is found by the circumspect shadows that come over the world. The discipline too is most salutary. It tries our patience and it tries our faith. But even in the worst of seasons, there is far more to reward and encourage than to dishearten and disappoint. There is no day of the year without something to afford tranquil pleasure to the cultivator of flowers something on which the mind may repose with profit and delight.

SUNNY SQUARE CURE NOW.—Such will ensure loss of wool, and they are peculiarly liable to disease. Use carbolic soap for skin diseases and vermin. Even, weaning, must be watched and early lambs weaned 150 raised if possible. One very early one is worth two late ones. Feed morning even calender and a few raw roots and cut hay-teach lambs for them to become fond hay, clover, and give them dry pieces to lie in and a good range.

Hall's Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

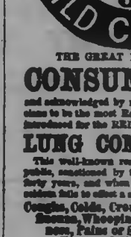
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.



The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in countless numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tyrant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of unbelief or fatal disease, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, miseries may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilitic or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. The SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer to the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the various symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

by a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS, and all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

Beware of Counterfeits.

Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the private mark of the proprietors, "ERATH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Select Poetry.

The Unseen Battle Field.

There is an unseen battle field
In every human breast,
Where two opposing forces meet,
And where they seldom rest.

That field is veiled from mortal sight;
'Tis only seen by One,
Who knows alone where victory lies
When each day's fight is done.

Our army musters strong and brave,
Their chief of chiefs is there;
His brow is like the thunder cloud,
His voice the bursting storm.

His captains—Pride, and Lust and Hate,
Whole troops watch night and day,
Swift to detect the weakest point,
And thirsting for the fray.

Contending with this mighty force
Is but a little band;
Yet there, with an unquelling trust
These warriors firmly stand.

Their leader is of God-like form,
Of countenance serene;
And girding on his naked breast
A naked cross is seen.

His captains—Faith, and Hope, and Love
Point to the mercy-seat sign;
And glancing on it, all require
Strength from a source divine.

They feel it speaks a glorious truth,
A truth as great as sure—
That to be victors, they must learn
To love, confide, endure.

That faith sublime is wildest strife,
Imparts a holy calm;
For every deadly blow a shield,
For every wound a balm.

And when they'll win the battle field,
Fight toil will be forgot;
The plain where carnage once had reigned
Will be a hallowed spot.

Mr. Wandle's Story.

BY E. P. DARLING.

It was at the Boston and Albany railroad depot in this city that I first saw Wandle. I was going to Worcester that afternoon. The "express" starts about two o'clock, I believe, and as I had fifteen or twenty minutes to spare, I went into the gentlemen's waiting room and sat down. The gentleman in the seat next mine started up the moment I sat down, and made a rush for the door, casting a fearful glance over his shoulder at me. Then the door closed behind him.

He was a very singular looking gentleman, apparently about forty years of age, although at the first glance, you would have taken him for a man of sixty. His hair was white as snow, while his whiskers, which he wore long and straggling, were black as Day and Martin's blacking. His nose was a Roman; his eyes small, dark and restless; face pale as the palest moonbeam that ever beamed, and his trembling lips were blue. He was a small man, and so thin that you could have bored a hole through him anywhere with a two-inch gimlet.

But what was he afraid of me for? Am I such a terrible looking fellow? I rather think not. At least, my friends don't seem to think so.

"No," said I, "that man has been doing something—and it's something awful. And yet he doesn't look as if he was capable of committing any crime. Perhaps, now, the poor gentleman is only running away from his creditors."

But I had no time to waste in conjectures, for the train was ready, and so taking my valise, I went out and was just passing through the gate when I saw the thin gentleman dodge behind a very corpulent old lady who stood a few paces to the right of me. But I saw his restless dark eye gleaming at me over the old lady's shoulder.

"Well," said I, "if you go on this train, my dear sir, I'll see more of you before I get to Worcester." And passing through the gate, I got into the cars.

Every seat was occupied in the first car that I went into. As I entered the next car by one door, the thin gentleman entered it by the other, but he did not see me. He advanced along the aisle, glancing cautiously to the right and left, slid into a seat, and the next moment I sat down beside him.

The thin gentleman started up and made an attempt to spring out of the window, but I caught him by the collar and forced him back into the seat.

"Then you do want me?" he said, trembling as if with the ague.

"Yes, I want you to sit down and not attempt to dash your brains out by throwing yourself out of the car window. If you don't want to go—"

"O, but I do! I do!" Then he put his lips to my ear. "You won't take me back, my dear fellow, will you?"

"Take you back! Why should I take you back?" And then the thought flashed through my brain that I was sitting beside an escaped lunatic, and I began to feel quite as uncomfortable as my companion. "Who do you think I am?" I asked.

"You're a detective, and my wife has put you on my track," answered the thin gentleman, in a hoarse whisper, glancing cautiously around among the passengers, as if fearful that some one would overhear him.

I laughed.

"No, my dear sir, you were never more mistaken in your life. I am plain Robinson Dobson, watchmaker, Washington street."

The thin gentleman grasped my hand.

"Egad!" cried he, "I knew I had seen you before, and I thought—but by the way, don't you know my wife?"

"How should I? Why, I don't know you, and I don't think I ever saw you before."

"Then you don't know her—don't know Miss Duncan Wandle?"

"No, sir."

The thin gentleman threw himself back in his seat with a sigh of relief. Then he mopped his face with his pocket-handkerchief and in the act, his black wig-blanc fell to the floor, leaving his face almost as smooth as a glass bottle.

"Ha!" I exclaimed.

"I am Duncan Wandle," cried the thin gentleman, clapping his whiskers into the crown of his hat, and clapping the hat on his head.

"And Mrs. Wandle is your wife?"

"Doubly so, and I'm running away from her, by thunder! Yes, Mr. Dobson, I'm running away from the aforesaid female. I'm going to San Francisco and if she follows me there I'm going to the Sandwich Islands, and so on, clear round the world."

"Just suppose she follows you all the way round?"

"Then I'll go round again," said Mr. Wandle.

"And if she still follows?"

"I'll keep going round till I tire her out."

"A stern chase is a long one, they say."

"And Mrs. Wandle will find it so, Mr. Robinson Dobson." And the thin gentleman jammed his hat over his eyes and looked very determined indeed.

For the next fifteen minutes Mr. Wandle never opened his mouth. He closed his small black eyes, and I thought he had gone to sleep, but he started me suddenly by grasping my arm and asking me if I was fond of stories.

"Yes, Mr. Wandle. Have you got one to tell?"

"Have I got a story to tell? Well, you better believe I have, and I'm going to tell it to you, whether you listen or not. Fact is, I have got to tell my story or burst, Mr. Robinson Dobson, that's just what's the matter with me."

"I'm all attention, my dear sir," I replied, "and really anxious I must confess to hear your story."

"Well, you shall hear it. I'll take off my hat to keep my brain cool, for the fact is, Mr. Robinson Dobson, when I get to thinking, and when I remember what I will, and then consider what I am, why, sir, I feel as if I should go mad. Sometimes I think I am mad. What do you think about it?"

"Why," said I, smiling at the odd question of my thin friend, "when I saw you trying to throw yourself out of the window I did think that your mind was rather unsound."

"Of course you did. What else could you think? Why, I don't believe I am perfectly sane, do you?"

"I can tell better after I hear your story, perhaps."

"Well, perhaps so. I will tell it and then, if you think I've been through with enough to make a man insane, why, when we get to Worcester, you just chuckle me into the asylum. I'll be out of the way of my wife then, anyway."

"To begin then, ten years ago I was a happy man. I was a bachelor of thirty, and had just come into possession of considerable property by the death of my father. As he was my only father, and I was his only child, of course it all fell to me, and it was a very pretty plum I assure you.

"At that time I resided in Boston, boarding with Mrs. Josephine Hickorydickery. She was a widow, and about my own age. She was a large woman, a very large woman, Mr. Dobson, and I'm a very small man, and quite thin, too. You notice my thinness? Yes. Everybody does.

"But to return to Mrs. Hickorydickery. Besides being very extensive in her proportions, she had red hair. Your wife may have red hair, and your children, and all your relations, and you may think it is the most beautiful color in the world—as he is doing, eyes my eyebrows if I do!

"Aside from her hair, Mrs. Hickorydickery was a very fine looking woman, and I told her so. She didn't thank me for telling her, of course. Her sex is never thankful, no matter what you do for 'em. You may not think so Mr. Dobson, but I can't help that. I've seen something of women, and I know 'em just like a book.

"Now, I'm not naturally a marrying man. The simple fact that I remained a bachelor until I was thirty years of age, without ever having made love to a woman, proves that, I think. And I might have remained a bachelor until this day, if it hadn't been for that property that my father left me. I'm not handsome. You smile, as if you doubted my word, but I'll leave it to any woman with a well-balanced head, if I am not about the poorest specimen of humanity she ever saw. I am not talented. I haven't a single talent for anything. As Professor Bumpheeler said when he examined my head.

"'Mr. Wandle,' said he, 'you ask me to give you a chart, but you don't need one. Yours is a very serious one,' he continued, and I feel almost incined to doubt the facts, but phrenology never lies. The truth of the matter is, you're a perfect dumphool!' And the phrenological gentleman was right, Mr. Dobson. I told him so, and gave him a dollar for his honesty.

"Now, with these facts before you, sir, you naturally ask, why should any woman want to marry me? Why, for my money, of course. They never thought of throwing sweet glances at me until I became a man of wealth. Then, sir, when it became known that I counted my money by thousands, every unmarried female at Mrs. Hickorydickery's 'went for me.' Miss Lute—she was a flaxen-haired creature with blue eyes and a milk-and-watery complexion—used to play for me every night in the parlor, and she banged that poor piano until there was no more music left in it than there is in a dry sink. Miss Bate, she was also a blonde, and sang for me. Yes, she sang until she was so hoarse that she couldn't speak above a whisper. Miss Knott read poetry to me. Read it until she had exhausted every native poet, and then, instead of commencing on the English bards, she hired a newspaper fellow to write sonnets to my eyes, my nose, and my beauty generally, and she published them underneath her own name, and then read them to me.

'Pale as the moon when first her silver beam Steals through the anxious curtain of a cloud.'

"Miss Dott danced with me. Yes, we waltzed and we waltzed, until one evening the sweet creature slipped out of my arms, fell, and broke her leg. Then she was satisfied.

"But the playing, the singing, the reading and waltzing were as nothing to one thing more I had to undergo. Mrs. Hickorydickery used to fold me in her arms and kiss me! You sir, I was obliged to be kissed, and by a woman with red hair, for how could I help myself? I was weak, and she was strong. But if she had only kissed me, I might have been happy yet. But she wasn't satisfied with that. She always managed to have some one else in the room, and she always made them think that I was the affectionate one, that I was doing all the kissing. Of course she couldn't handle me just like a puppet, and say:

"'Now, Mr. Wandle, you shan't kiss me, unless you're the strongest, and I know you are!'

"That was the way she did it, and it wasn't long before all my friends were bothering me about the lovely Widow Hickorydickery, for they all thought I was really in love with her.

"At last, one night the widow told me that we had waited about long enough.

"'Long enough?' said I.

"'Yes, Duncan. Why can't we be married this fall just as well as to wait until next winter?'

"'Well, mamm, said I, won't you wait until I ask you to marry me?'

"'Ask me! Do you mean to say that you haven't asked me? Do you mean to say—'

"'I mean to say just this, said I, starting up and looking as large and as fierce as I could. I mean to say that I never asked you, and I never intend to ask you to become Mrs. Wandle.'

"The widow smiled, and fainted me to her bosom.

"'Don't get angry, Duncan dear, said she. You know you are going to marry me!'

"'Never, I cried.

"'Then I shall sue you for breach of promise.

"'But I haven't promised.

"'We shall see, my dear.

"'Very well, will see.

"'Good night love.

"The next morning, I called upon a lawyer and stated my case.

"'Better marry her, said Mr. Gogg. She's got everything her own way, and if you go to law about it, you'll loose the case, sure. But perhaps you can settle with her for ten thousand dollars. If you can, settle, and in future, as the elder Weller said to his son Sammy, 'Beware of the widders.'

"'But the widow would not settle for ten thousand, and so—and so—I—I married her.'

Mr. Wandle paused here, and covered his face with his hat to hide his emotion. At last he recovered sufficiently to continue his story.

"After we were married, she gave up her boarding house, and we lived in the grandest style imaginable. Nothing was too rich or rare for my wife. She invested a fortune in diamonds alone, and in less than a year, my dear sir, Duncan Wandle wasn't worth a cent. Mrs. Wandle had either spent it, or got it into her own hands, and I was left with nothing.

"I proposed to Mrs. Wandle then that we should separate, and she agreed to the proposal. A week after, I started for the West, and finding friends in Chicago, I soon obtained a situation, but fearing they wife might, at some future time, come after her 'little hubby,' as she used to call me, I applied for, and obtained a bill of divorce.

"Then, my dear sir, I was happy. As happy almost as I had been in my bachelor days. But I was born to ill luck, and it follows me.

"One day my Uncle Benjamin came home from Australia. Of course he did not come home in one day, but he arrived in Chicago one day, came to see me, was taken sick that night, and the next morning he was dead. As I had never seen my uncle half a dozen times during his life, my grief at his sudden departure was not extraordinarily heart rending, but when I found, after the funeral, that he had left me half a million of money, I fell you Mr. Robinson Dobson, I fairly howled, for I knew that my late wife would be after me, and how was I to protect myself?

"As soon as I could conveniently, I packed my trunks and left for St. Louis, and I was not a moment too soon, for my former partner appeared in Chicago the very day that I left. She followed me to St. Louis, and I hurried away to Cincinnati. Then I went to Baltimore, Philadelphia, and at last to New York, with that woman close to my heels. However, she lost the scent at last. She went up the Hudson to Albany, and I went to Newport.

"It was right in the height of the season, and I determined that I would marry the first handsome and agreeable lady that I could find, who would have me.

"In less than a week I made the acquaintance of just the woman I wanted. She was beautiful, very.

'Her step was royal, queenlike, and her face
As beautiful as saint's in paradise.'

"I think I was almost in love with her beauty. She had black hair, and I always did dote on raven tresses, and then such sweet dovelike eyes! Yes, I almost loved her, but my reason for wishing to marry her was that I might have a wife to protect me against Mrs. Hickorydickery.

"I suppose I should have taken my lawyer's advice and kept away from the widows, for my 'intended' was one. But she was so beautiful that I had made up my mind to marry her if possible, even before learning her name.

"Our courtship was short, but before the end of the season Mrs Freeman had promised to be mine.

"She returned to her home in New York about the first of September, and I followed soon after. I stood in such fear of my former wife that I couldn't feel safe outside of Mrs. Freeman's protecting presence.

"We were married in October, Ah, how well I remember that day! What a sense of relief stole over my senses when the minister pronounced us one.

"We were going to Europe on our wedding tour, but we didn't go. No, we didn't go.'

Here Mr. Wandle stopped to groan, and again he covered his face with his hat. But after a momentary pause he went on again.

"Immediately after returning from church my wife returned to her room.

"Her maid came to me soon after, and said that her mistress would like to see me.

"When I entered the room she was seated in an easy chair, looking, if possible, more beautiful than ever.

"Duncan, she began, smiling sweetly, I have sent for you for a very particular purpose.

"Well, darling.

"Well, Duncan, the gentleman of whom I hired this house and furniture is very anxious about the rent and—

"What, hired? Don't you own the house?

"Is it possible, Duncan, that you don't recognize me? Don't you know your own Josephine? and with a laugh the three of ten hundred black glossy hair.

"A wig! I yelled.

"Yes, a wig, baldy dear. You see I had my red hair cut close and covered it up, because I knew you didn't like the color.

"And you are—

"I am Mrs. Wandle, formerly Mrs. Hickorydickery. And she laughed sweetly.

"But your complexion? I gasped.

"Enamelled my love.

"Great heavens! And you've got me again, I groaned, throwing myself into a chair.

"Yes darling, you are doubly mine, now, for we've been twice married."

Mr. Wandle paused to wipe the perspiration from his brow. Then he looked into his hat, and then he turned his small black eyes on my countenance.

"I gave it up then, he said. I thought the cruelest fate I could have particularly when that fate was a woman, and such a woman as my wife. But yesterday we came to Boston, and I can't tell you why, but once there, my courage revived, and I determined to cut loose from my wife at once and forever. I've got my money where she can't get it, and I'll spend every cent of it rather than let her catch me again. But if she once gets her eyes on me I shall have to surrender. Heaven help me at the Revere House, and I'm there!

"And I've got my eye on you, Mr. Wandle, said a voice.

Mr. Wandle uttered one piercing shriek, jammed his hat over his eyes and sank into one corner of the seat.

I turned and confronted a tall, elegantly dressed lady of magnificent proportions, sitting in the seat directly back of us. I had noticed her before, more particularly from the fact that until now she had been closely veiled. She smiled sweetly as her eyes met mine.

"This is Mrs. Wandle, I presume," said I.

"Yes sir. My husband, I believe, has been telling you about my little peculiarities," laughing. "Would you object to changing seats with me?"

"O no, not in the least."

I arose. Mr. Wandle squirmed, and turned an imploring glance upon my face, but I could not help him. Mrs. Wandle took my place, and I went into the smoking car.

So ended Mr. Wandle's story. I have seen him twice since, but always in company with the lady whom he has twice married.

The City Cousin.

BY S. ANNIE FROST.

"I wish she would stay at home! That's what I wish," said Roger Harland, lying on a pile of sweet-scented hay, and kicking his heels vigorously as he spoke. "Who wants a fine city miss here, with her airs and graces, spoiling all our fun! Sick too, I suppose she'll go into fainting fits if a pig grunts, and have hysterics if the cows looks at her crossways.

"She will be afraid to move with her finery," said Bob.

"Mamma says she is a dear little girl," said May, with rather a leader voice than usual, "and she has been very, very sick, so the doctor is sending her out to the country. It will be real mean if you boys are not good to her."

"There's John getting out the horse to go to the station," cried Roger. "I mean to ask him to take us."

So it happened that when little Lucy Harland arrived at the railway station, she found an escort of three cousins and her uncle's hired man waiting for her, Rodger nudged Bob, and rolled up his eyes at the sight of the neat, stylish travelling-dress, the dainty little hat and boots, gloves and parasol, but above all, the white, thin face and delicate look of the visitor. Even May was rather awed as she gave a glance at her plain dress and stout, dusty boots. The ride home was not very lively. Lucy was tired and longing to rest, and thought her cousins rather noisy and rude, as they laughed and talked on the back seat, leaving her to the care of James, the hired man.

As the days wore away, the young people seemed to have no feelings in common, and Lucy grew very homesick, in spite of her aunt's kindness and her uncle's very hearty welcome. The other children, who knew nothing of sickness themselves, could not understand that it was weakness that made Lucy languid and unable to romp and play as they did, and made fun of her fine lady airs when she sat wearily watching their boisterous games. Her favorite resort was a knoll left over the barn, where she read story-books, dressed her doll, and often cried bitterly for home and mamma. Dutchie was gaining health slowly in the pure country air, and with the simple, wholesome food; and her mother only read her aunt's descriptions of her thin cheeks getting round and rosy, her step lighter her eyes brighter, and did not guess how lonely her little daughter was, even with three cousins in the same house.

"I'm going to play Lady Lovel a trick," said Roger, one morning as he met with his brother and sister in the barn. "She's up in the loft moping; see good to play with us. I'm going to take away the ladder; then she can't get down, and we'll keep her up there all dinner-time."

"She can come down the step-ladder stairs," said Bob.

"But she won't; she's afraid of the cows, and they are all in to-day. Catch her coming down among the cattle. She'd stay up a week first.

"But you can unhook the ladder at the top?"

"Yes, indeed; Bob can steady it. Come along."

Ready-tho' they kind of shrinked Bob and May followed their brother's lead and were soon standing at the foot of the ladder leading to the loft. It was stabled at the top by two little hooks, and Roger mounted the steps to unfasten them, while the others stood below, half fearing what was coming next, wondering what new outbreak her cousins had contrived for her. The first hook was unfastened, Roger's whole weight being upon one corner of the ladder; but the second gave way suddenly, and he fell, carrying the leg to the ground with a sickening crash.

Lucy was startled by it, and ran to the trap-door. No daughter of the invalid could stand by and see her cousin Roger lie there. She called to him in a firm manner, tearing up pieces of paper, as he is accustomed to do when he is violently agitated and approaching Fisk's desk, said in a stammering manner: "Fisk, I have to say in my painful thing I ever had to say in my life."

Here he paused for a moment as if meditating how to make the proposition. At this Fisk looked up and said in his hearty way, "Well Gould, go on. You know I have got no feeling." To this Gould, still stampering replied: "Well Fisk, it is this—I have come to the conclusion, in view of this combination of English stock-holders, that our future [illegible] upon [illegible] ask you for your resignation." Having said this [illegible] looked nervously to the door leading to his own room, which he had requested his fellow conspirators to close [illegible] with a broken voice and great emotion: "Gould can you ask me that, when I have stood up all along for you?" "Well, that's just how the [illegible] voice, and dropped his head. [illegible] Fisk raised his head as if ashamed of his weakness, brushed the tears and said, raising his fist: "Gould if you [illegible] I can sign it?" Gould at once stepped into his own room, took up the resignation, which he had already prepared, and handed it to Fisk, who at once [illegible]

Here he paused for a moment as if meditating how to make the proposition. At this Fisk looked up and said in his hearty way, "Well Gould, go on. You know I have got no feeling." To this Gould, still stampering replied: "Well Fisk, it is this—I have come to the conclusion, in view of this combination of English stock-holders, that our future [illegible] upon [illegible] ask you for your resignation." Having said this [illegible] looked nervously to the door leading to his own room, which he had requested his fellow conspirators to close [illegible] with a broken voice and great emotion: "Gould can you ask me that, when I have stood up all along for you?" "Well, that's just how the [illegible] voice, and dropped his head. [illegible] Fisk raised his head as if ashamed of his weakness, brushed the tears and said, raising his fist: "Gould if you [illegible] I can sign it?" Gould at once stepped into his own room, took up the resignation, which he had already prepared, and handed it to Fisk, who at once [illegible]

This magnifying glass is a terrible revealer of the [illegible] things I have, two or three times, been interested in looking over the work of a Boston photographer who is often consulted, as an expert, in forgery trials, since his art is a formidable foe to that kind of crime. Here is a note which promises to pay $900. The plaintiff claims that it was and should be, $90. The "900" looks right enough, but the camera takes it in hand and enlarges it. Now you can see the second cipher does not [illegible] in its scope to the first; the space it stands in is crowded, too.—Enlarge again, and any one can see that the second one is a really superimposed [illegible] of mature of the ordinate is suspected to have been forged by one of the heirs, but surely it cannot be so; it looks just like the name under the will itself. Mr. Carroll will preach in the Music Hall next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, p. m.

Spring Goods.—We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Messrs. Cluxton, Henderson & Cluxton. They have now on hand a large and select stock of Dry Goods, Millinery and Mantles, Tweeds, &c. Give them a call.

Pumps.—Read the advertisement of Henry Owens in this issue, and when those who are in want of a first-class pump of any description, go and purchase one off him.

Gas.—The celebrated case of Perry v. The Peterboro' Gas Company, is going to be tried here at the approaching Chancery Sittings on the 23rd inst. We anticipate such a flow of gas as will stink in nostrils of honest men. Meanwhile we hold our breath.

Trees.—Now that Spring is again approaching we hope our citizens will go to the woods and get trees and plant them. We recommend maple, birch, and elm. The latter makes a beautiful street tree—cut the top off when planting and it will make surer growth. Trees can be got out and planted at an expense of ten cents each. Plant plenty, they grow while you sleep.

Town Extension.—The Peterborough Review thinks the present Government is a very bad one because of the delay in granting an extension of the Town limits. What does it think of the old Government which wholly refused to grant the extension? It is easy to find faults where faults only is looked for. Patience Review, and your limited appreciation of a good Government may yet be extended.

Rev. Mr. Carroll.—We have much pleasure in being able to announce that the Rev. Mr. Carroll, the Evangelist is about to take up his abode with us in connection with the Baptist Church. The many friends of Mr. Carroll will rejoice to have him again in our midst. Mr. Carroll knows no narrow or sectional barrier within which he is to confine his labors. The only church he desires to enlarge, is the church of Christ. There is room for him in our town without lessening the labor or field of any other minister, and we doubt not his labors will be productive of much good in the future as they have in the past.

Revival Meetings.—The Revival Services in the Wesleyan church under the direction of the Rev. Mr. Davis, assisted by Mr. Enon, the Evangelist, have been eminently successful. Many will have cause for the rest of their lives to rejoice at their determination to make choice of the "better part." The meetings still continue and very many attend them with unabated interest and profit.

It is not six months since a letter was received by the Principal of our High School informing him that it was erected into a Collegiate Institute on the 4th proximo. This, it will be said, was merely a slip—well, be it so—better things however should be expected from the Head Department of Education in the Country. All the writers of the Press and Members of the Legislature, too, cannot alter the fact that many and serious blunders have for a long time emanated from the Doctor's office. It would have been better for him to have owned the charge and pleaded the proneness of of human nature to err. This course would not answer the purpose of the worthy Chief—an election is at hand, and it is especially necessary to prevent by all means the Managing Director of the Globe Newspaper from being returned to Parliament—hence all these State Papers and this anxiety to put before the people the naughty doings of this naughty man. It would have been noble in Dr. Ryerson to have owned the blunders and simply explained how they occurred, pleading the general issue "to err is human." The Globe notwithstanding all the Doctor's persistent efforts to show the contrary, has been in favor of the School System of Upper Canada—has lauded it again and again, but the head and front of its offending the Doctor has been when it has noted his peccadilloes, or his manifest blunders. It would show more of a Christian spirit in Dr. Ryerson if he had put in practice more of the Christian graces, and abstained from insinuating that his opponent is guilty of lying, covetousness, selfishness, slander, &c. There is nothing like abstaining from resisting evil. It is evident he is delighted when he comes down with a smart lash upon his enemy—using him up and putting him down. It is a pity that a pen so long been used with vinegar and gall it not laid aside, or if used it should be in the cause of peace and good will. When the good men lays aside his shafts of malice, men may begin to respect him, but while engaged in a semi-political educational struggle they never can.

Town Council.

Monday, April 8th, 1872.

The Council met. His Worship the Mayor in the chair.

Present—Messrs. Smith, English, Lundy, Hall, Patterson, Stevenson, Doherty Edmison, Poole, Helm, and Hopkins.

The minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed.

Communications were read from W. H. Scott in reference to the License By-law. From Dr. O'Sullivan recommending that a little girl whom he had attended professionally, should be sent to some hospital for medical treatment—this communication was referred to the Charity Committee with power to act. A circular from the Directors of the Ontario and Quebec Railway asking for aid from the municipality in making the survey.

An account from the Times newspaper for printing was referred to the Finance committee.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Toole.—That the portion of the Special Committee on appointments to office last year which compels all cheques on the Bank made by the Treasurer to be countersigned by the Mayor be rescinded. Carried.

Mr. Smith submitted the following Report:

"The Finance Committee beg leave to recommend the payment of the following accounts—

J. Bertram, glass for street lamps	$10.44
V. M. Clements, soap for extension	15 00
Wm English, sharpening saws, &c	3.25
John Brown, coffin	8.00

"Your Committee would recommend in future that men employed on the Corporation should provide their own tools and keep them in repair. All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. SMITH, Chairman."

Moved by Mr. Smith, seconded by Mr. Lundy—That the Clerk be instructed to furnish a detailed statement of all sums paid for charity, giving names and amount paid to each. Said statement to be furnished weekly or as often as the Council meets, and at next meeting a list to be furnished of what has been paid since the first of January last. Carried.

Mr. Collins was heard before the Council in reference to the boundary line road and offering to lay out money on the said road provided the Town did the same.

Mr. Toole then moved, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That this Corporation feels pledged to appropriate a sum of money equal to any appropriation that may be made by the Council of North Monaghan, or the County Council, to be expended jointly by both Municipalities on the present boundary line between said Municipalities. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Hopkins.—That in reply to the communication of the Directors of the Ontario and Quebec Railroad, this Council will be prepared to pay two hundred dollars towards the survey as soon as said survey is completed.

Mr. Dumble appeared on behalf of Mr. Bradburn, stating that the new plans of the Town Hall had been prepared, and on Mr. Belcher was present he would answer any queries relating thereto.

Moved by Mr. English, seconded by Mr. Lundy.—That the Chief Constable be instructed to notify Messrs. Ryan, Paterson and Lundy not to throw any tan bark in the creek as it makes it totally unfit for fire purposes as the Fire Engine could not take water at either Simpson or Charlotte street bridges. Carried.

Moved by elevation of the building for a Town Hall by Mr. Belcher, No. 2, be adopted by this Council, and that the Commissioners of the Town Trust be requested to issue to Mr. Bradburn, the the additional 22 feet on the south, rejected by said plans at the same rate of the 83 feet, provided Mr. Bradburn can have a satisfactory arrangement with Mr. Scott for a granter of the premises. Carried.

Mr. McNeil was in reguive a license to ... for the present year.

Mr. Green was heard in reference to the Market By-law.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

Road Making.

The system of making roads by statute labor as usually practiced is very unsatisfactory. The parties generally go out with hoes, scrapers, plows, and often they leave the road worse than they found it. The holes they fill up with muck,—perhaps with gravel—a little soil is sprinkled on the corduroys to be washed away next spring, and the statute labor is done.

This is repeated year after year and the roads are execrable.

A marked exception to this general rule is found in the west party of township of Smith, here the roads have been fairly graded and well gravelled. The first consequence is, that the lands will bring $10 per acre more than similar lands in Otonabee or Dauro.

Now here is our rule for making good roads—if followed, you cannot but succeed :—

1st—Make good ditches, throwing the earth into the centre of the road, round up the road bed so that the centre will be eighteen inches higher than the shoulders.

2nd—Make culverts and scarpes for waters so that it shall not lodge and get under road to heave it up when frost goes out in spring, and keep it bad in summer.

3rd—Don't make road more than 16 or 18 feet wide.

4th—Never gravel till road is perfectly graded, or your gravel is lost—swallowed in mud—or buried in subsequent grading.

5th—When you gravel, put it on eight feet wide and nine inches deep, then it forms a body which cannot be cut through. Spreading a thin coat or dropping a load here and there, is lost labor.

6th—Don't think a road once made wants no more care. It will wear out as surely as a garment—but the old maxim will hold good—"a stitch in time saves nine."

7th—Make no more road each year than you can make well.

Recapitulation,—Narrow road, well rounded, clean water tables, sufficient culverts, good coat of gravel, and no gravel till well graded.

The Ryerson's Papers

Number "Seven" of these remarkable papers is out, and it appears as if the "great man" is but fairly began to pour forth his wrath upon the head of his devoted victim. If ever a man was doomed it is our friend the managing director of the Globe Newspaper. The "Papers" appear consecutively in the Mail and the Leader. They are dedicated by the writer to the Press, and with freedom of the Legislature—bespeaks for them a careful consideration of, and impartial judgment upon what he terms "his last defence of an official

...Hall. All the Councillors in attendance.

The minutes of the last sitting of the council having been read, were amended by striking the Inspector of Schools to say—"That school house should be built "somewhere between centre of 2nd con- "cession and Trumble's corner, on or "along side road." Also in Councillor Kidd's motion for 3rd reading of By-law, insert the clause "after the voting thereon."

The minutes as thus amended were confirmed and sealed.

The Council then proceeded to appoint the following officers for the current year, viz :—

Strange Sequel to a Hanging.

(From the Abilene Chronical.)

We are about to relate one of the most astounding developments that has ever come to light in this western community, we may safely assert, within the recollection of any truthful person. The occurrences, commencing with the killing of Kelly and the hanging of his murderer, with all its ghastly sequels, is not nearly equal to the dreadful scenes that subsequently followed, as related to us by an eye-witness. It will be remembered that the dead culprit was boxed and buried by the undertaker, Mr. Eicholtz, a short distance from the town cemetery. On the night following his burial, Mr. Johnston a Texas cattle dealer, was returning from his herd. It was one of those beautiful moonlight nights for which this latitude is famous. In the bright moonlight he continued his journey far in the night. On approaching Abilene he noticed the suspicious movements of three persons, who were apparently digging in an isolated locality. Dismounting he tied his horse, and approaching, hid himself in a favoured spot. He discovered the parties to be to well known physicians of Abilene and a colored man. Presently the spade of the Negro struck a hard substance. "That's it," said one, and they shortly after had in full view a large box, whose cover was ripped off in less time than it takes to relate it. No words were spoken, and in a short time the musical tickling of a galvanic battery was heard, with an occasional sigh, apparently from the box. Presently his blood running cold, his hair almost standing on end, the terror stricken looker on saw the form of the hanged culprit sitting erect in his box. Whereupon the negro, more frightened than he, commenced yelling and shrinking in the most piteous manner. "Shut up! said one; "you will have the people in Abilene after us," as the other doctor passionately struck the negro with an iron bar used in prying open the box. The other gazing at the new corpse attentively, knelt down by its side put his hand over his skull, now saturated with his life's current and in mild but emphatic words, said: "He's dead!" Then ensued a moment of such voting as our informant tells us, he never before witnessed. Anger, terror, grief and remorse were quickly by an almost unnatural coolness as these two quietly drew forth the reconstructed criminal from his box and again nailed the lid over the corpse not to be resuscitated—that of the darky himself. Quietly they proceeded with their original work applying the plates of the poles of their battery first over one collar bone, then over the other, while the other plate was placed apparently over the stomach. While this was being done by one worker the other seemed to alternate the work by superseding the chief. Apidmously these two adventurers worked on; not a word spoken or scarce an utterance given unless from the enlivening bulk that lay before them. Ever and anon a movement of some part of the body before them would attract attention At last the first worker, having a vial from his pocket poured a few drops in the mouth of the subject. He seemed satisfied, for he stopped his work, and putting his hand on the heart, remarked "it beats naternally." A few moments longer and another application from the bottle, and the subject spoke audibly, and in reply to questions, gave a full account of the occurrences during what were supposed to be his last moments. Hanging, he said, was rather pleasant than otherwise, for after the first spasmed is struggle for breath, a delightful tickling sensation followed his veins to the tips of his limbs. Consciousness ceased to leave itself gradually, and for a time, a portion of the brain seem to retain its vitality. The happiest moments of a life time was centred in a dream at that instant. Feeling that all thoughts of the occurrence about him, went with his effort for breath, and at last darkness clouded the remainder of his mind. From that time until he found himself in the hands of unknown he knew nothing. One informant for lack of time, promises further developments for our next weekly issue; meanwhile the features of the narrative will be pulled to those ends.

Consequential Damages.

The "Tribune's" Washington correspondent telegraphs: Considerable interest has been created by the publication

...Halifax, and on the eastern coast, from Cape Ray to ... Islands on the coasts from Mount Folly to and through northwardly, but without prejudice to any exclusive rights of the southern coast of Newfoundland as above described, and to the coast of Labrador, not embraced, settled, there must be a previous agreement with the Inhabitants.

They may also enter any bay or harbor for the purpose of shelter, repairing damages, purchasing wood or obtaining water.

British officers may go on board of any vessel in any bay within three miles of the coast of Canada and stay as long as she may remain there, and they may examine the master under oath, and if it be found that she has been fishing in the waters prohibited, such officers may below her without warrant and proceed for a forfeiture of the vessel, cargo and stores. Any person opposing the officer will subject himself to a fine of $800 and imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years. —American Paper.

The "Times" special says, the question whether Great Britain is not by her own action bound by an irrevocable precedent to submit the matter of indirect claims to the Geneva tribunal to determine the point of jurisdiction will shortly have much light thrown upon it by the President's answer to the following resolution introduced by Mr. Upson, of Ohio, on Friday last, and agreed to unanimously

Resolved,—That the President be requested to furnish the House of Representatives, if not inconsistent with the public interest, copies of any correspondence which has taken place between the Government of the United States and Great Britain in regard to the presentation by the agent of Great Britain to the Commissioners appointed under the 12 h article of the Treaty of Washington of the claim of Edward Alfred Barrett for payment of bonds issued by the so-called Confederate States of America, being one of the bonds commonly called Cotton Loan Bonds; and also a copy of any proceedings had on the said claim by or before the said Commissioners. Many voted for this resolution without fully understanding what its precise object was, but that is perfectly apparent to all who are aware of the fact, that the Government of Great Britain, under this very treaty, and against the protest of the United States established precisely the precedent now sought to be acted upon by this Government in proposing to Mr. Fish does, to let the Geneva tribunal decide for itself whether claims for indirect damages are within its jurisdiction under the treaty of Washington.

London, April 9.—A special despatch to the Manchester "Guardian" says the Hon. R. C. Schenck while in Paris, from which city he returned yesterday, had an interview with the American Counsel before the Geneva tribunal of arbitration upon his arrival here, called upon Earl Granville. The result of these interviews is that neither Counsel nor Arbitrators will meet at Geneva on the 15th inst., but that the English and American agents will meet and exchange counter cases. The despatch further states that the Board of Arbitration will not again assemble until the 15th of June.

The Great Earthquake in California.

San Francisco, March 30.

Dispatches received from the volcanic district in Inyo county, 400 miles southeast from this city, give additional details of the earthquake disaster on Tuesday last. Shocks still continue though with decreased violence. It is remarkable that only a slight shock, Tuesday, was felt in central and northern California. Cerro Gord was badly damaged, having several buildings blown down and one man killed. Lone Pine appears to have been directly over the centre of the disturbance. Among the killed at the latter place was Mr. Gray, aged 42 years and a native of Texas. The remainder were all Spanish Americans.

The first shock is described as resembling a park of artillery fired directly beneath the town. Col. Whipple, who was in the second story of an adobe house, states that he had just time to jump from bed and get to the doorway, when the house appeared to crumble to pieces beneath him. He was buried among the ruins, but succeeded in extricating himself from the debris, having received severe but not dangerous injuries.

The scene beggars description, as nearly the whole populace were buried beneath the ruins. Cries for help and screams of pain from the wounded beneath the ruins filled the air, while those who escaped were calling for aid to rescue fathers, mothers, wives and children.

The first shock was followed in quick succession by three others. Over 30 distinct shocks were felt between half-past two o'clock and sunrise; in fact the earth was in a constant tremble for over three hours. A chasm opened to the extent of 25 miles down the valley, ranging from three inches to 40 feet in width. Rocks were torn from their places and rolled down into the valley. At Swansea, Cal., Mr. Tregalloe, of the smelting works, was killed, and great desolation prevails throughout the vicinity. A Lone Pine dispatch from Visalia says that several shocks were felt in that city last night, and are still coming from the southeast. Persons anticipate finding immense chasms in the mountains east of us as soon as the snow disappears enough to permit of investigation.

There are rumors of a volcano in active operation having been seen from the summit of the Green Hood Mountains, 60 miles south of Visalia.

Although the rumor is in circulation it is considered at least dubious. The Indians in that vicinity have all left, fearing a recurrence of the general convulsion of nature, which, according to their traditions occurred in that region some hundreds of years ago, and created what is known as Owens' river valley, but which was before a chain of mountains. The section affected by the earthquake was sparsely inhabited, mainly by people engaged in working silver bearing lead mines.

Additional advices from Inyo county place the number of killed by the earthquake on Tuesday at thirty, besides 100 injured.

In the desert country stretching from Owen's Lake to the Mexican line are innumerable craters not long extinct, besides several mud volcanoes, and it is supposed that some of these old volcanoes may be in eruption again. A gentleman from Independence asserts that smoke and ashes from a volcano were distinctly seen south ward of that place, and word has been brought here that lava was seen flowing down the mountain, but the report is not authenticated.

The shocks continued decreasing in force up to Thursday morning, when over 1,000 had been counted.

At tibbett's Ranche, fifteen miles above Independence, forty acres of ground sunk seven feet below the surface of the surrounding country. Big Owens Lake has risen 4 feet since the first shocks. Owens river ran over its banks, depositing shoals of fish on the shore. Afterwards it receded for a distance of three or four miles. Through Lone Pine the earth one side remained stationary, while the other sank seven or eight feet, leaving a wall of earth extending over three miles in length where formerly was a level plain.

Innumerable cracks were made throughout the valley. The Kern and Owens rivers turned and ran up stream for several minutes, leaving their beds, and finally returned with largely increased violence.

There has been no parallel to this earthquake since the year 1812, when the missions of San Juan, Capistrova and La Parisimme, in southern California, were destroyed. Of course the earthquake is a matter of common conversation throughout California, but creates not the slightest apprehension outside the district affected.

Fishing on Canadian Waters.

The United States Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular to collectors of customs, informing them that as the season for fishing on the coast of the British possessions in our vicinity is approaching, it considers it important that fishermen of the United States, in trying to pursue their business in the vicinity mentioned, should be thoroughly acquainted with the laws and regulations governing the matter, to avoid the loss of their vessels and penalties for encroachment by foreigners upon the in-shore fisheries of Canada.

The collectors are therefore directed to notify such fishermen that the provisions of the treaty with Great Britain promulgated July 4, 1871, relating to the fishery, will not go into operation until they have been passed by Congress, the Parliament of Great Britain and Canada, and the Legislature of Prince Edwards Islands; and, by words, them that their business must be carried on subject to the restrictions existing at the time of the ratification of the treaty. The circular states that fishermen of the United States are prohibited from the use of bighaze fisheries.

One Hundred Years Ago.

One hundred and ten years ago there was not a single white man in Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. They, what is the most flourishing part of America, was as little known as the country around the mysterious mountains of the moon. It was not until 1776 that Boone left his home in North Carolina to become the first settler in Kentucky. The first pioneers of Ohio did not settle until twenty years after that time.

A hundred years ago Canada fed most to France and the population did not exceed a million and a half of people. A hundred years ago the great Frederick of Prussia was performing those grand exploits which have made him immortal in military annals, and with his little monarchy was sustaining a single-handed contest with Russia, Austria, and France, the three great powers of Europe combined. —Washington was a modest Virginia Colonel, and the great events of history in the two worlds in which these great but insignificant men took leading parts, were then scarcely foreshadowed. A hundred years ago the United States were the most loyal part of the British Empire, and on the political horison no speck indicated the struggle which within a score of years thereafter established the great republic of the world. A hundred years ago there were but four newspapers in America. Steam engines had not been imagined, and railroads and telegraphs had not entered into the remotest conception of men. When we come to look at it through the vista of history, we find that to the century just passed has been allotted the more important events in their bearing upon the happiness of the world, than almost any other which has elayed since the creation.

Flogged by a Woman.

The late Lola Montz has been completely superseded by an actress new to fame in Geelong. About a fortnight ago when Mr. Mansergh and Miss Kate Ward were announced to appear at the Mechanics' Institute, the company with which they were supported, headed by the agent, took up their quarters at the Ship Inn, where suitable accommodation was promised. Two of the actresses, together with another member of the company, where placed in the most comfortable part of the establishment, when it appears their equanimity was considerably disturbed by the intrusion of a clerk to a solicitor in town, and his companions Mrs. Clifford, one of the actresses, feeling offended at their intrusion and subsequent conduct went to the landlady and complained of them, and the result was they were desired to remove to another apartment, but instead of doing so the young gentlemen become very indignant, and having expressed the opinion that their money was as good as anybody else's took their leave. A few evenings afterwards the clerk again made himself conspicuous and offensive at the Mechanics' Hall by venturing behind the scenes, and rudely pushing open the door of the apartment where the ladies were undressing. The consequence was that a smart passage-at-arms ensued, and one of the offended ones—Miss Clara Novello—determined to watch her opportunity and give the ungallant intruder a thorough horsewhipping. This intention, it is said, would have been carried out on the following evening (the last on which the full company acted) had the offending individual appeared, as he had done previously, behind the scenes, and it was meant that the castigation should have taken place in view of the audience, but the attorney's clerk happened to be absent, and the actress had to bottle up her wrath. Towards the end of last week the longed for opportunity, however, presented itself. One evening the dramatic company, including the actress, were sitting in the front room of the hotel, when the voice of the solicitor's clerk was heard in the passage. He was at once invited to join them, and at the same time Miss Clara Novello posted upstairs to her room in quest of her whip. On her return she confronted the limb of the law, and demanded an explanation of his conduct reminding him of certain things he had uttered. The clerk immediately and in the most abject terms admitted his error, and said he was ready to apologize. Nothing would appease the wrath of the actress, however, and before the company, with a vigorous arm, she dealt the unfortunate clerk a thorough and severe [illegible]. It is stated that the scene [illegible] ing and extraordinary, [illegible] clerk bitterly cried, [illegible] forgiveness, while the [illegible] behind his chastising [illegible] with remorse [illegible] over, only to be [illegible] It is said blood flowed [illegible] out of the room.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1872.

This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. It aims at being a Canadian Magazine, both in the character of its matter, and in opening the way for Canadian writers. We do not see Canadian houses can find elsewhere, so interesting and so Canadian, and we ask all Canadians to sustain it. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, purely a preparation of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know that medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certain fixed proportions of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combinations. Thus in the preparation of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered.—Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop ; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alcohol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to bush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife:—It must have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have seen converted so easily.

Husband :—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Trotter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what'l more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

THERE IS NO DISEASED CONDITION OF THE BODY, in which Dr. WHELER'S Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya may not be used with positive benefit. Being a Chemical Food and Nutritive Tonic, it acts physiologically in the same manner as our diet. It perfects digestion, assimilation, and the formation of healthy blood. It sustains the vital forces by supplying the waste constantly going on, of nerve and muscle, as the result of mental and physical exertion, enabling mind and body to undergo great labor without fatigue. In action in building up constitutions broken down with Wasting Chronic Diseases, by fast living and bad habits, is truly extraordinary, its effect being immediate in energizing all the organs of the body. Phosphates being absolutely essential to cell formation and the growth of tissues, must for all time be Nature's great restorative and vitalizer.

Are you a Free...?

The Rev. Mr. Magill, Rector of St. Paul's Church, Peru, Illinois, being asked the above question by a lady, responded as follows:

I am one of the band
Who will faithfully stand
In the bonds of affection and love;
I have knocked at the door,
Oft, I've sighed and poor,
And there for admission I strove

By the help of a friend,
Who assistance did lend,
I succeeded an entrance to find;
And rejoiced to be "Free"
By command from the "Host,"
But not without feeling some pain.

Here my conscience was taught,
With a moral quite fraught
With sentiments holy and true;
Then onward I travelled—
To see it unravelled
What Hiram intended to do.

Very soon in the "East"
I made known my request,
And "light" by command did attend;
When, lo! I perceived,
In due form revealed,
A Master, and Brother, and Friend.

Thus far I have stated,
And simply related,
What happened when I was made free,
But I've "passed" since then,
And was "raised" up again
To a sublime and ancient degree.

There onward I marched,
That I might be "Arch'd"
And find out those treasures hung lost,
When, behold! a bright flame
From the midst of which came
A voice, which my ears did accost.

Through the "rails" I then went,
And succeeded at length
The "Sanctum Sanctorum" to find—
By the "Signet" I gained
And quickly obtained
Employment which suited my mind.

In the depths I then wrought,
And most carefully sought
For treasures so long hidden there,
And by labor and toil
I discovered rich spoil,
Which are kept by the Craft with due care.

Having thus far arrived,
I further construed
Among valient Knights to appear,
And as Pilgrim and Knight
I stood ready to fight—
For Sarsen foe did I fear.

For the Widow distressed
There's a cord in my breast;
For the helpless and orphan I feel—
And my sword I could draw,
To maintain the new law
Which the duty of Masons reveal.

Thus have I revealed,
(Yet wisely concealed)
What the "free and accepted" [illegible]
I am one of the "Band,"
Who will faithfully stand
As a Brother wherever I go.

Feeding Bees in Spring.

A correspondent of the Bee-keepers Journal propounds the following questions for solution:

1. Does feeding in the spring really induce early breeding?
2. When is the best time to commence feeding?
3. How much should be fed to each swarm daily?
4. What feed is best for the purpose?

To which the editor makes the following replies:

1. Yes.
2. In the south, in February; farther north, in March.
3. About half a pint; or, if the stock has an abundance of sealed honey, some may be uncapped, or half a gill of syrup fed daily. If the hives are out of doors, and the weather is warm enough for bees to fly, the feeding should be done every evening. Stocks deficient in honey should have more than half a pint, and feeding must be continued until a regular supply of both honey and pollen is obtained.
4. Honey is the best feed. A thick syrup, made of white sugar, is excellent. If fed in the fall or winter, for winter stocks add cream of tartar or glycerine.

To Cure Sitting Hens.

A writer in the Country Gentleman says—My plan is to have a small openwork coop or park, with top and sides of lath, without any bottom—say ten feet in length and height of a lath (about four feet here) with sticks across for roosts—which I let stand out on the grass in summer, moving it a few feet every week, and in winter put in a shed. When a hen commences to sit, I shut her up in this coop, giving her all the wheat screenings (or wheat) and water she wants, keeping them before her all the time, and in from two days to a week one is cured and she will at once commence laying again on being let out, and very frequently lays an egg or two in the coop before I let her out. Then she is always in good condition and profitable.

MEAT FOR FOWLS.—Meat is essential to promote egg-laying in winter. As a rule it should be cooked, although it is more stimulating given raw. Horse flesh cannot be surpassed for excellence when it can be thus obtained, and even when given in quantity it does not impart the slightest flavor to the eggs. Nothing but prejudice and ignorance prevents the more general use of horse flesh for this purpose, thousands of horses being annually destroyed and buried, the flesh of which should realize £3 or £4, at 3d. per pound. A mincing or sausage machine is the best mode of preparing the meat when cooked.

Some interesting experiments have been made upon the comparative fecundity of ducks and hens, so as to determine from which of the two the larger number of eggs can be obtained in the same time. For this purpose three hens and three ducks were selected, all hatched in February, and nourished with suitable food. In the following autumn the ducks had laid 238 eggs, while the hens in this case laid none. In the following February the laying season began again with the ducks, and continued uninterruptedly till August. They showed no inclination to set, and were very thin, but subsequently fattened up somewhat. In the meantime the hens had not been idle. The total number of eggs laid by the hens amounted to 257, or 86 each, and the ducks produced 302, or 131 each. Although the eggs of the ducks were rather smaller than those of the hens, yet they proved to be decidedly superior in nutritive material, so the superiority in productiveness appears to be on the side of the ducks.

Liming Fruit Trees.

The periodical liming of fruit trees is generally considered as serviceable, especially in keeping down the ravages of insects which find their home in the [illegible] bark. It is also important that the operation should be likewise extended to the main branches. For the purpose in question whitewash has generally been used, causing a decided whiteness of the tree, which is objected to by many persons, on the score of unsightly appearance and the readiness with which the lime becomes detached. It has been shown, however, by experience, that the same beneficial effect results from the use of colorless lime water, which every one knows how to prepare with unslacked lime, and which when settled and become clear, can be poured off and used as above indicated. In this way repeated applications can be made without injuring the appearance of the tree.

The Skeleton Doctor.

A few days ago a rather startling [illegible] was one of surprise to the clerks in attendance to walk back into the doctor's office, and he would show him something.

[illegible] particular [illegible] soon as his eyes were fixed on the scene, the clerk pulled aside the screen, and behold! a skeleton of huge proportions presented itself to the astonished vision of [illegible] door for dear life.

In this way he happened to run against a [illegible] patronment, who was coming in to attend his office hours. The doctor not knowing who it was, a patient, inquired of the clerk, who at once told him of the joke; at the recital of which the doctor, with [illegible] kind, good-natured man, grew quite indignant, and desired the young man to go at once and bring the lad back, so that the whole matter might be explained.

The young man went and [illegible] found the poor little fellow on the opposite side of the street gazing across [illegible] the dead there, entirely [illegible] death. He was entreated to come back, but he [illegible] fast, hearing this, the doctor—who, by the way, is a very thin man, and resembles a living skeleton—said he would go and bring the poor little fellow himself; and with that intention he went, [illegible] waving his hand saying:

"Come over here, sonny; nobody will hurt you."

The [illegible] afraid to stir, halloed back:

"No you don't; you can't fool me, though you have got on your clothes on. You think I [illegible] yet."

Excellent Interest Rules.

Six per cent.—Multiply by number of days, separate right hand figure and divide by 6.

Eight per cent.—Multiply by number of days, and divide by 45.

Nine per cent.—Multiply by number of days, separate right hand figure and divide by 4.

Ten per cent.—Multiply by number of days, separate right hand figure, and divide by 36.

Twelve per cent.—Multiply by number of days, separate right hand figure, and divide by 3.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

[illegible] of the system of [illegible] They are [illegible] to operate on the [illegible] of digestion, to stimulate the [illegible] into healthy action, and purify the blood, which is the fountain of life. Hence it follows that [illegible] a single dose of these Pills will be found to produce the most wonderful changes in the feelings of the sick and suffering. Those who have been long prostrated with disease, and who had given up all hope, have been surprised, and delighted, to find that a few doses of these Pills restored them to health and comparative vigor. This is a mere result of their power to cure the every-day complaints of every body in every body's family. Being purely vegetable, they may be taken with safety by anybody. They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—thereby cleansing it of the disorders within, and curing those of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper of the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Biliousness and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Colics and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Pulpitation of the Heart, Pains in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Erysipelas and Erruptional Complaints, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and removing effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its unquestionable and prompt power to control the most distressing of the [illegible] and threat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While [illegible] milder forms of disease and in youthful children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Select Poetry.

The Noblest Part.

"All is not dark! the sky may lower,
The sun refuse to shine;
But dwelling on each mortal hour
Is nothing—all high divine.

There's no life but hath some woe,
No soul but hath its pain;
Yet pleasure comes, while sorrows go,
As sunshine follows rain.

Look where we may—some good we see,
Some joy to compass ill;
And though in grief pronounce we be,
Hope lingers with us still.

God gave us gift that strength lifted yields
To fortitude to bear,
And gives us bravery that shields
Our hearts from deep despair.

He plan'd us here to act our part,
And do the best we can,
And show thankfulness of heart
And virtue under the ban.

Though trouble come and life cumber,
Be onto the noblest part
Who turns his full face to the gale,
And keeps a steadfast heart.

So let us all, where'er battle,
Like brave men bear the brunt,
And, standing fast by Nature's side,
To Heaven leave the rest.

MY LEGACY.

Aunt Harriet's will had been read that day. In the evening, I sat moodily in my smuggery, with my share of her estate perched in mimic grandeur on the table at my elbow.

Aunt Harriet had been rich, but not so rich as we thought. Eccentric and stingy people always get credit for three or four times as much wealth as they possess. Still, this property was a very fair one, if it had only come to me. I was named one of the executors, with the request that I should continue to live in the old house until the settlement of the estate was completed. That privilege was my legacy, then, and that little bequest was like Maggie Sawyer's brother was to have the house and furniture, said as they were already in it, there would be no changes at once.

Aunt Harriet had no very near relations except myself, and yet, though everybody expected that the property would come to me, there had been quite a gathering at the opening of the will.

I—[illegible]—, and my legitimate, leathery old spinster, Cousin Charlotte, suggested that "Robert will never have any use for that thing. I think I will take it myself, just to remember Aunt Harriet," I replied somewhat tartly—

"No, indeed! She gave it to me because she expected me to keep it. I shall take care of Leo for her sake. Wherever I go, he shall go."

"Cousin Robert," said pretty Maggie Sawyer, "if you ever do give it away, I am going to speak for it myself."

"I spoke first," snapped Cousin Charlotte.

I had always liked Maggie, and had made her my confident about Lucinda, and I smiled in her sweet face, as I answered, "Yours it shall be, Maggie if I ever do part with it."

That was not likely, however, and I only said so to spite Charlotte. I had a reason to feel spiteful. Not that I had been altogether mercenary in my love for my aunt, but I had precious little property of my own, and I had counted on that will. I had even told Lucinda so, and the dear girl had reproved me right sharply, as she ought to have done. So I sat there, glowering at the fire, and wondering what earthly assistance in housekeeping I should ever get out of my wonderful legacy.

My late acquisition became almost an eyesore, as from time to time I turned and gazed at him. All that Rosys a lion from being ridiculous in his size, and this specimen was decidedly lacking in that particular. He was only about eight inches high, and long in proportion, according to the ideas of proportion installed in by the artists in such things. A very chunky paper-weight, and very absurd lion.

His head is disproportionate amount of mane, and such a fierce tuft on his tail to balance it, while his mouth opened as if he could swallow anything—less than twice his size. His aspect, as he stood me that evening, was peculiarly grim and forbidding. Small as he was he seemed to stand hopelessly between myself and Lucinda.

Just then the door opened, and the light feet of Maggie Sawyer came rustling over the carpet till she stood beside me.

"Cousin Robert, I am so sorry! You have a right to feel disappointed. What will you say to Lucinda then?"

"Well Maggie," said I, "I Lucinda will make me heavenly as I will, if won't be so bad."

"Then will, I know she will!"

"And if she won't, I suppose you will leave a corner of the house to me and build a chalet. Poor little boy! how often have I seen him standing on Aunt Harriet's table with his animals around him full of honest enjoyment."

"I can make him smile in the same way. He will certainly have it that way."

We tried hard to laugh the matter off, but it wasn't very good fun just then.

At the earliest proper hour next day I made my preparations to go and see Lucinda. I wanted to be the first to tell her the news. Leo turned to make me with a broad, sardonic grin, while I was dressing. I was half inclined to take him with me. If he could only have walked, he should have gone.

Old Munson was there when I arrived in, and he considered with me in the most orthodox and respectable manner over my late and bereavement. I knew what he was coming to wait, and was quite ready for him.

"Your friend left a very handsome property, Mr. Rob."

"Yes, poor dear, it will be a great help to me."

"Hem! Ah!" said the old gentleman. "Of course she left it. Your own share of the estate must be a handsome one!"

"Oh yes, quite handsome, at least some people would think so."

"I am delighted to hear it," said he. "May I venture to ask how large it is? I feel an interest, you know."

"Certainly. It's about eight inches high, as near as I can guess."

"How? I don't exactly comprehend you are joking?"

"Indeed, I am not! All that my aunt left me was her lion."

"Her lion! What the deuce do you mean?" asked old Munson.

"Why, her little bronze lion, a very remarkable object of curious, to which she was much attached. She would never have given it to anyone whom she did not esteem very highly."

"And that was all?"

"That was all."

"Hem! Ah? You don't say so! Well, your friends thought it would be different. I should hardly consider that much of a start in life."

"Made of the most durable material I assure you. Last me all my life. Don't think I shall ever have to buy another."

The old gentleman did not see a good chance to say much more, and made his exit, and I was left alone with Lucinda.

"Lucinda, my dear," said I dolefully, "we can never commence housekeeping with nothing but a little bronze lion."

"Certainly not, but we can wait."

She said this with a placid smile, that almost reconciled me to my legacy.

"Then Lucinda, what will papa Munson say?"

"I am afraid that he is very much disappointed. He has set his heart upon my marrying some rich man. I fear that he will take some unpleasant course. Is it a pretty lion?"

"Oh charming! All sorts of a mane and no end,—or rather, very much end—of a tail."

"I am glad that you can be so cheerful about it, any way."

And so we chatted on; and I was agreeably surprised that Lucinda bore up so well under our affliction.

The next morning, I found a letter placed by the servant in Leo's mouth. It was from papa Munson, discarding my pretension to a son-in-lawship, and enclosing a letter from Lucinda, which, though written under her father's eye, was kind and affectionate.

Maggie always came for her share of the letters, and when she did so that morning, I gave her those two to read.

While she did so, she stood and stroked the back of the little lion. I don't know that he actually wagged his tail, but he certainly seemed to express some sort of approbation. I felt that my aunt was fully justified in her attachment for the ignominious little brute.

"Well, Cousin Robert, is not one of them all you expected, and the other all you could wish?"

"Certainly! Lucinda is quite heroic about it."

"No, Papa Munson would not degrade even him his food and stabling. I can afford to keep him, if I am poor."

I was sitting over some knotty accounts of the estate, one afternoon shortly after, when the door-bell rang violently, and, in a minute after, the servant swung open the door and admitted Papa Munson. The old gentleman was evidently in a towering passion and had a big stick in his hand.

"Hum! Ah! You scoundrel! Where's my daughter?"

"Your daughter?" said I.

"Yes, my daughter. Where's Lucinda? What have you done with her?" roared he.

"Upon my soul, I don't know what you mean," said I.

"Don't tell falsehoods to me, sir! Read that sir! Read that!" and the old gentleman handed me a letter.

It was in the dear and well-known handwriting, and I devoured it all. As near as I can remember it concluded thus—

"And as I am well aware that your consent is impossible, I have determined to do without it, and go with the man I love."

And then she had signed her name.

"Now sir, will you tell me now that you don't know where she is? Will you dare?" And old Munson fairly shouted.

I was a little bewildered just then, but I answered that I thought I could, and added, in a faltering voice—

"Don't you notice that she speaks of him as her 'dear James.' My name isn't James."

"I'm Janey!" shouted the old gentleman, and I'm afraid he swore.

At all events he brought down his stick on the table with such force, that it knocked poor Leo's head—there all although it hit him on the back, where the hinge was thickest.

"It must be Jim," I said, as I stooped to pick up the head, but old Munson was already half way out of the house.

I stood there, with the head in my hand, quite a dim idea that it was good luck that it was not my own, when, interrupted by the unaccountable noise, Maggie Sawyer came in.

"Why, Maggie," said I, "Lucinda has run away with Jim Janey, and her father has broken Leo's neck to pay for it."

Maggie actually smiled, but she answered, "How very dreadful! What will you do?"

"I don't think it can be mended," said I, "but the stick must have had an edge on it."

"You seem to think more about losing Leo than Lucinda."

"For my part, I believe I do!" said I.

"But let's take a look at him. If he can't be mended, you shall have him this time."

So we went to fix the head back again. Of course, the little brass-tipped tail flew, but we never knew before that he had a hinge in the back of his neck.

"Oh, what a lot of papers!" exclaimed Maggie, peering into the cavity.

"Let's have them out!" said I.

And have them out we did, in a minute! Bank notes, every one of them, packed as hard as wood. What could have brought that Leo had a mouth in him?

"Maggie," said I, "I always said I never could part with that lion, and so I won't."

"Then, Robert, you must keep him, that Maggie held in her hand, fairly chose as she answered, "No, Robert,"

Kissing a Jury.

AN IRISH STORY.

"Ah," said the sub-sheriff, the times have changed since I first knew this place. It is just thirty-four years ago since I stopped here with a kissed jury."

I was returning wet and weary after a day's rather unsuccessful trout fishing when I met my friend the sheriff, a seat on his car was quickly accepted, and our passage through the little village of Foulke's Mill, in the county of Wexford, caused the observation.

"Kissed jury," I exclaimed. "What on earth is that?"

"Well, you see," replied my friend, "the old jury was that in case a jury would not agree, the assistant barrister, at sessions, or judge at assizes could order the jury to be taken to the next town in which the sessions were held, or to the confines of the county and there discharge them. The practice here was—I'm not sure whether it was quite legal or not—to put the jurors into two kishes or creels, and discharge them by simply tilting the car up."

"But you don't mean to say such a thing was done in your time?"

"Egad, I do. As I told you, it was the first year I filled the office of sheriff, thirty-five years ago. There was a trial for a riot at the Ross sessions, and as it all arose out of an election squabble, party feeling ran very high. As might be expected, the jury disagreed, and old Moore, the assistant barrister, who thought the evidence quite strong enough against the prisoner, was almost beside himself with rage at the idea of his getting off. He went over the strong points in the evidence; he bullied them, but it was no use—they would not agree. He then locked them up all night, but in the morning they were no nearer a verdict. He then declared he would take them to Wexford that day, and ordered me to provide jaunting cars and to produce the jury and prisoner before him that evening in Wexford. But here the jury made a row, they said they did not mind going to Wexford, but they did mind the terms of the law, and that as the old Act of legal way was to go in turf kishes on farmer's carts, they would go by no other conveyance. The foreman told the magistrates that if he was sent in any other thing than a kish he would bring an action against them. When it came to this point I think Moore would have liked to be able to discharge them quietly, but as he had made the proposal he was too proud to alter it, so he told me to take them in kishes.

Now of course I wasn't going to take a jury and prisoner twenty Irish miles through a wild country without a good escort, and as it happened that a troop of the 10th Hussars was quartered in the town, I ordered them out. The in each kish. The prisoner was Peter Murphy's father, and was one of the best-off men in Ross, and one of the great leaders of the Repealers—brought his own gig, and so we made a pretty fine show. First came the six country carts, each with a turf creel containing two jurors, then came the prisoner and myself in the gig—the vehicles being surrounded by thirty or forty Hussars with drawn swords, and followed by the greater part of the population of Ross, waving green bows and yelling like so many wild Indians.

The journey was the greatest fun you can imagine. When we got rid of the crowd, several of the jury sang capital songs, and the foreman managed to pick up a wandering piper, who played jigs and hornpipes for some who danced. And, by Jove! well they did dance, too, though they had only the floor of the car, for the kish prevented them falling off.

In this style, and full of devilment, we came into Foulkes' Mill here. We had sent on a messenger to order dinner at Mrs. Roche's, so we found everything ready for us. But, egad! by this time I was in funk about the state my jury would be in by the time they reached Wexford, for many of them were half drunk already. I insisted that each man should be limited to four tumblers of punch. They all promised readily enough, but I found that when the four tumblers had been dispatched, that it did not prevent them proceeding to mix a fifth, and I made up my mind to have a sleeping fine inflicted on the by old Moore. Still the dinner was worth the price. Sir Charles Chilton, the captain of the Hussars, took the chair, and the prisoner the vice, and well they filled them. Songs and stories were freely and six o'clock, the hour at which had been ordered to produce the jury in Wexford found them all very drunk, four of them dancing a reel on the lower end of the room, while the foreman and one of the Munroe rioters whistled and the captain and prisoner were playing boisterously neighbours at the other end, each one who should pay for the dinner. At last I got them on the road again, but it was two o'clock in the morning when we entered Wexford and drew up before Moore's lodgings. The jurors were quiet enough now, as they were all drunk and asleep in the kishes. I backed the cars in a line opposite the door. The effort was drawn up behind, and the prisoner was carefully supported by two policemen. It happened to be pouring with rain, and dark and bitterly cold, so I hoped Moore might not perceive the state of the party. I went up and knocked at his bedroom door in great trepidation.

"Who's there?" What's all this row about?" roared Moore.

"It's me, your worship, I have brought the jury and prisoner," I replied.

"And what the deuce delayed you till this hour, sir?"

"Bad roads and the breaking down of the cars your worship."

"You must keep them till morning. I can't get up now," he growled.

"Oh, pardon worship," said I, "I have no place to keep them. They are half dead already with fatigue, and want of food. If you detain them much longer something serious will happen." Just then I heard the prisoner making a desperate attempt to sing "The Harp of My Moon," but the police managed to stop him.

After considerable delay Moore [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Pumps, Reapers & Mowers

To the Public in General, and Farmers in particular.

PUMPS. MACHINES

HENRY OWENS

Begs leave to bring to your notice once more his truly celebrated SWING and FORCE PUMPS, which have already received five Provincial First Prizes, and have hitherto met with unparalelled success. There can be no reasonable doubt now after a years trial of the superiority of this pump over all others. H. O. has purchased the sole right under four patents, for the counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and will keep a large stock on hand if possible, which he will sell at very cheap rate. He has increased his facilities for making all kinds of pumps, having lately added to his machinery a new and first-class pump boring machine. Every thing in the pump line can be furnished on the shortest notice, and Repairs carefully and promptly attended to. Parties ordering Pumps please state depth of well and all other necessary particulars.

Again in the field with REAPERS and MOWERS, and would respectfully call the attention of Farmers to the fact that all the Reapers and Mowers he has sold during the past three years have given undeniable satisfaction. He will have on hand this year Wood's Self-Rake Reaper and Mower, Cayuga Chief Mower, and Johnson's Self-Rake Reaper, and any other machine of this description that may be required can be furnished by him on very short notice. Parties intending to purchase Reapers or Mowers this coming season will find it to their advantage to give liberal orders before the 1st day of May, as up to that date he is permitted to sell on last years prices; after the 1st of May, on account of the rise in Iron, prices of Machines will be raised about 10 per cent. Sample Machine to be seen at my shop.

COMMON PUMPS AS CHEAP AS OTHERS.

Henry Owens gladly avails himself of this opportunity to offer his most sincere thanks to those friends who have so kindly and liberally extended their patronage to him during the past few years, and he hopes by honest and energetic attention to such orders as he may be honored with in the future, to secure a continuance of the favor he so highly prizes.

Monday last was observed as a general holiday.

On Monday and Tuesday nights the frosts were very severe.

Mr. Carroll will preach until further notice on Sunday mornings in the Baptist Chapel, and in the Music Hall, on Sunday evenings at 7 P. M.

New Grocery.—Mr. John Gowers has opened out a Grocery on George Street, next door to Mr. Coulter's Drug Store, with a large and varied assortment of Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Crockery, &c. where he will always be ready to supply the wants of those who may favor him with a call. Mr. E. C. Hill is requested to say by letter from Mr. F. Boscovitz that he will visit Peterboro on or about the 1st to the 6th of May to give a grand Piano Forte Recital, in which full particulars will be given.

Notice.—Macdonald and Elder have secured some more Damaged Goods last week by attending the auction sale. As this is likely to be the last chance of getting damaged goods at half price, we want our friends to know it.—See their advertisement.

Mr. Joseph Hooper of Port Hope, while driving across the ice to Otonabee with a cargo of merchandize, fell into water through a hole, but escaped himself. Mr. Patrick Keach of Keene, while driving a load of hay, lost a valuable span of horses valued at $300.

The Lakes are yet solid, and pedestrian adventurers are that navigation will be late and the ice thick long.

The Ladies' Committee of the Protestant Hospital [illegible] with many thanks, [illegible] having a committee from the Congregation of St. Andrew's Church.

A [illegible] of things have been existing in Chatham,—Nothing less than an organized system of [illegible] by one of the Free Companies. The Chief Constable of that town has some months' [illegible] in the Planet, implicating the parties engaged in incendiarism, two of which were members of a Fire Company.

Port Hope has suffered severely from the same cause, and offers $500 reward for the apprehension and conviction of the incendiaries who fired Wood's Planing Mill in that place.

The Montreal Witness says:—"A great deal of the Fall Wheat in the county of Peterboro', is winter killed and will be plowed down in the spring." We know not whence our cotemporary got his information, but we know that he has been misinformed. The Fall Wheat came out very promising, and gave indications of life. Seldom have we heard less complaint of the wheat, and if there is any killing it will be in the future.

"The first steamboat ever launched in the waters of the chain of great lakes was built and launched at Sackett's Harbor, in May, 1816. It was named the 'Walk-in-the-Water.'"

Welship the above from an exchange—but we are free to say that it is not correct. The first steamboat built on Lake Ontario was the old "Frontenac." Reference is made to her by Dr. Dick in his Christian Philosopher.

The "Walk-in-the-Water," if built and launched at Sackett's Harbor, was in 1820-21, at Buffalo. The writer saw her at the above date at Black Rock. She made a trip weekly between Buffalo and Green Bay on Lake Michigan. How did she get up Niagara Falls!

In 1823 the "Frontenac" made a weekly trip to York, Niagara and Queenston, from Kingston.

The "Charlotte" ran between Kingston and the carrying place at the head of the Bay of Quinte. A small American steamer ran between Sackett's Harbor and Kingston. In the latter part of the year 1822, the "Earl of Dalhousie" was launched, and plied between Prescott and Kingston.

The following is the presentment of the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury for the County of Peterboro', at the Court of Assize held at Peterboro' the 15th of April, 1872, beg leave to present:—

That they have paid a visit to the gaol and found it in a state of perfect cleanliness and the corridors and cells were used well, heated, and ventilated.

The Grand Jury regret, however, to find that no employment, useful or otherwise, is provided for those sentenced to hard labor, and they would express the hope that the Central Prison which is now in course of erection, at Toronto, may be speedily completed so that this class of prisoners may be usefully employed, instead of passing their time in a state of idleness, which is both unhealthy and demoralizing.

The Grand Jury, in common with many of their predecessors, have to express the hope that some change will soon be made in the law, whereby, they will be entirely relieved of the duties now imposed upon them, or at least that the number of Jurors summoned on these occasions may be considerably reduced, as they believe that changes in the Criminal Law and the general intelligence of the magistracy, render their services unnecessary.

They also would avail themselves of this opportunity to express their thankfulness to Almighty God for the recovery of His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales.

The Honorable George Brown must surely breathe easier now that the concluding paper has been published and the vial of wrath emptied. Knowing as we do the nefariousness, circumlocution and verbiage of the Doctor's effusions we had supposed that it would have taken twelve papers at least to have let him have his say. NEW DOMINION MONTHLY.
PROSPECTUS FOR 1872.

This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. It aims at being a Canadian Magazine, both in the character of its matter, and in adopting the way for Canadian writers. In the latter field it has up to the present been a failure, as far as remunerating its contributors and its publishers is considered; but in its circulation is fair, we can in reason think a good advertising medium may yet put it on a paying basis. We do not see Canadian books can find elsewhere, so interesting and so Canadian, and we ask all Canadians to sustain it. Its circulation is 3,000. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL

Worth Ten Times it's Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgement of the people of any length of time. One of these is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, possibly a combination of six of some of the best. Oils that are known, each one possessing virtues of its own. Scientific physicians know what medicines may be formed of several ingredients in certain fixed proporations of greater power and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combinations. Thus in the preparation, of this Oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, and embodies a power derived from anything ever before made, and which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range of application than any medicine ever before discovered. Wherever applied you get the benefit of every drop; whereas with other preparations nearly all the alcohol is lost in that way, and you get only the small of Oils which they may contain.

PAIN KILLER

Husband (Returned from a call on Judge Jones). Well Mary, I have examined those certificates and found them straight as a string, there are so many imitations and counterfeits sticking like barnacles to ever good medicine that I have learned to look upon the good and bad as and alike. It is very wrong however, this PAIN-KILLER of Perry Davis has stood the test of time Doctors and Druggists have not been able to hush it up, it's as you say, Mary in everybodys house and I am astonished to find it has been doing such a world of good about here and we have known nothing about it.

Wife—It might have cured somebodys Rheumatism or you would'nt have been converted so easily.

Husband:—Converted, why it has cured a dozen of cases about here whithin a year, Simon Tinkler who you know used to be such an awful sufferer with it and was laid up half the time, why it was this same Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER that cured him. Geo Tretter who Doctor Squills used to pity so much and call such a great sufferer, he too was cured with the PAIN-KILLER and what's more he writes that he paid Doctor Squills over one hundred Dollars for attending him and was growing worse all the while, here my dear rub some of it on my shoulder at once I am through with Squills, if Pain-Killer can't cure me nothing will I am convinced of that.

THERE IS NO DISEASED CONDITION OF THE BODY, in which Dr. WHEELER'S Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya may not be used with positive benefit. Being a Chemical Food and Nutritive Tonic, it acts physiologically in the same manner as our diet. It perfects digestion, assimilation, and the formation of healthy blood. It sustains the vital forces by supplying the waste constantly going on, of nerve and muscle, as the result of mental and physical exertion, enabling mind and body to undergo great labor without fatigue. Its action in building up constitutions broken down with Wasting Chronic Diseases, by feel'ng and bad habits, is truly extraordinary, its effect being immediate in energizing all the organs of the body. Phosphates being absolutely essential to cell formation and the growth of tissues, must for all time be Nature's great restorative and vitalizer.

Touching Simplicity.—Deeply affected on reading the other day of a young lady who, being told that her lover had been suddenly killed, cried, "Oh, that splendid gold watch of his! Give me that—give me something to remember him by!".—Touching simplicity.

The Lamb and his footman.—"How had you the audacity, John, to go and tell the people of P——— that I was a low, mean fellow, and no gentleman?" "Lamb, sir, you'll no catch me at the like o' that; when I gang to P——— I aye keep my thoughts to myself."

An Illinois woman committed suicide by hanging herself to an apple tree. At the funeral a neighbor noticing the presence of the husband said to him, "I'm sorry that he had met with a terrible fate." "Yes," said the husband heaving a sigh, "she must have kicked awfully to shake off six bushels of apples that would have been worth a dollar a bushel when they got ripe."

Some time ago there appeared in the papers the announcement of the marriage of a Mr Day to a Miss Week. The groomsmen was guilty of the following verse on the subject—

A Day is gained, a Week is lost,
Yet time must not complain;
There'll soon be little Days enough
To make a week again.

"We have no room for this," said the night editor, glancing despairingly at the two column obituary; "it must be cut down to a proper die-mention."

A polite philosopher once thanked the lady who had been singing to a party for an hour by the remark, "Madam, you have wasted our time most charmingly."

A teacher in Sixth Avenue, New York, who professes to give lessons in the English language and literature, has a notice posted on her door: "Letters wrote and revised."

Young women often keep their lovers by tears. "Yes," says Grumgig, "love, like beef, is preserved by brine."

An old maid, speaking of marriage says it is like any other disease—while there is life there is hope.

An independent old lady, speaking of Adam naming all the animals, said she didn't think he deserved any credit for naming the pig—anyone would know what to call him.

A footman who got a situation at the West End of London, on entering a room where there was a vase with golden fish exclaimed, "Well, this is the finest time ever saw red herrings alive!"

A bachelor sea-captain, who was remarking one day that he wanted a good chief officer, was promptly informed by a young lady, that she had no objections to be the first mate. He took the hint and the lady.

Rob Hamilton was one day offered the choice of a sixpence or a penny by a passenger, who was just waiting on the Glasgow mail. Being asked which of them he would have, he said, "I'll not be greedy, I'll tak' the wee white one.

"Jeff, why am you like de cedar?" "I guss it up Sambo." "Kase yer stays green both summer and winter."

Coleridge tells of a man who had such an overwhelming self-esteem; that he never spoke himself without taking off his hat.

Fevers seldom make an attack without warning; and may often be thrown off by soaking the feet in warm water, wrapping up warm in bed, and taking two or three of "Parsons' Purgative Pills."

A Missionary just returned, says he regards "Johnson's Anodyne Liniment" as beyond all price, and efficacious beyond any other medicine. It is adapted to a great variety of special uses, and is the best pain killer in the world.

Twenty years experience in using Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have proved them to be the most effectual remedy for coughs, and irritation of the throat, caused by cold, or unusual exertion of the vocal organs; public speakers and singers will find them most beneficial. The entire freedom from all deleterious ingredients renders Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, or Cough and Voice Lozenges, a safe remedy for the most delicate person, and has caused them to be held in high esteem by all who have used them. Sold by all medicine dealers at 25 cts. per box.

A Beautiful Horse.—There is nothing that can contribute so much to render the horse beautiful and elegant, to improve his condition and make him all that is desirable, as "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" it has been used by many persons who own valuable carriage and other horses with decided success, and so well pleased are they with it that they always keep it on hand in case of emergency; it may be given at all times with perfect safety. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Happiness.—True happiness, in our opinion, consists of the following named articles:—A nice little wife sitting on your knee, her trusting smile filling your mind with happy thoughts, a neat little home oddly furnished, and a bottle of "Canadian Pain Destroyer" in the cupboard ready for instant use. Nothing better for sudden colds, sprains, burns, and all kinds of aches and pains. Price 25 cents. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Sufferers from cough, colds bronchitis, croup, influenza or whooping cough will find relief in "Dr. Wister's Balsam of Wild Cherry," which has now been in use for nearly half a century, and still maintains its long established reputation as a great remedy for all diseases of the throat, lungs, and chest.

THE [illegible] Printer

Pick and click
Goes the type in the stick,
As the printer stands at his case;
With eye bright and his fingers pick
The type at a rapid pace;
And one by one as the letters go,
Words are piled up steady and slow—
Steady and slow,
Slow;
Traverse the earth to its utmost bound:
Words that shall make
The tyrant quake,
And the fetters of the oppress'd shall break;
Words that can crumble an army's might,
Or [illegible] fight;
Yet the type they look but leaden and dumb,
As he puts them in place with finger and thumb.

But the printer smiles,
And his work beguiles
By cheering a single lonely hour;
With pick and click,
Like the world's chronometer, tick! tick! tick!

O, where is the man with such simple tools
Can govern the world like it,
With a printing press, an iron stick,
And a little [illegible] dip
With paper of white, and ink of black,

That can rival the printer's power?
Could immortality [illegible] both be give,—
Their sway lasts only an hour;

When his might shall cease to [illegible]

Horticultural Hints.

We pick up our knowledge as the fowl picks up the corn—a grain at a time.

One pound of potatoes carefully cut will make one hundred sets. These plant one foot apart, and should [illegible] from two to three inches deep.

Soak beet and carrot seed from twelve to twenty-four hours before sowing. This forwards germination and helps them to come up as quickly as possible.

Weeds should be collected and removed from the ground, after being pulled or hoed up; they often root and grow. The best way is to turn them under and bunch.

Tomato plants when set if over three inches tall should be laid down and covered, except a few inches on top, they will grow better [illegible] keep the ground rich.

Top dress the ground which pumpkins and squash run over.

The plant vegetables [illegible] wide according to size.

Peas and corn may be forwarded by soaking the seed. Keep damp and warm. Do not plant peas twice on the same ground, the same or following season.

Spinach should be top dressed with guano or composted droppings of fowls. Cut above the crown, it will produce successive crops.

Rhubarb needs rich soil and plenty manure about its roots: removed to dark cellar in autumn covered with good moist soil, produces good stalks of a mild flavor.

Squash, cucumber, melon and pumpkin seed, put in hills and covered, will be forwarded by carefully pouring on boiling water and turning over them a box or vessel to keep the heat in. It is especially good in late planting.

Thorough cultivation is the price of vegetables.

The thumb and finger is the best "squash bug" trap yet known. Dust often with [illegible] and [illegible] turnips to [illegible]

Plants do not eat manure, they drink the essence of it.

Drop a few tomato seeds with red when the pods are removed, three to four feet apart, they will come on rapidly and make excellent late tomatoes.

Plant beets rather thickly, those taken out when thinning make excellent greens.

In cultivating with a fork or rake, work backwards to avoid showing footprints.

One large, strong eye left on potato sets throws up one strong stalk and gives large potatoes. Several stalks give many small ones.

Preserve a pickling of cucumbers will supply a family. Plant for pickles in July.

Early Cucumbers.

There are several modes of growing early cucumbers. Our aim is to plant the seed early in hot-beds. Soon after the plants begin to show their second pair of leaves, push a trowel or knife under them so as to sever the top roots, in a day or two transplant them in a hot-bed, do this without disturbing the plants of earth. A week later push a knife down around them so as to cut lateral roots within an inch of the main root, then lift the ball and transplant it.

Once every eight days or so, shorten the roots, each time going a little further out, and after each pruning transplant. Some two or three weeks before setting in the field, transplant into cold frames [illegible] soil in either place first becomes warm.

Small frames covered with glass may be advantageously used in the open field on cold nights, as a protection [illegible] at other times the glass ought to be left off. In this way, if plants are properly hardened, and balls of earth containing them are carried to the field and set without disturbing the roots, cucumbers can be had six weeks earlier than by planting seeds early in the open ground. —Prairie Farmer.

THE REASONS WHY

LAZARUS, MORRIS & Co's

CELEBRATED

Perfected Spectacles,

AND EYE [illegible]

have met with such extraordinary success and are so much in demand:

1st. Because they are found to possess all the qualities claimed for them.

2nd. Because they will reclaim sights abused by the common glasses, and will often be found to restore failing sight to its natural state.

3rd. Because no giddiness or dizziness is experienced in their use, and being fitted on optical and scientific rules, they are guaranteed against injury to the eye's sight from improper selections.

4th. Because the system of fitting is an unerring guide to the true requirement of each purchaser—our agents accomplish this to perfection.

5th. Because the never tire the eyes and last many years without the necessity of change.

6th. Because being the best they are the cheapest.

Innumerable testimonials might be here given but the sale of these Spectacles and Eye Glasses is their proof, their unimpeachable value.

Select Poetry.

Don't Tread Upon Your Neighbor's Toes.

BY MRS. M. A. KIDDER.

Your friend may have counter views from your own,
And see in different light—
Be quite ready glad, or sorry and sad,
While you are the opposite quite.
Don't grumble and growl at the faults of others,
But take the world as it goes;
And, whatever else you may choose to do
Don't tread on your neighbor's toes.

We must winter and summer a man, you know,
Before you can tell him for,
He has faults, 'tis true, but so have you,
Full many, there's no doubt.
Respect the opinions of rich and poor,
Of humble friend or foes,
And in treading the intricate walks of life,
Don't tread on your neighbor's toes.

And smile, and push, and thrive on—
Tread their plans too often upset your own,
Then making the world go round?
Two strangers can't occupy one room right,
As many a one's chosen,
So, whatever else you may choose to do,
Don't tread on your neighbor's toes.

Adam Burdick's Dream.

"No, I cannot take your pledge," said Adam Burdick resolutely; "I take my glass of wine occasionally, and I must own I feel the better of it. The pledge is well enough for those who drink too much, or possibly to young men who, here he glanced towards a youth mixing up at the fine-covered sideboard beyond, the wine resembling of whose features plainly showed the tide of blood between them—"but for me I think it would not answer."

The agents of the Temperance cause shook their heads.

"I think," he said, "that you are wrong. You may not be in any danger, but your example may lead others into evils from which there can be no escape."

"Perhaps my son would sign it," said the retired merchant shortly, pretending not to notice the agent's remark.

With a bow the agent passed out upon the broad verandah and exhibited his paper.

"My father did not sign it," said the young man in a questioning tone, as he glanced over the long array of signatures.

"Well, no, he did not sign it, but he thought you might."

"Oh, as to that, if he does not care so put his name upon the paper, I hardly think I will."

Now Adam Burdick could not fail of hearing this reply, the window being open, and after a time he left the verandah, and very soon he saw his son arise and walk away. And still he thought about the agent's words re arking his example, and his boy's refusal to affix his name to the pledge.

An hour or more had seemed to pass away, when he beheld a neighbor come with hasty steps along the graveled walk that led to the verandah, and as he saw the white and startled face of the approaching visitor, his heart misgave him. Arriving to his side he motioned one, and not then as the portico.

The neighbor cleared his throat, as if to present preparatory remarks.

"Mr. Burdick, I regret to say to you, owner of ill tidings. Can you bear them?"

"What is it?" he gasped anxiously.

"There has been a fearful accident. Your son—"

But Adam Burdick waited not to hear more. Hurrying every one to terror, he rushed down the street, across the highway, till he reached the place where the crowd was staring upon the mangled, white and ghastly upon the ground. He saw his son's form, he heard his groans, he saw the agony of death upon his face, and then he knelt down by the side of his dying son, and with one scream of agony, he fell upon the corpse, and prayed for forgiveness.

Then he arose and walked slowly to his home, and there he sat down in his chair, and gazed upon the floor, and thought of the past, and of the future, and of the present, and of his son, and of the agent, and of the pledge, and of the wine, and of the glass, and of the sideboard, and of the decanter, and of the glass, and of the wine, and of the sideboard, and of the decanter, and of the glass, and of the wine, and of the sideboard, and of the decanter, and of the glass, and of the wine Remarkable Success of a Canadian Institution.

Confederation Life Association of Canada.

We call the attention of our readers to the following notice of the above Institution, extracted from the St. Catharines Daily Times:—

"Great success attends the Confederation Life Insurance Company. It seems to have the right kind of men at the helm to give it every prospect of going ahead. As an evidence of the popular reception which these Canadian Institutions meet with, we may mention that the business done by the Confederation during the month was nearly $230,000. Mr. Baldear, the local agent, has the assistance for some time of Mr. Henderson, one of the general agents, and the amount of business done in this town for the last few weeks is truly wonderful. One would think that Life Insurance business would soon be run into the ground by the great amount done at present, but those that pretend to know say that it is only in its infancy."

[Mr. James Carmichael, one of the Inspectors of the Company, has met with equally good success in the East, having closed (as he advises the Head Office in a letter received yesterday), during the last few days thirty-two applications in Millbrook.

The success of the Confederation is now an established fact. It having received an amount of business and standing in the Dominion which is but seldom obtained even after years of hard work. With the success of this home Company, the fact is clearly demonstrated that Canadians are ready to support home institutions in preference to foreign ones, especially when such advantageous terms are offered as those of the Confederation. As a further evidence of the favour with which this Company is being received, applications in the General Branch to some from $10,000 downwards, were received by mail from thirty persons on one day alone, of which, four for $10,000, were from Nova Scotia, and upon these but the second premium remained to usually paid.

The Confederation is rapidly becoming the National Company of Canada.

Such remarkable good results must be satisfactory to all concerned, and furnish the best proof of the fact that this Company is fast becoming the most popular one through out the Dominion.

Mr. Wm. Cluxton is agent for the above company, in Peterboro'.

ERRATUM.—In last week's issue in the report of the Assizes, of the trial of the "Queen vs. Sedgwick," we inserted the name Joseph Sedgwick instead of Thomas Sedgwick. We gladly correct the error.

THE Assizes lasted all last week, and ended by making a number of the cases "Remanets" to be tried next Assizes—unless the litigants gnawing wise shall settle their difficulties before the lawyers leave them little to fight for.

SOMETHING NEW IN TOWN.—It will be observed that Messrs Wm. Fairweather and Co., have opened an extensive Auction Room in their Basement. We would advise the people of Peterboro and the surrounding country to give them a call as that will be the place for purchasing Goods of all kinds very cheap.—See advertisement.

THE Court of Chancery commenced on Tuesday last, Chancellor Mowat presiding One case, Roache v. Lundy occupied the whole day, judgment reserved. Yesterday the suit of Redman v. Tully came on and after some arguments of the learned gentlemen of the law, it was decided not to go on any further with the case just now.

THE want of rain to swell the rivulets and creeks, is threatening to leave vast numbers of saw logs in the woods. So desirous are the lumbermen of getting their logs out, that very high wages are given to men to get the logs ready for the first high water. The snow has gone off so slowly that it is feared we will have very low water. No rain of consequence has fallen this Spring, and as the land was very dry last Fall, much of the melted snow has been absorbed.

A MOUSE'S NEST.—In tearing out the front of Donnelly & Co's shop on George street, this week, a mouse's nest was discovered, made of a hat full of bank bills reduced to fractional currency by the owners of the wee home. How much money was thus used up it is hard to conjecture. The building is an old one and much business has been done in the shop. Whose money it was or when taken or who was led into trouble by the little thieves, it is now hard to say. This however, may safely be said, that it is very careless to have money drawers so ill fitted as to lead to waste and perhaps to wrongful suspicion on some innocent clerk.

MAPLE LEAF CRICKET CLUB.—At a meeting of the Maple Leaf Cricket Club held on Monday evening, last, the following were elected officers for the present year:—Captain, Wm. Spence; President, G. H. Johnston; Vice-President, Thos. Quincey; Secretary and Treasurer, S. Johnston; Match-Committee, T. Rutherford, J. Montgomery and Wm. Green. We believe it is the intention of this Club to play a match with the Peterborough Cricket Club on the 24th of May. There will be another meeting of Maple Leaf Cricket Club this evening, in Mr. George Johnston's shop, Water street, at 8 o'clock p.m., when all those who are desirous of joining will please file an appearance.

WE understand that Mr. Fairbairn who was just about taking offices in Chambers Block, suffered no loss from the fire. Mr. Burnham removed all his papers, even to the emptying of his safe. Mr. Clements fortunately had his most valuable instruments out of his office, yet his papers, many of which cannot be replaced, were consumed; his cartridges kept up a lively fusilade during a portion of the time, but we did not hear of any injury being done by them. The loss of the Messrs. Chambers and of Mr. Thomas Chambers, who owns the building, is fully covered by insurance. Our old citizen Mr. Chambers who lost his property on the same corner, by fire, when it was covered by Caine's Hotel, many years ago, has the congratulations of all his fellow townsmen on the immunity from serious loss secured by his judicious insurance. We hope he may never suffer inconvenience from another fire.

THAT SHIP.—We observe that some people are determined to make their mark. On George street their sign, 12 feet long, projects. It is fastened by two wires, a piece of stick and a ten-penny nail. We believe in people making their mark in the world, but we object to making a mark on somebody's head go this sign evidently contemplates. Last week Cameron's sign, twelve feet long, fell from the third story, where it had been posted, to the side walk, evidently preferring to fall rather than continue the unsafe hold it had of the wall. About a dozen people gave thanks that the sign did not come nearer to them than six inches. One little girl suddenly found a slice of sign in her arms and skedaddled her face, more in her fright however, than injury. We think it should be the duty of an overseer to inspect the signs, and none should be allowed up which may be liable to come down promiscuously.

THE BURGLARS.—Toronto, Guelph, Port Hope and other towns have been of late very seriously annoyed with these pests to society. When men adopt means to acquire wealth in a short time, they find themselves surrounded with difficulties; the sturdy hew to get clear of these difficulties employ their thoughts and attention. Great care is taken to procure the most approved methods to secure booty, at the same time to avoid capture. And notwithstanding the attempts to guard against their depredations, the villians have been too often successful.—On Saturday morning, however, owing to the vigilance of the police, a couple of daring fellows were captured, but not before, we are sorry to say, one of them had discharged his revolver at the head of the Constable who had fired his weapon at the same instant, but unfortunately without effect. The ball from the burglars' pistol entered the forehead at the root of the hair, and passed through to the back of the skull, where it remained. The shock given the Constable enabled the ruffian to escape. He was subsequently recaptured, and both were lodged up at the Station.

MONDAY, APRIL 22nd, 1872.

The Council met. His Worship the Mayor in the chair.

Present.—Messrs. Toole, Stevenson, Edmison, Robertson, Patterson, Hall, Helm, English, and Smith.

The minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed.

A communication from Mr. H. Calcott, informing the Council that he was building a steamer and intended making a connection between Cobourg and Peterborough, pointing the advantages to merchants and others, in the shape of freight. Offering to carry firewood at such a rate say 2s. 6d. per cord, as to have wood laid down at Peterboro at $2.25 per cord, and asking the Council for a bonus of $1,500 and for a wharf and storehouse to be built by the Council at Parnell's Mill.

The matter was referred to Committee on Finance.

Accounts in connection with the extension of the Town Limits, to amount of $12, were referred to the Finance Committee

A By-law was introduced and read three times, for repealing By-law No. 209, and for adopting by the Council the Plans and elevations submitted by Mr. Belcher for the building of a New Town Hall.

Mr. Smith read a report from the special committee on Slaughter Houses.

The Report was received and adopted.

The Chief Constable was instructed to enforce rigidly the By-laws &c., for the cleaning of yards and back premises in the Town.

The matter of the account for the Board of Owen Dowling was referred to the Committee with power to act.

Messrs. Edmison, Hall, Toole, Helm and Stevenson were appointed a special committee to take such action as they may deem proper for the Planting of Ornamental Trees throughout the Town.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

Sold for a Mess of Pottage.

After the explanations given at Ottawa, we have come to the conclusion that Sir John A. Macdonald, who knew his birthright as a British subject, was to protect a Briton's honor and never barter sacred rights or territory for money, has been a party to an arrangement, complaisity in which would damn any statesman and stamp upon him the mark of a Benedict Arnold.

He admits, and his government—warned by the voice of an outraged people—admit, that to pander to American exactions by giving to them rights that are peculiarly our own, is to subordinate our interests to those of the United States—an idea utterly to be repudiated. And yet after declaring that the sacred duty of Canada was to decide that our interests were paramount in importance to us, and not secondary to those of the Empire, and that it would be an act of criminal weakness to let one right slip from our grasp. What do we find? Oh shame we to speak of it. In order to make things pleasant for an English Premier who would purchase a continuance of peace by buying peace with America, by catapawing a poor colony, Sir John agrees to the shameful transfer, and takes the "thirty pieces" that earlier traitor purchased untimely death and eternal infamy. Only the repudiation of the vile attempt by an outraged Country will save Sir John from that intensity of disgrace which the consummation of his treason would have caused him. Weakness with self respect and honorable pluck, will be to us a safer protection than that craving and pandering spirit which serves as a standing invitation to an unscrupulous and selfish neighbor. Switzerland's armament is her honor, when she holds that cheap she abandons her defences. Let us then cast back to Britain's Premier his bits of silver and Briton will like us more, bounce more like Britons.

THE FIRE.

After a very long interval of immunity, we have at last been visited by a destructive fire. On Sunday morning about half past four a.m., the bells rung out the alarm. At this hour a light shews will awaken the most restless sleeper, so in a very short time a crowd was gathered on the scene of destruction. When we got there the fire had already obtained considerable headway. It was bursting out of the front and rear of the eastern shop and had all but consumed Beatty's little office and the wooden shade in the rear. The contents of Burnham's law office were removed and much stuff was taken from the corner shop. Most of Clements's office furniture and papers were, however, consumed. After a while we began to look for the new steam fire engine—ah! there it was on Dagherty's bridge, but showing little sign of life. People asked "what is the delay?" "Why don't they throw water?" "The building can be saved if the water is laid on at once," and still no water. The hose was laid, the hosemen was at his post, and the house was burning, there was no water. Oh the disappointment—a new steam engine—broad day light—no wind—a brick building with brick partitions—no trouble to save it, if only water is given. Five, minutes pass, ten, twenty, thirty, thirty-five, and yet no water. He, here it comes, the hose trembles, pants, fills, the hosemen dance up to the fire. The hose is too short! Straighten the hose—a few feet more—Go and tell them to straighten it! Fix it was an exciting and exploded as it could be made. Beyond the stump to the cracks—a man stands there with his

SPANISH BRIGANDAGE.

The audacious stoppage and robbery of the mail train from Andalusia to Madrid, on Saturday night, rivals, as a topic of public interest, the elections, which commence to-morrow. That such a deed should be possible reflects the greatest discredit on the Spanish Government, with its army of 150,000 soldiers, Civil Guards, and carabineers. The following account is published in a Madrid paper, the editor of which had the pleasure of being in the train:

At midnight of Saturday, the mail train from Andalusia to Madrid was run off the line and robbed, between Val-de-penas and Manzanares. Three hours beforehand, as we are informed by an eyewitness, several men, armed with guns and muskets seized on the two guards at the level crossing at Ventna de la Consolacion, and compelled them to assist in lifting rails and sleepers, and throwing them across the line, with the view of stopping the train or running it off the rails. As the train announced its approach, the bandits compelled the guards to signal it to stop. Owing, however, to its great velocity it could not be stopped in time, and it entered on the broken ground, throwing the carriages off the line with a great shock. Judge of the terror of the travellers on feeling the shock of the train running off the rails, placing their lives in danger and at the same time on hearing shots, curses, oaths and cries. They were menaced by guns pointed at them through the windows, and those who jumped out were forced to remount by threats and blows.

What happened in front is as follows: The bandits, seeing that the train continued moving after the order to stop, because it was impossible to check it at once, fired two shots at the driver and stoker, who, seeing the danger they were incurring, jumped off the engine. The stoker took refuge in one of the first coaches. The driver ran to ask help at another, where he knew there were two Civil Guards, who, being off duty and bound for Madrid, were seated amongst the passengers. These two instantly complied with their duty. One of them, a corporal, fired his gun, and then shut himself up in the cloak. The other jumped out the moment he was called, preceded by a young lieutenant of infantry who, drawing his sword, cried out "At them!" and attacked the thieves vigorously. They received him with a volley, and he fell to the ground wounded by a ball in the shoulder. Six of the bandits threw themselves upon him and upon the Civil Guard, and did not let them go till the robbery was completed.

Meantime the corporal fired his gun two or three times, and the bandits, seeing he was in the break, mounted it, and fired five or six shots through the lamp-hole, two of which disabled his gun, and another struck him in the left eye, and caused him to fall to the floor. Another misfortune occurred to one of the passengers, a young comic actor, who jumped off the train at the time it ran off the line. Because he did not get back to his carriage so quickly as the bandits thought he might, they fired a musket at him, and the contents lodged in his body.

All resistance having ceased, the robbers commenced to tranquilize the passengers, crying out to them that they need fear nothing, as they only wanted the money. All the passengers remained in their carriages, expecting every moment that the assailants would come and rob them. For half an hour there reigned a sepulchral silence in the train only broken by the wind and the voices of the thieves, whose whole attention was given to examining the van. Another half hour passed, and then they heard a whistle and a voice, which said "fuera!" (away) and the robbers mad off. Of those who saw them go, some say they went on foot, others say on horseback, but all agreed that they went in the direction of the Sierra Morena. After their departure the passengers left the carriages and learnt that their assailants had only taken some 40,000 or 50,760, money of the company and on freight (£400 to £500).

A special train from Manzanares brought down the engineer and the doctor of the company, and carried the passengers on, after seven hours' detention. Of the wounded it is feared that the Civil Guard will lose his eye. The lieutenant's wound is not dangerous. The unfortunate actors life was nearly gone when the train left him at Manzanares. He has since died.

It is said that the Bandits are the same as have appeared lately in the mountains of Toledo. Their chief is a young man of about 24 years of age, of agreeable appearance and distinguished manners. He rigorously ordered his men not to molest the passengers more than was absolutely necessary; and the Civil Guard, who had fought personally with him and had fallen wounded, owed his life to him, as he prevented one of his band from killing him outright.

On board the Cassini were too cages, one containing four performing lions and the other three half-grown cubs, in charge of Isaac Haight. They had been leased by Isaac Robinson to C. W. Mapes' show-men and we were being brought to the city from Texas. They were worth about $15,000. Frank Williams asked Haight if he could not do something for the animals, as their pitiful cries were terrible to hear, and when the latter said he was the lucky one to go to them, Williams put the keys of the cage, but the best that he could to persuade him to remain on board, as they were bound to death. They made no noise when the flames disappeared although I expected they would very

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

BERLIN, April 23—Princess Victoria, wife of Prince Frederick William, has been safely delivered of a daughter.

PARIS, April 23—President Thiers is confined to his house by a cold. The nomination of a Minister to Washington will again be deferred.

NEW YORK, April 24—The Rope and Twine works of A. H. Hart & Co. were burned this afternoon. Loss $150,000 including $75,000 on the machinery, covered by insurance.

LONDON, April 23—The Attorney-General has consented to the release of the Tichborne claimant on bail, but the necessary forms of law to secure the liberation of the prisoner have not yet been complied with.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 23—Parties arriving from Portland, Oregon, and Sitka, Alaska, report great excitement in that region on account of the discovery of rich silver mines within half a mile of the town, and of rich gold and silver mines in other places on the adjacent coast.

LONDON, April 23—It is now believed that the steamer Ispahan, which left Bombay in January for this city, and which has not been heard from since leaving Malta on the 13th of February, foundered off Brest, France, during a terrible gale. Fifty persons who were on board the Ispahan are supposed to have gone down with the steamer.

LONDON, April 23—In Parliament today Earl Granville and Mr Gladstone stated that it would be incompatible with the public interest to declare the intentions of the Government with regard to the further proceedings before the Geneva Board until an answer to Earl Granville's despatch of March 20 had been received from the United States.

GOLD FEVER ON THE PACIFIC COAST.—The gold fever is raging with extraordinary virulence in the Pacific States, and there is every indication of it raging upon British Columbia. It has been caused chiefly by the discovery of rich deposits in Nevada; and mining experts are of opinion that the veins become wider and therefore richer as they approach the ocean. The value of the Comstock Mines, Nevada; according to the rating of the 11th inst., approaches $50,000,000. The Crown Point Mine in the same territory is selling at the surface rate of $20 000 per square foot. The Gold Hill Enterprise says that all the tracks along the line of the Connecticut have advanced in the aggregate fully thirty per cent during the past six weeks, and that the capitalists of California and Nevada are seeking investments in them at the rate of millions of dollars daily. On the other hand, some of the California papers consider the excitement fictitious, and predict a huge crash before long.

ENGLISH ROYALTY IN ROME.—The visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Rome, and their interview with His Holiness the Pope, are described as being remarkably interesting. The Prince captivated the hearts of the Pope's attendants by refusing to enter the gates of the Vatican in Victor Emmanuel's carriage. After mutual congratulations, His Holiness spoke of the instability of royal houses, but remarked to the Prince, "Yours is safely anchored in the affections of a wise people." On the Prince smiling at the Pope's statements regarding the spread of Catholicity in England, His Holiness laid his hands on the shoulders of the royal couple and said:—"Ah, my children, the future has always strange surprises in store for us. Who, two years ago, would have imagined that we should see a Prussian army in France! I venture to say your wisest heads thought a thousand times more likely that the Pope would be at Malta than the Emperor Napoleon in London. And yet, you see, I am stripped of my territories, it is true; but God, who temporarily takes away dominions, can return it an hundred fold. In the dynasty of the head of the Church less secure I may be driven out for a time, but when your children come to make visits to Rome, they will still, whatever his temporal sway be greater or less, see, as you do to-day, an old man robed in white, pointing the way to heaven to hundreds of millions of human consciences. If he have not subjects near home, he will have hearts far away and everywhere."

THE NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The London Times, of the 4th inst., in commenting on the appointment of Lord Dufferin to the Governor-Generalship of Canada, says:—"The Governor-General of a great colony has a singular composite character. He is something of a constitutional King, something of a Prime Minister, something of a Home Secretary, and last, not least, something of a hospitable country gentleman. Few public men could be named who are more likely to sustain these various characters with ease than Lord Dufferin; and his chief difficulty will be that his friends have formed already very high expectations of his success." The Times, with that misapprehension of Canada and Canada's climate which extensively prevails in the old country, wanders into something about "high latitudes," of which more anon.

The announcement of the British guarantee of two millions and a half is favourably received here among all classes of politicians. It is regarded as at least an actual equivalent for all our losses and expenses by Fenian raids, and as worth, pecuniarily, double the amount that the Fenian claims would have realised had they been admitted for adjudication at Geneva. The position of Ministers with regard to the fishery clauses is equally approved of. The friends of British connection are enraptured with this new proof of the difficulty that Annexationists and Independents will have in severing Imperial and Canadian interests, while all are eager for the enlargement of our canals and for railway communication with the western Provinces, and hail with delight the immediate prospect of both works being commenced at an early day. The triumph of Ministers is in fact complete.

A CENTENARIAN.—There is at present residing in Huddersfield, a hawker, named John Rowberry, who was born in April, 1769, and will, therefore, be 103 years of age next month. He is the father of 22 children, all of whom are buried in Leeds, the last being 81 years of age when he died. The old man was born at Whitby, and it is said that all the inhabitants in possession at the present time of the name of Rowberry are his lineal descendants.—He is short in stature, but remarkably hearty for his age. A few years ago he was quite blind, but is now able to see with the aid of spectacles, though his blindness comes over him at night. He seeks no charity, but obtains a livelihood from selling writing paper. On applying for his last teacher's license, it was granted to him free of charge.

A strike has taken place in St. Catharines among the printers who call for an advance in their wages. The demand was by the society work, and the employers say that the managers of the offices must decide with the proprietors what wages are to be paid. The matter is now in the hands of the Typographical Union, and it is expected that the difficulty will be settled.

THE TICHBORNE CASE.—There was much festivity at Cavercroft on the occasion of the release from jail of Mr. and Mrs. Radcliffe and Lady Doughty, after three days of the great Tichborne case. At the entrance to Cavercroft Castle, the seat of Mr. Radcliffe, there were triumphant arches the village bells rang merrily, there was gunpowdering, dining, general festivities, and a display of fireworks. The public is prone to consider that the huge cost of the Tichborne trial goes intact into the pockets of the lawyers. As far as counsel is concerned, it is believed the fees paid in defence constitute somewhat less than one fifth of the expenditure. The Attorney General received £6,000, Mr. Hawkins, Q C., rather more than £5 000. And so on in proportion.—London Daily News.

COPPER MINING IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.—The Montreal Herald mentions the rather important fact that a number of capitalists of Glasgow, Scotland, have bought a copper mine in the Eastern Townships known as the Huntington mine for the sum of £125,000 stg. The same parties have also authorized Mr. Huntington to buy other properties of the same class in that locality. A company has been formed to develop the above mine with a capital of £200,000 all of which was taken up at once on the opening of the stock books and five times as much more applied for; the shares at once rose to 50 premium. Men and machinery will be sent out on the opening of navigation to work the property.

LIVINGSTONE'S FATE.—There is something rather dismal in the explanation given by the Rev. Robert Moffatt, the African missionary, in a lecture at Hyde, the other day, with reference to his son-in-law, Dr. Livingstone. Mr. Moffatt considered that the missing explorer is quite safe, but is staying at the head quarters of some chief, who believes him a person of importance, and is entertaining him until resources are supplied. The motive for this hospitality, the lecturer said, is the hope of payment by the Doctor's friends. If, he added, Livingstone were dead, the fact would have been known before now. This is hardly logical; for why, if he were alive, would not that fact be also known? Nay, one would think that if he were out of supplies, and could not proceed, and the said chief wanted to obtain a reward, efforts would be made to communicate it tellingly to the nearest point of civilization. Of course it may be said that Mr. Moffatt's great experience in African exploration, and his acquaintance with the natives, should give great weight to his opinion. On the other hand, the fact that he can frame no other theory than that offered, is, to our thinking, an indication that he really feels the case to be almost hopeless. It is most probable that the majority of those interested in the subject are of the same way of thinking, and expect at best to arrive some day at some conclusions as to the place and manner of Dr. Livingstone's decease.

THE "PERUVIAN" DISASTER.—The long and almost unbroken period of prosperity and freedom from disaster enjoyed by the Allan line of steamships—after their unexampled reverses—has received a slight check in the grounding of the Peruvian, reported by our Halifax correspondent. It appears this fine vessel was entering Halifax harbour on Friday evening, when she ran on the Thrump Cap, and remained there for nearly three hours subject to a heavy swell. Fortunately what might have been a great disaster was averted by prompt assistance and energetic action, and the vessel was soon hauled away from her dangerous position; and as the injuries sustained are not serious, it is stated that she will continue the voyage to Baltimore. A pilot was in charge at the time, and consequently the accident cannot be charged to any of the officers. The "Peruvian," though now rating several cuts, was some years ago the finest ship in the Allan line, and is still a favorite with many.

THE LADY'S FRIEND. The publishers of the Ladies Friend have concluded to reduce its price to a single subscribers from $2.50 to $2—the prices to Clubs (already very low) remaining the same. The following novelets, with the usual variety of short stories, are announced for 1872 Mrs. Woods novelet will run through the whole year. "Within the maze; or, Lady Andinnian's trial". By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," ecc.; "Una and her Lions," by Miss A. L. Muzzey, author of "One Woman's Experience," "Jealousy," etc., etc., Queen Coquette; by Daisy Ventin author of "Prince Charming," &c only a wish. By A. M. Dana, author of "Jarring Chords." etc., etc., Mission work; by Mrs. Margaret Hosmer, author of "A Turn Fortune's Wheel,"etc., etc.

ENGRAVINGS.—The engravings of The Lady's Friend are of a very superior character. They embrace beautiful pictures of subjects which touch the sentiments and affections, illustrations of our Novelets and Stories, illustrations of the Fashions, (including cut from which patterns for almost everything can be ordered at a low price,) illustrations of Ladies Fancy Work. etc.

MUSIC.—A piece of the latest and most fashionable music accompanies every number. The music is of itself worth the price of the magazine.

In short. The Ladies Friend aims to be, and its proprietors thing it is, the most refined, beautiful and interesting of the Magazines—being in Cover, Engraving, and contents just what a lady's magazine should be.

TERMS.—$2 a year; FOUR copies, $7; Eight copies (and one gratis), $12.—One copy of The Lady's Friend ($2) and one of The Post ($2.50) for $4.

Address,—DEACON & PETERSON,
No. 319 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

HEARTH AND HOME. A very valuable number of Hearth and Home for April 20 is before us. Besides several fine engravings, and the usual good assortment of excellent reading for all departments of the household, Supplement in this number given on account of a four years' Libel Suit brought against the Publishers for exposing humbugs, in which the important rulings of Judge Brady, of the New York Supreme Court, and the testimony of leading physicians take advanced ground in regard to responsibility of manufacturers and dealers in patent medicines. This will be especially interesting, not only to Lawyers, Physicians, and Druggists, but all who buy and use medicines, and to those who have been swindled by humbugs. A prominent feature, however, of this number of Hearth and Home is the New story by Dr. Eggleston author of the "Hoosier School Master". The New story is entitled "The End of the World," illustrating life and times in the Western Reserve ago. It is confidently believed that this will be one of the most attractive and useful American Stories yet brought out. Get this number especially, either off your newsman, or send a dime and get a post paid copy from the Publishers, ORANGE JUDD & CO., 245 Broadway, N. Y.

NEW DOMINION MONTHLY.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1872.

This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. It aims at being a Canadian Magazine, both in the character of its matter, and in opening the way for Canadian writers. In the latter field it has up to the present been a failure, so far as remunerating its contributors and its publishers is concerned; but as its circulation is fair, we are in hopes that a good advertising patronage may yet put it on paying basis. We do not our Canadian homes can find elsewhere, so interesting and so Canadian, and we ask all Canadians to encourage it. Its circulation is 2,500. New Dominion Monthly 1,50 *per annum in advance. Wife to Husband—(Entering the Pain-Killer on his sore, rheumatic shoulder beforehand). Its a great pity such a good medicine as Perry Davis' Pain-Killer is not more extensively used, just see what a world of good it has done even since you have had it. George don't have the toothache any more, it has saved Fredy a severe attack of Dyspepsia, and I know it will relieve you of Rheumatism.

Husband—Now am right Mary, why Pain-Killer undoubtedly has by the most extensive manufacturer and put new life into it, it certainly does not instantaneously, I do think my dear, I am cured already (meaningly) well, well, all I have heard said of it is true, my daughter is free from pain the first time for three months.

Wife:—It is strange, we never have been induced to try it before, I should have thought you would have been often advised to try it.

Husband:—I have had the PAIN-KILLER recommended many times but between the Doctors and Druggists they have always succeeded in keeping me from using it by supplying other trash that has done me no good.

Wife:—Fredy come to enjoy yourself with Daddy five or ten Dollars every now and then to experiment on them, when a twenty five cent Bottle of PAIN-KILLER would give them for more relief, and the Druggists are so obliging it is very hard to say if want Perry Davis' Pain-Killer and nothing else will do, they have taken honey thats tooth.

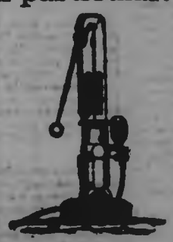
Pumps, Reapers & Mowers

To the Public in General, and Farmers in particular.

PUMPS. MACHINES



HENRY OWENS

Begs leave to bring to your notice once more his truly celebrated SWING and FORCE PUMPS, which have already received the Provincial First Prizes, and have hitherto met with unparalleled success. There can be no reasonable doubt now after a years trial of the superiority of this pump over all others. H. O. has purchased the sole right under four patents, for the counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and will keep a large stock on hand if possible, which he will sell at very cheap rate. He has learned his fashionable profession, and having lately added to his machinery a new and first-class pump boring machine. Every thing in the pump line can be furnished on the shortest notice, and Repairs carefully and promptly attended to. Parties ordering Pumps will also state depth of well and all other necessary particulars.

Also a saw in the field with REAPERS and MOWERS, and would respectfully call the attention of Farmers to the fact that as the Reapers and Mowers he has sold during the past three years have given universal satisfaction. He will have on hand this year Wood's Self-Rake Reapers and Mowers, Adams, Osborne Mowers, and Johnston's Self-Rake Reapers, and any other machine of this description that may be required can be furnished by him on very short notice. Parties intending to purchase Reapers or Mowers this coming season will find it to their advantage to give their orders before purchasing, as up to that date he is selling at the same prices as last years prices; but on account of the rise in iron &c., prices will be raised about 10 per cent. after Machines to be sent at my risk.

☞ COMMON SENSE AS CHEAP AS OTHERS. ☜

HENRY OWENS gladly avails himself of this opportunity to return sincere thanks to those friends who have so kindly and liberally extended their patronage to him during the past few years, and he hopes by honest and energetic attention to such orders as he may be favored with in the future, to receive a continuance of the same.

Peterborough, April 8th, 1872.

Select Poetry.

The Old Wash and Dry.

I've just come in from the meadow, wife,
where the grass is tall and green;
I hoisted out upon my cane to see John's new machine;
'n made my old eyes sore with the shower
of mower meat,
And I heaved a sigh for the scythe I swung some twenty years ago

Many and many's the day I've mowed, 'neath
the rays of the scorching sun,
Till I thought my poor old back would break or ever my task was done;
I often think of those days of toil, in the field
all over the farm,
Till I feel the sweat on my wrinkled brow, and the old pain come in my arm.

It was hard work, it was slow work, a swing-
in' the old sythe a-thee;
Unlike the mower that goes through the grass like death through the ranks of men.
I stood and I ached till my old eyes ached, amazed at its speed and power;
The work that it took me a day to do, it does in one short hour

John said I hadn't ought the half; when he puts it into his wheat
I shall see it reap and rake it, and drop it in bundles neat;
That o-- Yankee will come along and get to work and learn
To cut and thread it, and bag it up, and send it into the barn.

John kinder laughed when he said it, but I said to the blood mon,
"I have seen a much on my pilgrimage through my three score years and ten,
That I wouldn't be surprised to see a railroad in the air,
Or a Yankee in a flyin' ship, agoing most any where."

There's a difference in the work I done, and the work my boys now do;
In a mowin' the grass the old way and a mowin' it in the new,
But somehow, I think there was happiness crowded into them toiling days,
That the fast rushing men of the present will not see till they change their ways.

To think that I ever should live to see work done in his wonderful way!
Old tools are of little service now, and farm-
in' is almost play;
The women have got their sewin' machines,
their wringers and every cloth thing,
And now play croquet in the dooryard, or sit in the parlor and sing.

'Twasn't you that had it so easy, wife, in the days so long gone by,
You rise early and set up late a tellin' for you and I;
There we come to milk, there was bread to make, and many a day did you stand
A washin' my soil-stained garments and wringin' 'em out by hand.

Ah, wife our children will never see the hard work we have seen,
For the heavy task and the long task is well done with a machine;
No longer the noise of the cradle I hear, the mower—there! Hear it afar!
A rattlin' along through the tall, green grass with the noise of a railroad car.

Well, the old tools now are shoved away, they stand a gatherin' dust,
Like many an old man I have seen put aside
with only a crust;
When their eyes grow dim, when the step is weak, when the strength is in his arm,
'Tis becoming a poor old man can do is to hold the deed of his farm.

There is one way that they can't improve,
although it has been tried
By men who have studied, and studied, and worried until they died.
It has stone, unadorned for ages, they gathered from dross,
It's the way to the Kingdom of Heaven, by the simple way of the Cross.

Are Onions Healthful?

A physician has forwarded the following to the New York Farmers' Club:

On shipboard at New Orleans in the year 1849, in charge of one hundred marines, with cholera among them, I observed that those who ate freely of onions, supposing them to be healthy, were attacked certainly and fatally; onions and salt cured the bite of a rattlesnake on my son, and are considered specific in all snake bites. I have found four separate witnesses of phenomena connected with small-pox and fever.

1. Onions in rooms with small-pox rot rapidly.
2. Blisters rise in them.
3. They retain and communicate the virus many weeks after the epidemic has subsided.
4. Applied to the feet of fever patients they rapidly turn black.
5. They prevent the spread of small-pox in thickly populated tenements by absorbing the virus.
6. A man with hydrophobia, in his frenzy, ate voraciously of onions, and recovered.

From all these facts may be deduced:

1. That onions should not be eaten when there is a prevailing epidemic.
2. That onions sliced and frequently changed are good disinfectants.
3. That experiments should be made to test the extent of their usefulness. For many years I have opposed vaccinations as carelessly done, and hence hail with satisfaction any means of mitigating the virus of the distemper.

Spring Pruning.

Discussion before the Alton Horticultural Society.

Dr. Hull—From the Committee on Orchards: Pruning is at time the most important operation, and in doing this care should be taken to avoid a practice that was very general, viz.: where two limbs join, the union is somewhat imperfect, and if one is cut away close to the bark of the other, the one remaining is very liable to break off at that point. To prevent this, let the limb be long so that no part of the limb shall be injured by the cutting. This applies to peaches more particularly. Prune early, thereby wasting none of the energies of the tree. Blooms exhaust, early pruning saves the most of excessive bloom-ing. After allowing time for the cut surfaces to become dry, paint them with any common linseed oil paint. Rot existed in orchards last summer, the grubs are in our orchards now. It may be found on the bark under the gum. He would recommend that the trunks of the trees be washed with strong potash water, and the tree be dusted with lime. Prune close; reduce to what is probably needed for a crop. Tender young wood growth will cause the newly set trees to die; hence, care is needed to guard against that may occur.

Stewart—Would you paint all the limbs? Those whose location is such as not to obtain water would seem not to need it.

Hull—Paint all. The action of the sap dries the limb, and thus aids its ripening.

Pratt—From committee on Ornamental Planting: Has trimmed soft maples at all seasons of the year, except when in leaf, and then always bleed.

Hull—Will not bleed if pruned when in leaf. All deciduous trees must be planted early. The tulip and the chestnut should have the first attention. These varieties are difficult to manage. Cut them to the earth and cover the stump with a little earth, and a sprout that grows will soon make a fine tree.

Langdon—Never prune early, but after the leaves are well grown or early in the fall.

Pearse—Pruned my fall and the trees have died through the winter and are bleeding now. Does not like to prune when in leaf.

Long—Has had no trouble with maples, prunes late in the summer.

Hills—There is a time when the foliage is perfected as to moisture. At that time it is more known, it would be the best for pruning. Would the chairman recommend the pruning at this time?

Pearse—After some hesitation said it did not know of any time to take the place of the first class, but as they are always quick growers, they should be pruned.

Hollister—Why prune in those months at all? He had succeeded with it greatly better than his neighbors who pruned.—Alton Telegraph.

Ice a Cut.

Not a railroad ticket, madame, I want to know if you would like to insure your life against accidents.

She's been married two years and a half, and that's the first child. It's a nail.

Agent, still louder:

Do for heaven's sake, madam, don't you want to insure your life against accidents?

She's got along first-rate, and is doing-as well as can be expected.

Agent, at the top of his voice:

I'm an insurance agent madam, can't I insure your life against accidents?

Oh, I didn't understand you, said the old lady. No, her name is Johnson, my name is Brown, and I live five miles from Kenosha.

The Old-Fashioned Mother.

Thank God I come of no race have an old-fashioned mother. Not a woman of the period, enfeebled and painted with her great chignon, her curls and tassels, whose white-frosted head never knew fire the clasp of tasty fingers; but a dear, old-fashioned sweet-voiced mother, with eyes in whose clear depth the love light shone, and brown hair threaded with silver, lying smooth upon her faded cheek. Those dear hands worn with toil, gently guided our tottering steps in childhood, and smoothed our pillow in sickness, even working out to us the [illegible] river. Blessed be the memory of an old fashioned mother. It forms to me now, like the beautiful perfume of some sweetness blossome. The tones of some voices may be lost, but the entrancing memory of her will echo in our souls forever. Other loves will fade away and be forgotten, but her's will shine on until light from heaven's pinnacle shall gloomy consume.

When in the fitful pauses of busy life our feet wander back to the old homestead, [illegible] worn threshold, the quaint room, how the [illegible] kindness and dependance comes over us, and we kneel down in the moulter-ing [illegible] streaming through the western window—just where, long years ago, we knelt to say our [illegible] Lord's Prayer. Then the tempter lured us on has the memory of those sacred hours, that mother's words, her faith and prayers, saved us from plunging [illegible] of sin! Years have [illegible] her [illegible], but [illegible] our sight the glory of her pure, unselfish love.

The Two Bootblacks.

During a slight fall of [illegible] the other day two little bootblacks, one white and one black, were scrubbing on a corner doing nothing, when the white bootblack agreed to attack the black bootblack's boots. [illegible] to have his boots blacked by his fellow bootblack, and the bootblack who agreed to black the black bootblack's boots went to work. When the bootblack had blacked one of the black bootblack's boots till it shone in a manner that would make any bootblack proud, this bootblack who had agreed to black the black bootblack's boots refused to black the other boot. If the black bootblack until the black bootblack, who had consented to have the white bootblack black his boots, should add five cents to the amount the white bootblack had made blacking other men's boots. This the boot black whose boot had been blacked refused to do, saying it was good enough for a black bootblack to have one boot black, and he didn't care whether the owner of the boot black hadn't blacked or not. This made the boot black who had blacked the black bootblack's boot as angry as a boot black often gets, and he vented his black wrath by spitting upon the blacked boot of the black boot black. This roused the latent passions of the black bootblack, and he proceeded to beat the white bootblack with the boot the white bootblack had blacked. A fight then ensued, in which the [illegible] of the blacked the black bootblack overwhelmingly organizing in which the black bootblack wore all the blacking off his boot in tooting the white bootblack. The fraternity of bootblacks denounced the action of the white boot black as one of the blackest in the pages of the book [illegible].

'Do you not know, said a teacher to a pupil, 'that old age is to be respected?' 'Yes,' That, I suppose,' replied the boy, 'depends on whether the term is applied to the human race or to poultry.'

'This world is all a fleeting show,' said a clergyman to the bride, as she stood at the altar. 'I know it,' said she, 'but it's a show I've always been fond of, and I'd like to see it a little longer yet.'

Somebody once asked Tom Corwin if he did not [illegible] a certain party of [illegible] Campbells. 'Was it about himself?' inquired Mr. Corwin. 'No, I believe not.' 'Well, then, I never heard it.' Said Mr. Corwin, gravely.

BRYAN'S WAFERS, (The great public remedy.) have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that it is on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced [illegible] the authorities of the [illegible] to be a sure, harmless and domestic salutary preparation, and if taken in time will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throats, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will prove [illegible] for sale by all [illegible] dealers, [illegible] &c. per box.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS—Purifies the Blood, Regulates the Liver, Stomach, Bowels and Kidneys, and gives new life and vigor to the whole system. For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or the turn of life, these Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible. For Purifying the Blood, they have no equal. Truly it is a "Good Blood Purifier." Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

THE BODY USED IT.—And all cried, that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the best medicine for the instant and permanent relief of pain from the system, ever produced. It acts as a general alterative, thus removing the cause of the disease, and [illegible] the action of the system. For [illegible] it is recommended as [illegible] to equal. Truly it is a "good Blood Purifier." Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

CHILLICOTHE.—Many persons neglect their horses health and condition until it is [illegible] when at a trifling expense and no [illegible] might have been saved it. [illegible]—To all who may have occasion to use an article of the kind, we would confidently recommend "Taylor's Condition Powders," or "Nerve Remedy;" it is a safe, sure and reliable preparation in use, as thousands who have used it testify. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hand & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A case of chronic rheumatism of unusual severity cured by "Johnson Anodyne Liniment." It penetrates and relieves every part. A large bunch came out on the breast of the sufferer, and appeared like part of the breast bone.

Married ladies, under all circumstances, will find "Parsen's Purgative Pills" safe and, in small doses, a mild cathartic. They cause no griping pains or cramps.

THAT IRON IS VALUABLE AS A MEDICINE has long been known, but it is only since [illegible] Peruvian Syrup that its full power over disease has been brought to light. Inactive, its combination with [illegible] and healthy in action, enlivened by any of the above named maladies, [illegible] upon their approach.

NEW LAW FIRM.—Our readers will see the advertisement of Messrs. Boultbee & Fairbairn, Barristers, &c., who are now practising in Scott's Block, Peterboro.

We understand that the prospect for building this year is greater than at any time in the past history of Peterboro.'—All civil mechanics are busy, and our machine shops are perfect hives of industry. If any good citizens who have plenty of money will only go in for house-building, we will go on and prosper; the population in Canada has better facilities or the best hopes for the future.

Several Dogs terrorizing the locality of Mr. Hall's Mill, Otonabee, have been killed by the owners of sheep, and we hope that the remainder will be dealt with in the same manner. Any dog found worrying sheep should be shot at once. Pittsburgh, and we are therefore the more anxious that he shall do himself justice, and not speedily overtask himself again.

The Proprietor of this paper is regaining strength, and hopes soon to be able to resume his labors. His illness is another warning against trying to beat sickness by stubbornly refusing to yield, when nature calls for rest and nursing.

The Ratepayers of Peterborough are respectfully requested to meet in the Council Chamber, at four o'clock, on Friday afternoon, to discuss matters of importance affecting our Railway interests.

A meeting of the Maple Leaf Cricket Club will be held in Mr. Johnston's Shop, Water Street, on Monday, 6th of May. We hope to see a large attendance as business of importance will be brought before the meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterboro Cricket Club will be held in Turver's Hotel, on Tuesday, 7th inst. A large attendance is desirable, as important business will be submitted

The Committee of the Protestant House acknowledge with many thanks the following donations for April. Mr. White, a piece of Beef; Mr. Winch, quarter of Veal; Mrs. Robt. Hamilton, parcel of Clothing; Mrs. Thompson, Preserves and a Cake, Mrs. Wellis, a parcel of Blankets, Counterpanes, &c., Miss Roger, Yarn for Stockings, Mr. Ed. Davis, Otonabee, $2.

We regret to say that this day weather, with the hot sun by day and severe frost by night during last week, have worked the destruction of much of the fall wheat in this neighborhood. Many of our farmers are ploughing up their fall wheat for spring sowing. It came out well from the bond of winter, and hopes of a fair crop were entertained, but its failure is another proof of the uncertainty of the farmers prospects.

Caution!—A musical entertainment will be given in the Music Hall, Peterborough, on Thursday, 2nd of May, by Miss Hilton and her little brother Freddy, assisted by their brother Charles. The programme will consist of the choice selection of pieces carefully prepared for the occasion, rendering, &c. The object is to assist Master and Miss Hilton in defraying expenses in connection with the Blind Institution in Hamilton, to which they expect shortly to go.

Mr. Rance, the Evangelist, who has laboured so successfully here during the last few weeks, was the recipient of a purse containing $200, presented by some of the ladies of the Wesleyan Church. Occasional remembrances from many hearts quickened to new life will follow Mr. Rance wherever he may go. It is hoped like blessings may follow his future ways and where.

A Western Agency:—On Tuesday evening last, a Committee appointed by the Official Board of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, waited upon the Rev. G. R. Dash at his house, and presented him with a handsome purse of Two hundred dollars, as an acknowledgment of the appreciation of the Congregation in the course of religion, and their respect for him as a Christian and a gentleman. Mr. Dash has been stationed here during the last three years, and during that time has gained the esteem of all classes of the community by his unbiassed kind and gentlemanly manner towards all who with whom he came in contact.

FIRE PREVENTION.—Would it not be well to get a light hand Fire Engine to supplement the Steamer? The old engine is hard to work, and heavy. One of half the capacity would render eminent service. It might be kept in some other part of the town under the supervision of a fire company who would deem it a pleasure to render their service. There are many times when a small stream of water, if promptly applied, may prevent a large conflagration, and there are many occasions when a handy small engine could be used so as to allow the Steamer to follow up an advantage without making it necessary to withdraw it at an important moment to attend to some smaller fire which unchecked may do infinite mischief but which opportunely stopped may be harmless. We think the old engine altogether too heavy. There can be no enthusiasm in working it as it is to laborious. It might, however be disposed of, and a smaller one bought with the proceeds.

The Town Council of Lindsay have this year only 9 Salcons. The result is that many who formerly could not get credit for a dollar are to-day running from one to two days more wages in the week, and saving their money. The merchants get paid old bills which they counted in the profit and loss account.

In Peterboro we have 46 Taverns and Saloons. To keep them up, pay rent, taxes and expenses and support the host, or, at least $1,000 per annum is required. Just think of it! $46,000 of trade gone. How many homes we made miserable—how many untimely deaths invited—how many souls damned by these saloons.—Please that take your money, and give forth poison in return. And this is licensed by our Council, and $46 a year, part of the pleasing obtained for the Town.—Close up the Saloons—encourage industry, temperance and thrift—and take no longer a revenue from men who make their living by foolish suggestion, to drive away comfort, health and peace, and which bring wretchedness, ruin and death.

A COLD BATH.—Mr. Fortner of the Montreal Bank, and Mr. Colville lost student, while hunting on the river, inadvertently got too close to the dam at the locks, and were with their canoe carried over—they managed to get hold of their canoe and clung to it for their lives. The rapid current carried them a long way down the stream. Mr. R. A. Mowry with much spirit exerted his canoe around the dam and went to their rescue, while a man who saw them went to their relief with a punt. After being in the water till they were thoroughly chilled, they were rescued, and are now appreciating more the warm fire than ever. The little event will no doubt make them in future keep a more respectful distance from the dam. We are very happy that we are not called on to announce "an end case of drowning." Their many friends here, have not cousin to congratulate them on their escape.

COBOURG RAILWAY.

We understand there is to be a meeting of our citizens to confer as to the action to be taken to carry out successfully the extension from Cobourg to the North. We suggest that only half measures will succeed:

First be sure you are right, then go ahead. Let the people of the town and country be thoroughly aroused to the necessity of the extension. Let them be told that if they do not help it forward, it will be built without them—but they will have to pay it. If we are right, it would be of great benefit to connect with the Ottawa and Toronto Road, which is almost sure to be built. Their money is locked up and they are squeezing at leisure what they did in haste.

We congratulate our townsmen that they were saved from being taken in and done for by the Belleville scheme. The Ottawa and Toronto road is not going to its finish for ears' hence.—Our mind will effect is little—it is bound to go. Again we urge that for humber a direct route to the front is the true measure; and we should hazzard our strength in encouraging opening up of roads to the rear. Let us never forget this. The moment we cease to command the trade of the north, that moment we cease to prosper. That trade is yet in its infancy. We would aim at reaching the Ottawa waters if possible. Until we have a road there we will not be able to measure the immense value of the new material north of us. Go up to the meeting as one man; don't let sophists or men in whom you have but little confidence, again introduce to thwart your measures. Use your own better judgement and push your efforts until crowned with success.

Save Me From My Friends.

Some parties who took umbrage at our remarks about the late fire have rushed into print. One styling himself "A friend of the Steamer," says, "We had in until nearly twenty minutes before enough help arrived to get the engine out on the road." Another writer, "D. E., P." says, "It was just fifteen minutes after the engine reached the bridge before water was thrown.

Here is an admission that it took 35 minutes, and the time it took to get the engine from the house to the bridge, before water was thrown on a fire just six hundred feet from the engine house.

Is there anything to boast of in this?

We don't carp—But we don't think it is the duty of a journal, advocating the interests of the public, to call black white, to say that a fire brigade was well managed when it is not. Not so the Toronto papers dealt with the "Iron Block" fire. And it is not our purpose for the sake of saving any ones feelings, to wink at plausus or blunders. We admit that our firemen are brave and true, there are none better in the Dominion, but we say that they were not well officered, and the late fire demonstrated our position.

Twenty minutes to get an engine out! If the engine house floor were constructed on an incline, one man by kicking away a block could take out the engine.

Why is it not so made?

Why was the fire in the Steamer allowed to get nearly out by the time it reached the bridge?

Why was the largest nozzle on, when throwing water 1,000 feet, the smallest one was required?

Why were the couplings so "imperiously joined" when the hose lay on the ground so long waiting for water?

Why was it that the hose was not speedily and well filled with water?

All the mistakes above mentioned are admitted by the friends of the steamer. Why then, capture the knowledge of the many when one the censure, try to deny the demonstrable by us?

We are pleased to make every allowance for our brave fellows at this fault, after with the steamer, but if we can correct any mischief or prevent the recurrence of mistakes so fatal in their results, we shall not hesitate to point them out when they occur.

The Steamer did good service—the old hand engine could not have thrown the water at all—but how much better it would have done had it been well handled. We find no fault with the Steamer, the fault was not in the engine. it is capable of doing good service, and we hope that by the time our brave fellows get a little more used to it, that it will be found sufficient to save us from the fire demon.

A Lecture on Canada, Reviewed.

Our attention was drawn a day or two ago to a number of a Scottish Newspaper called the "Alloa Advertiser" of the 27th February last, in which appears the report of a Lecture delivered in the Townhead U. P. Church, by Rev. Mr. McDowall, senior Pastor of the Congregation of that Church.

It would be very difficult indeed to find so many false statements, so much buncombe ignorance, prejudice, and nonsense crowded into one lecture as in this.

It appears that the Rev. Gentleman has paid a flying visit to America, and on his return must enlighten his friends upon what he has seen and heard. We sometimes are astonished to learn that in the Mother Country there is so much profound ignorance of Canada, lying as it does almost at her very doors. But such lectures explain the mystery.

Here is a man occupying a high position in society, "a man of letters and of manners too," as fact as delivering lectures, and for aught we know, able and fluent as a preacher. We know nothing whatever of the good town of Alloa, men of its locality—never so much as having heard its multifarious appellation till a day or two since.—We are led to the belief that it is an out of the road place, and its inhabitants anything but enlightened, or they never could listen to such misrepresentations from a clerical lecturer. Alloa would have been stopped in a short time. None but a fool would make himself ridiculous, by stating matters he knows nothing about. What pray does this wiseacre know of our form of Government, of our standard, "religion, education, politics, home life, and personal character?" Just what Mr. A, B, or C might tell him while running along the railroads. And in almost every particular he is wrong. We must however give a few extracts to show his ignorance and blundering. Speaking of Canada he says:

"The Government resembles that of Great Britain, the executive is vested in Governor General appointed by the Crown and assisted in his administration by an Executive Council, the members of which hold their seats for life unless forfeited by crime." That's news for "people at home." "The mode of proceeding in the Provincial Parliament is precisely the same as that followed by the Parliament of Great Britain."—wrong again.

"In Montreal," says our lecturer, "fully two half, and in Quebec two-thirds of the people are of French origin." In the former City it stands 63 to 90, in the latter 55 to 81. We must give another quotation to show the Rev. gentleman's extraordinary and rambling style.—"The only Provinces he visited were Ontario and Quebec, or Upper and Lower Canada, and to these he would confine his observations exclusively, and here the materials were so many and so diversified, that he would find a difficulty in the selection to choose either—in the former province the people were of several nationalities, but in the latter they were almost entirely of one race, and the religion of the majority was Roman Catholic." Ontario and Quebec, or Upper and Lower Canada, and to these he would confine his observations exclusively, and here the materials were so many and so diversified, that he would find a difficulty in the selection to choose either—in the former province the people were of several nationalities, but in the latter they were almost entirely of one race, and the religion of the majority was Roman Catholic." Upper Canada is almost entirely Protestant, and Lower Canada almost entirely Roman Catholic. Our lecturer has confined his map within one letter. The lion and the unicorn expanded.

We now come to the first topic under a new heading, and it is one interesting indeed. "There could be no national greatness and prosperity where the religion of the Bible did not be at the foundation. In upon a quarter of fact, though strange, that all the wanderings through Canada and the United States, journeyings of nearly 5,000 miles, he never met with a dissenter. In our own country of Great Britain, dissenters are to-do met with everywhere. The simple reason is because there are no dissenters in Canada, there was no Established Church, and consequently there could be no dissent from it. But they would bear in mind that Canada is but a young country and has not had much time to get properly settled and civilized!"

O dear, that it required the senior Pastor of the Townhead Church to leave home and travel to this country to make the good people aware of such important matters! No dissenters in America! No Established Church in Canada! But remember dear friends that Canada has not had time to get properly settled—she will have her State Church by and by, and then we shall have this species of bigotry yclept "dissenters." We wonder much if the children in Alloa have a school where history is taught! If so they might have enlightened the Rev. gentleman. Perhaps its possibly may have sometime heard or read of the Rebellion in Canada in 1837-38. If so does he know what caused it? We can tell him—it was the mad infatuation of clumsiness in Canada vainly striving to erect a State Church. It is not likely when the State Church has been thrashed down in Ireland, when notice of the work of demolition of State Churches in England and Scotland is given, that Canada which freed itself from the manacles prepared for it, will seek bondage again. Wake up friend McDowall, you are asleep yet, notwithstanding your long and hurried journeying. The glorious sun is fast advancing, when they shall not hurt nor destroy in all the holy mountain of God. When his rims and dominions flood from pole transmels of State Churchism, and all other isms injuriously imposed upon His people by prostitute tyrants, will together unite to take in the day of the Lord with shouts of victory. When the hoary and iniquitous system in Scotland and England call Young Canada, being since emancipated from the fetters, will send over a deputation to hold jubilee and assist in the rejoicings of the free.

Another extract—"The great prevailing body of christians in the Western Province is the Presbyterian."—wrong again. Presbyterians of all names, stand the third in both Provinces. Not having the last census we will use that of 1861. In Upper Canada Methodists number 341,572, English 311,565, Presbyterians 308,394. In Lower Canada Roman Catholic 942,734, English 63,322, Presbyterian 45,697. Take a note of this Mr. McDowall and correct your blunders. He says—"The Free Church and the United Presbyterian Church are united and have Universities of their own."—wrong again. They have no Universities. The Presbyterians in connection with the Church of Scotland only have one University, they have Queen's College Kingston.

The subject of education is touched upon, and he is pleased to speak commendably of it. His cause, however, for general education and the source of the school fund, are astray.

Now for politics—"The topic," says our censor, "is a very easy and simple one, and soon discussed. As the word politics came from a Greek word signifying a city, he might refer for a moment to the cities of Canada, Woodstock, Paris, Hamilton, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, &c." We never heard the first two called cities before—they are but towns. "The inhabitants of these cities are generally speaking sober and industrious. Some public buildings in them would be an ornament to any city in Britain. In many cases the streets were badly paved, or rather they should say not paved at all. The goose and pigs frequently enjoy the full privileges of citizenship, but 'Rome was not built in a day,' and remembering that the country is a new one, they must not wonder that municipal machinery was not absolutely perfect."

It is amusing to follow this rambling and incoherent speaker, but painful to notice his falsehoods in every subject he touches anent Canada. Had he shut his eyes when travelling, and observed silence, when he returned he would have served the cause of truth better than by lecturing. As it is, he has done more to injure himself, in the eyes of Canadians, than he can repair. The fact is he knows nothing of us or our country.

How long would one have to travel in Canada before he would hear a domestic servant called a "help."

In Canada West again, says the Rev. Lecturer—"The population are mostly of Scotch descent." Why there are nearly two kilts for one Scotch. The figures of 1861 are as follows—Irish 191,281, English 174,290, Scotch 93,792. So much for Mr. McDowall's veracity. He must surely be more Scottish himself than any Scotch in Canada or anywhere else.

We could point out a vast deal more of inconsistencies and blunders in this lecture, but we fear we have tired out our readers already. Should, however, the Rev. gentleman turn up again, we may strive to put him right in a different task, however, with one who is so thoroughly astray.

We trust he is a better student of theology, than of political economy, or, of moral philosophy. In fact we fear he is at sea in theology, of it teaches—"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Which our Divine has disobeyed.

In the city of Washington, were a few years ago colored women were bought and sold under sanction of law; a woman of African descent has been appointed a Justice of the Peace of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. This Governor Sumner recommended his action by offering one hundred dollars for information as to the last "nigger" in Virginia. On Tuesday afternoon Miss Charlotte E. Ray made her appearance in the Clerk's office, and presented a sign from the late College of Howard University requesting a certificate which would entitle her to practice. Her case having passed the examination she was duly sworn and furnished with the desired document. Miss Ray is a dashing mulatto, possessing quite an intelligent countenance. She has the honor of being the first lady lawyer in Washington.—N. Y. Sun.

A Telegram from Washington announces that a bill passed the Senate yesterday to lay that on and after the first of July next, all letter shall be prepaid on the two cents, and that they shall upon and after the first of January next be reduced. This is gratifying news all two and cents debased.

The Condition of the South.

Seven years have passed since the cessation of the American civil war; and it might have been supposed that in this time great progress would be shown in the effort to restore the Union. The theory of the Federal Government was and is now that of a fraternal union of the several States; but the practical treatment of the South is that of a conquered territory. The control of affairs in the various States has been handed over to a clean of ignorant coonskin from the North, called "carpet-baggers," and the still more ignorant blacks just emancipated; while the educated native whites who are more particularly interested in the welfare of the country have been disfranchised. What effect this arrangement has had on the social condition of the people it is, of course, difficult for those at a distance to say. But there are some facts brought out in figures, in regard to which there can be no doubt. The property of the eleven States in 1860, exclusive of slaves, was valued at $3,726,825,006. At the end of the war their increased liabilities and loss, exclusive of slaves, was $1,272,900,390. This, however, was only the State loss. Secretary Belknap fixes the rebel debt, on the 1st of April, 1865, at $2,345,707,823, making the total loss of the rebellious States by the war $5,262,302,554. This sum, it will be seen, is about twice the assessed value of all Southern property in 1860, exclusive of slaves. Five-eighths of Southern property is gone, and the taxes upon the remainder are four times that upon the original property, before the war. This, it might be said, was a natural consequence of their own act of rebellion against the constituted authorities, and for which they should expect no sympathy, especially as the Northern States also suffered great losses, and came out of the war with a heavy debt.

This may be true—the case being looked at from a Northern point of view; but the condition of the several States since the war has been steadily growing worse. The debt of Alabama in 1866 was $5,000,000; under the carpet-baggers' rule it has advanced to $34,000,000. South Carolina is still worse. The figures tell a singular tale. In 1860 the State debt was $[illegible],000,000 in 1865, at the close of the war, it was $[illegible],000,000 Yanks, after three years of military rule, it had reached $34,000,000; and in 1871 the three years of carpet-bag robbery had increased it to $34,00,000. The increase of debt since the war has been more than twice what it was during the war. It looks very much as though war was cheaper than peace; certainly it cost South Carolina less. It is not difficult to say where the appropriation of this money has gone to. Some few dollars have been expended on public works, but the many of it has gone into the pockets of the legislators. In 1860 South Carolina paid for offices and salaries, $123,800; in 1871 it paid $581,640. In two years $1,208,577 has been spent for which no vouchers can be found.—The Legislature would vote money to fit up committee rooms, and then the members would spend it to fit up their private apartments. The negro legislators, the shoddyites, appear to go in for a barbaric splendor in their furnishings—their private rooms being gorgeously fitted up with brussels carpets, mirrors sofas, gildings, porcelain, spittoons, etc.

Some of the old pro-slavery party are exceedingly bitter against the negroes for their extravagance; but without reason, we think. Just emerged from the darkness and ignorance of slavery, none need wonder at their fantastic ideas of liberty; and be surprised, that they use for their personal gratification powers intended for the public welfare. We have no doubt these ignorant people are simply employed as tools by the designing whites who obtain rule thro' them. To show the predominance of those who were so lately slaves, it is sufficient to point out that in the legislature of South Carolina elected in 1869, there were twelve black and twenty white senators; eight of the twelve black senators paid no taxes.—In the House, there were 86 black and 37 white members; 68 black members paid no taxes. This is a new phase of despotism; those who don't pay taxes spending the money and making the laws for the tax payers. As long as this continues there will be no limit to the robberies of these carpet-baggers, and no improvement in the misery and beauty so wide spread over the South. And we see no remedy save in the passage of an act of amnesty. Unless the influential white men, who will have some interest in conserving the affairs of their several States, have their franchise restored to them, no amelioration in the condition of the South need be expected for many years.

There has been a culpable negligence to give it the mildest term, in the treatment of the Southern States by the victorious North that is highly discreditable. If the Federal Government is disposed to consider the evils endured by Southerners as a just punishment for their rebellion, it would be much better to pass a law in Congress burning up a few towns, or laying the whole South under a heavy tribute, or something of that sort, rather than hand them over to the tender mercies of a pack of swindlers, whose robberies go unpunished by ballots, and whose extortions have not even the honoring of being done under law; more especially as the carpet-baggers have not rendered any services to the Federal Government which should entitle them to the privilege of preying upon the defeated rebels. If the union between North and South is anything more than theory it is time for it to be seen in the treatment of the Southern States by the dominant party.—Exchange.

HIGH PRICES OF IRON.

The present high prices of iron, viewed from a utilitarian standpoint, have a two-fold significance, and may be considered, in some respects, on both a national gain and a national misfortune. In other words, they constitute a mixture of good and evil and of which just now the latter element predominates, although the ultimate result may be its complete neutralization by the former. Any abnormal condition of the market which tends to restrict the consumption of this useful metal is unquestionably a great public disadvantage; while so far as such a condition may serve to stimulate its production, and thus restore the natural relations of supply and demand, it is indirectly a public benefit.

As the great agent of civilization and of progress in the arts and industries which create wealth and elevate the condition of the masses, the importance of the iron interest can hardly be overestimated. Its future is interwoven with the prosperity of nearly every other great material interest of the country. The rapid substitution of this metal for wood and other materials in ship-building, public and commercial edifices, bridges etc., besides the natural increase of railroads and machinery rendering these labor-saving inventions an quite sufficient to convince us that its future is destined to be a continually expanding one. They show also that this diversified and increasing consumption must be met with a corresponding [illegible] production, or else these causes will operate to raise prices to a point which will [illegible] the [illegible] will be unbearable. Hence our only remedy, under existing circumstances, is [illegible] to be multiplied by causes now in operation, and in regarding the present scarcity of iron, wool, and other raw materials as but temporary.

Just now iron is too costly for the profitable extension of many important business enterprises dependent on its use in various forms. The skilled labourers employed in working it is to a great extent unremunerative, owing to the relatively greater advance of [illegible] over the manufactured articles. Hence our rolling mills, machine shops and hardware factories necessarily confine their operations to the filling of actual orders. At present both English and American manufacturers refuse to make contracts for the future delivery of their products at any fixed price. So far as our railroad interest, (which is the largest consumer of iron) is concerned, these high prices are operating as a check to the immediate prosecution of contemplated works, and only necessary repairs of those already completed are now being made in regard to this particular branch of iron manufacture and consumption, a well informed contemporary remarks, that "the effect of this radical change must lead to some considerable reduction in railway construction and in an indefinite postponement of many enterprises already commenced, save particularly in this country."

The prices of rails and refined bar iron have advanced about $10 per ton during she last three months, while those of pig iron, upon the average, have advanced full $15 per ton during the same time. The advance has not been confined to the American market or to American products, but had its origin on the other side of the Atlantic, whence a large portion of the supplies consumed in this country are at present drawn. In fact, prices here, even for the domestic article, are governed almost entirely by the cost of importing the foreign, rather than the cost of home production. The latter, for some years past, has been relatively high as compared with the former, and hence importations have been stimulated, notwithstanding the discrimination afforded by protective duties.

The increase of the home product, though considerable, (being more than doubled during the last five years,) has by no means kept pace with the increased demand for consumption, which increase, being general throughout the civilized world, is one of the principal causing which led to the high advances obtained. Indeed, since the close of the Franco German war, and the revival of manufacturing industry upon the European Continent, the demand has rapidly outrun the supply, and the resources of England, Scotland and other great producing countries have been entirely drained.

At the same time, the cost of production in these countries has been vastly enhanced by the labour combinations and strikes among the iron and coal miners, who have lately had matters pretty much their own way. The iron masters have been largely ordered ahead, and with contracts on their hands to be filled within a certain specified time, they have been almost at the mercy of their operatives, who have exercised their power in an arbitrary and oppressive manner. Backed up by kindred trade combinations, they have insisted not only upon a large increase of wages, but also on a large reduction in the hours of labor. At present, they are working only about half the usual time and earn enough in three days to support them in idleness the remainder of the week. Yet they are far from being satisfied, and continue to agitate, as in this country, for more labour reform.

Thus it will be seen that the cost of making pig iron abroad is rapidly approximating its cost in this country. Indeed, it seems probable that at no distant day the wages of labour will become so equalized by migration, that our trans-Atlantic rival will cease to have any advantage on the score of cheap production. Moreover, the time is apparently near at hand when (with its mining resources already worked up to their full capacity and in some cases beginning to show signs of exhaustion) the entire coal and iron product of Europe will be wanted for home consumption. At the present cost of importing these articles we shall continue to draw less and less of our necessary supplies from abroad, and turn our attention more and more to the development of our own native resources.—From the Boston Bulletin.

The New French Cannon.

The World correspondent thus describes the new French cannon:—It is a cast steel breech-loader heavier than the Prussian six-pounder, upon which it seems to have been modelled, but firing a ball somewhat lighter than its prototype. The German authorities will be the more tempted to keep pace with their neighbor in developing this important branch of the service, as their own ordnance has been considerably improved since the war. It I am not mistaken, the new Berlin field-gun has a muzzle velocity of 1,[illegible] feet, carrying a shell an enormous penetrating power, even with almost unmeasurable [illegible] at from 2,000 to 4,000 feet. Another improvement recently made and adopted regulates the size of the fortress artillery. It is stated that the Spandau [illegible], and by the application of an [illegible] contrivance to the carriage, causes the gun to recover its former position of [illegible], so as to render fresh pointing unnecessary. By this means the fire of the fortress and coast artillery will be rendered much more certain and much more destructive. Experiments are [illegible] carried for field service, guns tried in the present high state of perfection being constructed as carrying all the properties of the "[illegible] cannon," and each gun having a special gun. The needle rifle, although it be eventually replaced by some new pattern or other, will continue to do duty for some years to come. The reduction of the bullet to a smaller size recently added one hundred and fifty paces to its range, it is in its present shape believed upon as a marked improvement, and at least upon paper is certainly very formidable. The partial mobilization of the German [illegible] before the war, by calling to the [illegible] of hostilities, would not have been carried out. I believe that a large number of the rifled have already undergone alteration, and that the first batch will be [illegible] during the autumn manœuvres. As yet very few arms, the invention comparatively to the carbine, when compared to the [illegible] of the rifle, have been [illegible] to the cavalry, whose [illegible] is to be directly opposed. The [illegible] of the [illegible] gun, to supply the place of the 12-inch [illegible] is [illegible] of the 12-inch 10 centimetre gun, when [illegible] breech is six-inch calibre at a distance of 1,[illegible] paces. A novel [illegible] of this [illegible] at Kiel is [illegible] naval officers an opportunity of obtaining a higher scientific education, and thus qualifying themselves for the higher posts in their profession.

All your pencil, "Shoddyite's Cavalry Charge" [illegible] should be given to [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] only be given to White and Spring.

The Late Colonel Fisk.

The grave of the late Colonel James Fisk, Jr., in the beautiful cemetery overlooking the ice-bound Connecticut River, in Brattleboro', Vt., was covered on Monday by a most interesting tribute to his memory. The occasion was the anniversary of his birthday, which would have numbered the thirty-seventh had his life been spared. The tributes alighted to was the placing upon his grave of a magnificent display of choice flowers. The most elaborate design was a cross, composed of orange flowers, tuberoses, violets and other rare flowers. [illegible] bearing in front, composed principally of white flowers, displayed the affectionate title, "Husband," in fragrant violets. Another nearly equal in size, "Brother." Still another contained the letters "J. F. Jr." There was also a cross, some eighteen inches in height, resting upon a pedestal, covered upon both sides with red and white roses. The newly-fallen snow, of which there was a depth of at least twelve inches, was removed from the grave, and the floral [illegible] were placed upon the same, carefully covered by grass, in order that their freshness and beauty might be preserved the longest possible time.

When Nero perished by the justest doom.
That ever the destroyer yet destroyed.
Some unseen hand strewed flowers upon his tomb,
Perhaps the weakness of some heart not cold
Of feeling for some blindness, done when Power
Had left the wretch an uncorrupted hour.

DIVORCE IN INDIANA.—An interesting example of the way in which the liberal divorce laws of Indiana sometimes operate is given in a Louisville paper. A woman in Indianapolis was in poor health, and fearing that in case she should die her husband would obtain the control of certain property that she possessed, she visited her sister in Louisville, Kentucky, in order to carry out a scheme which she had projected to prevent it. While staying with her sister she opened the river to New Albany, where she rented a house for three months, and on this pretension based a residence there. She then instituted a suit for divorce, after which she returned to her husband in Indianapolis. About a year ago she received a telegraph dispatch requesting her immediate presence in Louisville in consequence of illness in her husband's family, and showing this to her husband, he really consented to a second visit to that city. At this time she again went over to New Albany, where she received her decree of divorce, which she quietly put in her pocket and carried home. It is possible that the husband would have never known what had taken place, at least during her lifetime, had he not excited her ire by insisting one day too much on his own way as the head of the family! upon which she very surely informed him that he need not try to tyrannize over her, as she was not his wife, at the same time producing the documents to prove her assertion. The husband was more than astonished; but he insists upon it that such a divorce as that will never stand, in which opinion he is probably about right.

The cannon which the French used for the slaughter of the Germans are to be transformed into church bells of the principal cities of Germany, where, instead of peals of death and destruction, they will ring out those of peace and good will. 300 cwt of the metal of the captured guns have been presented to the famous Cathedral of Cologne; 200 cwt have been sent to Frankfort for her cathedral, and various quantities have gone to other places to be devoted to the same purpose. The ancient allegory may now be modified, and we may long for the time when all cannon shall be cast into church bells and the nations learn war be more.

A naval engagement is to come off in the British channel at an early date. It is arranged that a friendly trial of strength shall take place between the two most powerful monitors ever launched from an English port, in order to test the advantages of the turret system. The Hotspur is to attack the Glatton, and the experiment is expected to decide the vexed question, whether the [illegible] turret can be made sufficient stable to resist the effect of six hundred pound rifle bullets at short ranges.—Telegraph.

The Antigonish Casket says:—We record this week the death of the oldest man in the County, perhaps in this Province. Born in [illegible], in Moidart, Scotland, John McNeil, with his wife and family, came to America in 1802; and having lived for several years in Hawkesbury, he removed latterly to Upper South River, in this county, where he died on the 26th of February last. He retained all his faculties up to the very moment of [illegible] he constantly performed his [illegible] duties, and was able to walk to church [illegible] one years after the first Napoleon's death, to witness the downfall of a man who was four years ago hurled from the proud throne which he had filled. McNeil was a very reliable man in all the relations of life.

Its a great pity you took a good medicine as Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER is not more extensively used, just see what a world of good it has done even since we have had it, George don't have the toothache any more, it has saved Fredy a severe attack of Dyspepsia, and I know it will relieve you of Rheumatism.

Husband:—You are right Mary, the PAIN-KILLER seems to fire up the cold corners; my shoulder and put new life into it, it certainly does not instantaneously, I do think my dear, I am cured already (meditatingly) well, well, all I have heard said of it is true, my shoulder is free from pain the first time for, these two months.

Wife:—It is strange, we never have been induced to try it before, I should have thought you would have been often advised to try it.

Husband:—I have had the PAIN-KILLER recommended many times, but between the Doctors and Druggists they have always succeeded in keeping me from using it by suggesting other trash that has done me no good.

Wife:—People seem to enjoy paying the Doctor five or ten Dollars every now and then to experiment on them, when a twenty five cent bottle of PAIN-KILLER would give them the far more relief, and the Druggists are so obliging as to very kind to say "I have no Davis' PAIN-KILLER and nothing else will do," and then refuse to buy their trash.

Select Poetry.

The Death of the Flowers

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

I hear from many a little throat
A warble interrupted long;
I hear the robin's flute-like note,
The blue bird's slender song.

Brown meadows and the purest hill,
Not yet the haunt of glinting herd
And thickets by the gladdening rill
Are all alive with birds.

O cheer of spring, who came so soon
On leafless grove and herbless lawn!
Warm tis the yellow beams of noon,
Yet winter is the hour.

For frost shall shoot the pools again,
Again the blustering east wind blow,
Whirl a white tempest through the glen
And load the pines with snow.

Stay, for a tint of green shall creep
Soon o'er the orchard's grassy floor,
And from its bed the crocus peep
Beside the housewife's door.

How Short is Life.

Life is short, too short for strife;
Put a world of loving in it,
When there's good that can be done,
Do not wait, but just begin it.
Do not dream of coming days,
All the future overrating;
Wherefore trust an idle dream?
Life is short, too short for waiting.

Learn we kindness unto all
From the pitying ones above us,
Let us love our fellow men
As the blessed angels love us.
Work in love and work in faith;
Trust me, 'tis a noble calling
It is almost eventide,
Soon the shadows will be falling.

Agricultural.

A Great Farmer's Maxims.

The successful life of Mr. Jacob Strawn, the prince of American farmers, is attributed to the close observance of the following maxims, originated by himself:

When you wake up do not allow the roll out. It will give you time to ditch all your sloughs, break them, harrow them and sow them.

Make your fences hog and pig tight, so that it will turn in hogs and pigs out.

If you have brush make your lot secure, and keep your hogs from your cattle, for if the corn is kept clean they will eat it better than it is fat.

Be sure to get your hands to bed by seven o'clock—they will rise early by force of circumstances. Pay a hand, if he is a good hand, all you promise him, if he is a good hand pay him a little more, it will encourage him to do still better.

Always feed your hands as well as you do yourself, for the laboring men are the bone and sinew of the land, and should be well treated.

I am satisfied that early rising, industry, and regular habits are the best medicines prescribed for health.

When rainy, bad weather comes on that you cannot work out of doors, cut, split and haul your wood.

Make your racks, fix your fences or a gate that is off its hinges, or weatherboard your barn where the wind has blown the siddings off, or patch the roof at your house.

Study your interests closely, and do not spend your time in town meetings, with senators and other small officers, or talking of hard times when spending your time whittling store-boxes, &c.

Take your time and make calculations. Don't do things in a hurry, but do them at the right time, and keep your mind as well as your body employed.—Ruralist.

Raising Early Flowers and Vegetables.

It is not every family that can possess a hotbed in which to start early flowers and vegetables, yet all can have them by the expenditure of a little more trouble. A kitchen window, if the locality is sunny, will supply a fine light one needs to raise a few asters, balsams, stocks, verbenas, etc., and tomato, pepper, cabbage and lettuce plants can also be started in small boxes or flower pots. Take good light soil if possible mix it with leaf mould, well crumpled up, bake the earth to destroy all the larvæ of worms, etc., and plant your seeds over the surface, when it will be cold to the hand. Scatter scouring sand lightly over the seeds, shade from the sun for three or four days, and soon you will have quantities of plants of all kinds. Be sure to plant your seeds sparingly, do not crowd the plants, thereby making them spindling and sickly, and causing them to become "wire drawn." If they grow tall and slender, pinch off the upper leaves and this will make them more stocky. When they are two or three inches high, transplant them into thumb pots or large boxes, giving them room to grow. Keep the plants in the direct rays of the sun during the greater part of the day—removing to a warmer room at night. Let them be in the same room with you, and when the air is mild open the door it is often freshening to them. At little expense and some care, every family can supply itself with all the early flowers and vegetables they may desire.

Muck and its Uses.

Every one knows what muck is, and the expression, "wet as muck," is as common as the article itself. Its general material is vegetable matter, which has been accumulating for ages in wet localities, where, unless in very dry seasons it is saturated with water. In some localities we have found it is a decomposed state, and in others fresh vegetable fibre that an exposure to the atmosphere for a short time would reduce it to a powder. In other cases the vegetable fibre remains in so good preservation, owing to the constant moisture that it retains, that time and the action of manure solvents like frost, or agricultural implements ameliorators, become necessary to fit it for economical uses in husbandry.

Muck, in its natural state, is highly charged with acids. This is the natural result of its constantly lying in cold stagnant water. Until these acid is disengaged, it is of but little use for agricultural purposes—albeit becomes necessary to effect that object; so we find exposure to the atmosphere improves it, but too slowly to meet the ready wants of the farmer. Mixing ashes or lime serve readily accomplishes the object, and they are either of them, whether used in connection with muck or otherwise, very beneficial to the soil. Mixed with barn-yard manure, it is invaluable for top dressing, the alkaline qualities of the manure aiding forth the acid of the muck and aiding the atmosphere in decomposing the vegetable matter. Coal ashes, immense quantities of which are often thrown away, although they contain but a small amount of alkali, may be thrown in the muck heap to great advantage as disintegrating agent. Sea-muck, where they can muck be made to apply to potato diseases are excellent for the muck heap.

Its value as a manure is very conclusive when applied as a top dressing. Upon the grassy swards and long undisturbed fruit tree roots it is nothing lower. It possesses the valuable properties of forcing the soil open to the air for the young roots, and furnishes just the kind of food they relish. In the garden for all kinds of vegetables we have never seen its equal. In short, it is the manure for all crops.

ODDS AND ENDS.

A young lady, recently married, says that "a husband is a very good thing to have," but love she accepts.

The latest fashionable ornament is amber, and will, in a few months, doubtless supersede the tortoise-shell which has held its own for an unusually long term.

An Iowa stump orator, wishing to describe his opponent, as a reckless man, said: "I have heard noble patriots hold the people long that just at the precise moment when their auditors were hurried away by their own burning zeal and the zeal others and subscribe their names to the document, they would suddenly remember that they had forgotten their pocket-book. Now, I have never done such a thing, and executive Sunday, I never go before he drag [illegible] pocket-book, [illegible] to-call-mind, I leave you to draw the inference for the purpose."

A Little Monkey.—"Dick," said a father to his seven-year-old, "give that monkey to that little girl." "Which monkey?" asked the little fellow.

"You," was the reply.

"Then give me sixpence to buy the other monkey."

"We've got one monkey in the house now," replied the elder brother.

"What is it, Dan?" Asked the little fellow.

"You," was the reply.

The Cleveland Leader has the following introducing it to a country paper:—"Our subscription list needs the extra to choose a more auspicious event than we now mention. Last morning the beautiful daughter of Mr. Lovepuff, the accomplished and distinguished banker of this city, was united in wedlock to George Dapplegrey, the talented artist whose [illegible] scapes are upon the dashboard [illegible] buggy turned out of his father-in-law's [illegible] and who, [illegible] the poor little [illegible] passed the [illegible] day with a paid up year's subscription to our paper, for which we extend our sincere thanks, as we do for the [illegible] broken pieces of wedding cake, and [illegible] These coincidences in our [illegible] as a inspire us to make our paper better than ever. We enlarge next week.

This is a true story.—Old Mr. Thompson, on his dying bed, said but two days before he stood by his bedside, and held his hand, and as the shadows gathered over his face, Mr countenance, we leaned over him, and whispered to him:

"Thompson, have you anything to say, any last words you desire to leave behind? Express to [illegible] world?"

He raised his head towards us, and with a sigh said:

"I have just a single regret. There is [illegible] my heart, as I die, a regret with the conviction that I have neglected to improve but one talent faithfully."

And what is it, Thompson? Tell us frankly, and perhaps we may be able to promise to amend in such a fashion that your last moments may be soothed and comforted."

"I regret that I have not been able to [illegible] cannot be. My only regret is—and here a look of [illegible] my only regret is, in departing, is that I have never seen the falls of Niagara!"

The best of it is that old Thompson recovered entirely a few weeks later, and although he lived for fifteen years afterwards he never visited the falls.

Old Farmer Graff was one morning tugging away with all his might and main at a barrel of apples, which he was endeavoring to get up the cellar stairs, and calling at the top of his lungs for one of the boys to lend a helping hand, but all in vain.

When he had, after an infinite amount of sweating and tugging, accomplished the task, and just when they were not needed, [illegible] appearance.

"Where have you been, and what have you been about, I'd like to know, that you could not hear me call?" inquired the old gentleman in an angry tone, and addressing the eldest.

"Out in the shop settin' chickens," replied the youth.

"And you Dick?"

"Out in the barn, settin' the hen."

"And you, sir?"

"Up in the garret settin' the trap."

"And now, Master Fred, where were you and what were you settin'?" Asked the old farmer of his youngest progeny, the [illegible] of [illegible] years, [illegible] softened by the amusing category of answers. "Come, let's hear!"

"Out on the door-step, settin' still," supplied young hopeful.

A teacher in Chicago in a primary school gives each of her scholars the word "chimney" to write a short comment upon. Fortunately the following was discovered in time not to be read aloud: "I do not wear a chimmy for I am not a girl, for if I was a girl I would wear a shimmy.

Editorial Notes.

A MAN named Hutchinson was drowned near Gerry's Landing last week.

Port Hope papers are agitating Water Works.

Sydney voted 180 majority against a Bonus of $15,000 to the Grand Junction Railway.

FIRE.—There was an extensive fire at Ingersoll on Tuesday. The loss is about $500,000. A man named Prime lost his life in the fire.

Horace Greely was nominated for President by the Cincinnati Convention, with Governor Brown, of Missouri, as Vice-President.

The Proclamation of the Governor for the prayed for extension of the limits of the Town, appeared in the Ontario Gazette of Saturday last.

ON Tuesday night there was no meeting of the Board of School Trustees. Only two members having put in an appearance up to 8.30.

THE back lakes are opened and navigation is resumed. The ice on Chemong Lake broke up without doing injury to the Bridge. The water in the lakes is lower than usual at this season of the year.

THE many friends of Mr. Stratton will learn with pleasure that he is rapidly improving in health. He was over at the office on Monday and yesterday, and should the present fine weather continue, and no unforseen event supervene, he will be able shortly to attend to his business as heretofore.

FIRE IN NEW YORK.—A disastrous fire occurred in New York on Monday, whereby the Metropolitan Hotel, Niblo's Garden and several other buildings were totally or partially destroyed. The loss is estimated at $810,000. Another Fire is raging in the Manhatten Market, West 24th Street.

ALMOST A FIRE.—The woodsheds attached to Mrs. Craigie's dwelling house, Ashburnham, caught fire on Monday evening, in some unaccountable way, and were burnt down. Fortunately the fire was discovered in time to save the house which for a time was in danger. The Engine got as far as Mr. Roger's Store, but was not needed as the fire was extinguished by citizens who hastened to assist.

THE weather during the last few days has been all that one could desire. The air has been balmy and delightful. The braird of the early sown grain is soon. The buds of the trees are swelling and some kinds are ready to burst into leaves and flowers. Some fields of pasture are carpeted over with green, and although the season is somewhat backward, a continuation of this fine weather will force vegetation forward at a rapid rate. As an offset to this pleasing state of affairs, we are sorry to hear of the failures of fall wheat. Very much of that which promised so fine when the snow went off is now being plowed up, and owing to the very dry season last year very many fields that were sown with timothy and clover have to be plowed up and sown with grass again. This will tend to make hay scarce and dear again in this locality.

"THE Queen's Baccarat.—The Peterboro Five Brigade are making strenuous efforts during a long collection here on the 24th inst., to raise funds to defray the expenses of attending the Demonstration at Cobourg on the 24th inst. The Town Council have kindly granted them a sum of money for the purpose, but we would urge upon our citizens the necessity of furnishing us with some more funds as they cannot entertain a large crowd like the one expected here on the 24th, without a great expense.

A somewhat interesting case between master and servant was tried in the Police Court, yesterday. Last week Mr. Hazlitt hired three men to work on the River, driving logs, and it was agreed they were to go up with Mr. H's team on Tuesday last. On Monday it appears these men were hired with Mr. Ledgate's foreman at an advance of wages. They were however, intending to work for Mr. Hazlitt, and Mr. Ledgate finding this he had warrants issued and the men were brought before the Police Magistrate who fined them $15 each and costs. The men have appealed from the decision and we shall await the result of the appeal with interest. It seems very hard to fine men for refusing to go to work when it was morally impossible for them to do so as they were to all intents and purposes Mr. Hazlitt's servants. The men deserved punishment for deceiving Mr. Ledgate, but that Mr. Ledgate can punish them for this offence under the Master and Servant Act, we very much doubt. The appeal will be tried in the June Sessions.

Town Council.

MONDAY, MAY 6th, 1872.

The Clerk was instructed to write to the Secretary tendering him the payment of the interest and to refer the same to our Solicitors, Toronto.

The Clerk was instructed to give a license to each of the three last named, and to the first as soon as he complies with the rules relating to the selling of butchers meat.

A petition was read from John Dynely asking for a tavern license.—Referred to the License Commissioners.

A petition from several Ratepayers asking for a sidewalk on the south side of MacDonald street, was referred to the Committee on Streets and Bridges.

The Clerk's account of sums expended in charities for last year and this year up to date, was laid on the table. It appeared that $677.36 besides 86 loads of wood were distributed in 1871, and that $470.08 and 47 loads of wood were distributed this year up to date.

The Auditors' Report was submitted and referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. Towle, seconded by Mr. Edmison—The By-law submitted to the ratepayers in February last, to aid Messrs. Peters, Moir & Co. by way of Bonus, to the extent of $20,000 was read a third time and passed.

Carried.

On motion of Mr. English the Council adjourned for two weeks.

Dummer Council.

Town Hall, Dummer, May 6th, 1872.

Council met as a Court of Revision to Revise the Assessment of the current year.

APPEALS.

There was but one applicant, viz., A. E. Hudgins, who appealed from Assessment of N 3, in 10 assessed for $200 and $140 personal property added.

The Assessor being heard, it was upon motion of Councillor Smith, seconded by Spence—Held that Assessment be confirmed.

Council was then opened for transaction of general business.

Upon minutes of last meeting being read, Councillor Kidd called attention to the wording of Councillor Payne's motion respecting timber cutting opposite Lot 22 in 2nd con. He was not aware that commission appointed to settle this job were to estimate "damage," and believed that this clause was inadvertently inserted by the Clerk in preparing his copy for publication. The mover and seconder of the motion having asserted that the motion was to that purport, Commissioner Kidd assented and the minutes were signed.

TIMBER CUTTING.

Councillor Kidd reported verbally, 35 trees cut, without counting very small trees and hemlocks. Commissioner Kidd authorized Lahey to cut and pile the tops and fallen logs, and underbrush road allowance 16 feet wide upon that portion allowance trespassed upon.

The Report suggested time to prevent a repetition of the marauding's aforesaid, Commissioner Kidd put his report in writing.

OTTAWA AND QUEBEC RAILWAY.

Memorial of Provisional Directors soliciting aid for preliminary survey was laid on the table by the Reeve.

Moved by Mr. Payne, seconded by Mr. Smith—That the Reeve be instructed to reply to the Province of the Directors of the Ontario and Quebec Railway for aid towards making the preliminary survey of said Railway, offering a Bonus payable on said Railway, provided it be located through our Township. Carried.

BOUNDARY LINE.

Wm Robert McMillan made application for assistance towards the finishing road allowance from his house southwards to Stony Lake. Thought it only right that the Council should pay for the fence as the work was given by his father gratuitously. Would give the Council a deed of land exempted and would fence the road for $30. Councillor Smith said this favor did not all on one side, the late McCracken some years since built a dwelling, previous to the opening of this road. Upon opening the line, this dwelling was found to be directly in the road. McCracken then gave an allowance through his land and received the original allowance in lieu, but this transfer was never recorded. He did not see that there was any obligation on the part of the Council to grant any aid for this purpose.

Councillors Spence and Payne thought the request reasonable.

Councillor Smith then moved, seconded by Spence—That Wm Robt McCracken having applied to this Council for compensation for fencing a road, across part of his lot, Messrs G. Payne and A. R. Kidd be appointed commissioners to ascertain if a road is necessary, and if the same cannot be made on Concession line, and in case it be necessary to occupy part of McCracken's land, with power to employ a surveyor to define the same, and also to make any temporary arrangements necessary.

DEED OF AGRICULTURAL HALL.

Upon motion of A. R. Kidd, seconded by A. Smith—The Reeve was instructed to make a formal demand on Wm Snelgrove for the Deed of the Agricultural Hall, Warsaw, and if not given to take such steps as will recover the same.

ROAD COMMISSIONERS.

Messrs. H. Spence, Henry Ferguson, A. R. Kidd, Thos. G. Choate, Geo. Payne, sr., and James Robb were appointed Road Commissioners for Divisions 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, respectively.

A. S. MAGUIRE,
Township Clerk.

South Monaghan Council and Court of Revision.

The Court of Revision for the Township of South Monaghan, met at the Council Chamber, Centreville, on Monday 29th April, 1872, at 10 o'clock, a.m.

Meeting all present.

Moved by Joseph Barnard, seconded by John Waterman, that Mr. James Colhas do take the chair. Chair.

Moved by William McAllister, seconded by John Waterman—That the Assessment of James Rutherford be altered by adding ten acres to his quantity of land and seventy-five to the amount of his real property. Carried.

The Assessment Roll having then been read, it was moved by Joseph Barnard, seconded by John Waterman—That the Assessment Roll as now corrected be now finally passed and signed, and that the Court do now adjourn sine die.

JOSEPH BARNARD, Clerk.

The Municipal Council met the same day at the close of the above Court.

Members present, Messrs. Collins, McAllister, Rutherford and Waterman.

In the absence of the Reeve, James Collins took the chair.

The Clerk presented an account from B. A. Hayter for printing.

William Huggins presented an account for road hammer and scraper.

Moved by Wm Rutherford, seconded by Wm McAllister—That Richard Dawson be appointed pathmaster in room of Wm Armstrong, on the broken front concession line. Carried.

Moved by John Waterman, seconded by Wm McAllister—That the following persons perform their statue labor upon the following beats, Thomas Dodd to perform all this, and David Morrison four days on the beat on the side line between Lots 12 and 13 on the third concession. The Dominion of Canada.

The reports of the several Departments of the Dominion Government were received ere the present session had passed its second week. The reports are not only prompt but full and highly satisfactory and reflect credit on the heads of the departments. From them we learn that the extent of the Dominion as it now exists is considerable over three and a half millions of square miles—Ontario contains over seventy seven millions of acres Quebec over two hundred and forty one millions of acres—New Brunswick about one fifth of Ontario—Nova Scotia over two thirds of New Brunswick, and Manitoba about one half of New Brunswick, British Columbia contains about twice as much as Ontario. These taken together form a field large enough for an ordinary spread, affording abundance of room for the present inhabitants and millions more.

The imports of last year were about $80 a head for every man woman and child in the Dominion, while the exports were about $24 a head. The Revenue of the past year was about $5 a head.

The Debt of the Dominion amounts to $36,319,000, or fully $12 a head, while the annual interest of the debt will amount to $1.25 per head. This would be all very well but a very large addition will doubtless be made to the debt ere another year passes over us. But by attempt to assert that the Dominion is not in a highly prosperous condition with homes so bright, and prospects as fair as ever nation had, would be an evidence of the basest ingratitude, and a contemptible disregard for truth.—Ontario Observer.

The Washington Treaty in the House of Commons.

On Friday the 3rd inst., Sir John A. Macdonald moved the third reading of the Bill to carry out the provisions of the Treaty of Washington.

Sir John said it required both ingenuity and ability to hide the defects of the Treaty, and how he succeeded in doing this we do not take upon us to say. Mr. Mackenzie, however, discovered the weak points in the address, and thus delivered himself, on Sir John resuming his seat:—

Mr. Mackenzie said he desired before the motion passed to make a few observations on the speech of the hon gentleman opposite that made by introducing his Bill. It was not his intention to discuss the Treaty critically to-night or to enter exhaustively into the arguments they might be presented against it. At this time of the evening—ten minutes to ten o'clock—and after the long, exhaustive and able speech of Sir John, it would be manifestly impossible, if not improper, to enter into a critical debate. Such a debate as would take place most probably on the second reading. He had listened with a great deal of interest and pleasure as Sir John A. had unfolded his views, though they did not harmonize with his, (Mr. Mackenzie's) or with those of the gentlemen who acted with him politically. The gentleman opposite was pleased in his closing remarks to make a somewhat unheeded attack on his political opponents. He was believed to say that the course they had pursued was not one dictated by some power not present in this House. The gentleman opposite rarely made a speech on a great occasion without losing sight of what he was doing in zeal for his party. He (Mr. Mackenzie) regretted the references that Sir John had made, for two or three reasons. In the first place the party on this side of the House desired at all events to discuss the Treaty on its merits, though disposed undoubtedly, to condemn the action of the gentleman opposite and his associates, in this as in other instances; but he (Mr. Mackenzie) might inform the House and gentlemen opposite, that within a few days of the ratification of the Treaty, before almost a single newspaper had written on it, he delivered a speech, and his hon. friend beside him (Mr. Blake) also delivered his views a few days previously. Those views were in entire harmony with the views they had expressed ever since, and he might say they were in entire harmony with the views of the entire press of the country. (Applause.) They had the honour of leading public sentiment in this matter in that direction, which they felt bound to say the members of the patriotic Administration of the country, if not in front of it, were at all events in the rear. They were disposed to make a sacrifice for peace and amity with other countries, but still there was a limit beyond which we could not and should not go. (Hear, hear.) He did not believe that national life, national glory, and national prosperity were always to be purchased by making sacrifices. Mr. Mackenzie having referred to Sir A. T. Galt's resolutions last year with reference to Sir. John Macdonald's mission to Washington and the Galt-Macdonald resolutions been pressed by Sir A. T. Galt they might have resulted in something favourable for the country. He then proceeded to ridicule the idea that Great Britain the strongest nation in the world had fallen so low as to ask any of her Commissioners to appeal to the United States for compension. (Cheers) He went on to show that argument of the Premier went to throw doubt upon our rights to the fisheries with regard to which there was no doubt whatever, it being even admitted by the Americans except with regard to the headland question. Hence to point to the Hon. Mr. Campbell went to England, and out of it other large questions were thrown on our hands. As to the argument of Sir John respecting the value of the American fishing grounds as a place for obtaining bait. Mr. Mackenzie ridiculed it, and showed its absurdity by stating that bait was a regular article of commerce, and could be purchased, as it was now by our fishermen. With regard to the value of our fisheries, he referred to the debate in the New Brunswick Legislature, to show the views there entertained on that point, and pointed out that it was apprehended by them that the Americans, if admitted into our fisheries, would, by their recklessness, speedily destroy them, as Sir John had admitted they would destroy our lake fisheries if they were admitted to them. With regard to the question of responsibility, he pointed out that the declaration of Sir John, that under certain circumstances he would have refused to sign the treaty, revealed his true position He protested against Sir John raising the false issue that a rejection of the Treaty by us would lead to war. There was not the slightest grounds for such statement, and he protested against such threats being held out to us in order to force the Treaty through Parliament. Sir John had, by skilful mixing of Imperial with Canadian questions, endeavoured to make it appear that England was called upon to make sacrifices—but he believed the public spirit of England was in sympathy with us, and would revolt at the idea of England forcing degrading sacrifices upon her chief colony. The next point related to the Reciprocity Treaty Though the American Commissioners were instructed to consider commercial matters, the British Commissioners appeared to have yielded the matter as soon as objected to by the Americans. We had not obtained that benefit not any kind of response to Canadian demands. He thought, in opposition to the Premier, we had yielded what was a vantage ground in the negotiations for reciprocity. He went on to point out what we had lost by the ignorance or incompetence of former British Commissioners in boundry and other questions; it was safe for Americans to make any demand, as they got what they coveted. Under the pressure of public opinion in the States, honourable politicians there could not always do what they thought right. He pointed out last year that the Fenian claims were not included in reference, and found afterwards, despite the ministerial denial of the assumption that it has been practically admitted by a resolution of the Commissioners that the claims were worth very little. If they were only a constructive or inferential character, as the Americans pretended, it was not creditable to our commissioners that such an objection should have prevailed. He thought that argument as extraordinary that the British Commissioners failed to impress the the Americans with their view on Reciprocity, because of the action of the House last year in repealing the duties; and taunted the Government for their backing down. He had striven to impress Sir F. Hincks with the folly of thinking to coerce the Americans by imposition of duties yielding but $200,000. The Premier at Washington and his colleagues here were made victims of everything else, and he was sure to claim that but for this action of the House everything else would have been obtained. He referred to the improved condition of our fisheries under the operation of a policy of Canada as shown by Senator Mitchell's report covering 1870. The Americans had ruined their own fisheries and would gain nothing by the Government policy. He replied that if the lower provinces approved of the treaty because we had abandoned the fisheries, the provinces against them. He quoted an extract from a member's speech condemning Canada's concession in strong and peculiar language. We alluded to the fact that the strongest feeling had been excited against the Treaty in the Province of New Brunswick. The Legislature of that Province had pronounced unanimously against it. Lieutenant-Governor Wilmot, in his speech, which was one of the strongest documents of the kind, had opposed the Treaty with the greatest vigor. Mr. Mackenzie criticised the statement of Sir John that we had only yielded to American rights to navigate the St Lawrence in its natural state, but if we surrender to exclude Americans from our canals do would soon be told in such a message as had frightened the Commissioners last year, that we had practically relinked the Treaty that they had not their hearts on obtaining the navigation of canals, and having set their hearts on anything seemed to be attached Sir John for his carelessness in allowing Americans to exclude us from Lake Michigan, showing from Sir John A Macdonald's own words that the Senate of the United States were by implication in the public law in the same position relative to Canadian rights as the St. Lawrence between Cornwall and Montreal was to the rights of Americans. He then showed the disregard evidenced by Sir John for the privileges of Canadians in the matter of the Columbia river, a river which was necessarily in the position of the St Lawrence. The Columbia flowed through British territory but emptied into the sea in American territory. Yet the right to navigate that river had not been secured for us. (Hear, hear.)

Sir John A. Macdonald—You had better not, in the interests of Canada bring that up.

Mr Mackenzie said he was free to discuss the treaty and would the Minister of Justice engage to say that the astute American diplomatists were not aware of all these facts. (Hear, hear.) That general observations were all that he supposed to offer to the House to-night. It was not his intention to discuss the Treaty at all to-night, and he would not have done so but for the statements of the Premier. He would only say that when they came to discuss the question upon its merits upon the second reading, they would be prepared to put their views upon record in such a way as would at least relieve them from blame in having yielded this capitulation—as it had been called After some remarks upon the principle of money payment for territorial rights Mr. Mackenzie concluded by expressing the hope that the result of the vote upon the treaty would be such as would redound to the credit and dignity of this country, and that we would show our spirit and independence, and our devotion to the true interests of the Empire by passing such opinions upon the conduct of the hon. gentleman and his fellow Commissioners as would, he believed, be sustained by the public opinion of the country.—(Cheers.)

Hon Mr Blake moved the adjournment of the debate.

Sir John A. Macdonald asked if the hon gentleman proposed to discuss the measure on the first reading.

Hon Mr. Blake said if the hon gentleman would fix the second reading for an early day, he would defer discussion till then.

Sir John A Macdonald said he would put it down for Tuesday next, but would not give it priority.

Hon Mr Blake pressed for early procedure with the bill.

Sir John A Macdonald persisted in a refusal to give the bill priority.

Hon Mr. Blake said the responsibility of delay would rest upon the Ministry.

In reply to Sir John A. Macdonald, Mr. Blake said he had not decided whether he would oppose the bill on the second reading or in committee.

Sir John A. Macdonald said he would then drawn up and he had taken it clause by clause, but he could not promise the printing of it for to-morrow. Ultimately the motion for adjournment of the debate was carried, also the Premier's for first reading The second reading ordered for Tuesday, on the understanding the Government are not to be forced to give the treaty bill priority.

The House then adjourned at 20 minutes past 11.

SENTENCED TO DEATH.—The jury returned a verdict of guilty against Castfield, for the murder of his wife, at Oshawa. He was sentenced to be hung on the 20th of June next. He still says he is innocent.

The Muncipal Council of Manvers and Emily have passed a by-law granting $30,000 each to the Bowmanville and Bobcaygeon Railway. The by-law will be submitted to the electors on the 27th inst.

The friends and admirers of the Earl of Dufferin, (our new Governor-General) in the north of Ireland, are to entertain him at a Banquet in Belfast, prior to his departure for this country The Earl and the Countess are extremely popular among all parties and denominations. So says the London (England) Telegraph.

The Tichborne claimant, Sir Roger, is just about as "cheeky" as the Fenian leaders. Since his release from prison, he has published a letter to the public, in which he returns thanks for previous subscriptions, and asks for an additional sum of £4,000 to enable him to continue the contest for the possession of the Tichborne estate.

Fences were also demolished in every direction. A driving shed and barn belonging to Mr. Black ner Blaevale, were splifted and utterly destroyed.

The United States Postal Record, contains some astounding statistics in regard to unstamped letters, &c. During the last year there has been sent to the Dead Letter Office nearly 3,000,000 letters. 96,000 of these could not be correctly forwarded because the writer had omitted to give the name of either country or town. 400,000 failed because the writer omitted to put on a stamp; and over 2,000 were put in the post office without any address at all. In the above mentioned letters was $25,000 in cash, and drafts, checks, &c., to the value of $3,000,000. And in them were 36,026 photographs.

Horace Greeley's famous panacea for those seeking a fortune does not seem to answer well in every case, some who have followed his advice and gone west seem inclined to come back on his hands. One young man writes to the Tribune from Nebraska in a very lachrymose vein, he can't do more than make a living there he says, and others around him same neighborhood are worse off still. He sends a very forlorn picture of the condition of the people say they, living in wretched huts built of sods, and forced to sell their grain at 15 cents a bushel.

The Port Hope Free Press says: "A few days ago Mr. Daniel Sinclair and Mr. John McIntyre, when looking for timber in the township of Sullivan, discovered the track of a huge bear, which had left his winter quarters, and was spending the forest in search of something which he could devour. One of the men being armed with a breech-loading rifle, and being provided with shovels, they went after the bear, with as much expedition as if he had a thousand dollars bill to his tail, but notwithstanding their energy the beast succeeded in keeping out of sight in the dense swamps, and having no dogs, and night coming on, the chase to be successful was abandoned. Next day some men with dogs followed the track, and after a short time killed the bear, which weighed 400 pounds.

A RISING YOUNG ARTIST.

[illegible] of a remarkable character in the [illegible] her three [illegible] sisters [illegible] their humble [illegible] Hannah [illegible] born on St. George's day, 1723, and even as a child professed playing at soldiers to any more feminine game. [illegible] seventeen she [illegible] quence her home, finding a new one with a married sister in London. Three years later she was married by a Fleet parson to a Dutch grenadier, who after ill treating her and half starving her, for seven months, suddenly disappeared. One would have thought Hannah would have sighed [illegible] her ill-conditioned mate—but she determined to go in quest of the truant, borrowed a suit of her brother-in-law's clothes, and then, disguised found her way to Coventry. Here she enlisted in Captain Miller's company of Guise's regiment, and began her campaigning with a twenty-two days march to Carlisle. Unluckyly for her prospects, our heroine made a mortal enemy of one of the sergeants, thwarting him in some dishonorable scheme, and he soon contrived to revenge her interference by accusing her of neglect of duty, and getting her sentenced to receive six hundred lashes. These, or rather four hundred of these, were duly administered, if we may trust her biographer, although it is hard for us to understand how such a punishment could be inflicted without her sex being discovered. Disgusted with this harsh treatment, Hannah left the regiment without troubling the authorities for a formal discharge, and after wandering about for a month, found herself in Portsmouth with empty pockets. In this predicament she could think of nothing better than accepting his Majesty's bounty again, and ere many hours had elapsed Hannah was transformed into a marine and doing duty on board the sloop Swallow, attached to Boscawen's fleet bound for the East Indies. Jamie Gray, as she called herself, became popular on board the sloop on account of her readiness to help her mess mates in washing [illegible] After a little attempt on Mauritius the fleet made for Fort St. David's, [illegible] on disembarked to strengthen the army besieging Arcot. Gray was engaged in several skirmishes, and witnessed the blowing up of the enemy's magazine which brought the siege to a close. Marching on Pondicherry, the troops were obliged to [illegible] field as river-deep breast high, in the face of the French batteries, and our female warrior was first "man" to cross. She took her share in picket duty, worked hard at trenchmaking, and when the trenches were made sat in them for seven successive nights mid deep in water. She received six shots in one leg, and five in the other, and then was hit in the groin. [illegible] to the surgeon, regimental surgeon, Hannah secured the services and secrecy of a black woman, with whose help she extracted the ball and cured the wound. Hostilities next struck her down and obliged her to go to the hospital, where she remained three months. Upon her recovery she was sent on board the Tartar, pink, and served as a common sailor until turned over, in the same capacity to the Eltham, man-of-war. The smoothness of her face and chin earned her the sobriquet of Miss Molly Gray, but when her new ship-mates found her ready to join in any fun afoot, they christened her Hearty Jemmy. While on the coast of Lisbon, she fought with the merest accident that her faithless husband had been [illegible] the murder of a [illegible] The Eltham was [illegible] Hannah resumed [illegible] Her story was [illegible] ger of the Roy[illegible] square. The venture proved successful, and unmindful of her first failure, Hannah married a carpenter named Eyles, and had a son born to her, to whom a lady of fashion stood god mother, and carried out a godmother's duty by paying for his education. Brave Hannah's career came to a peaceful but sad end; in 1789 she became insane, and was removed Bethlehem Hospital, where she died on the 6th of Feb. 1792, at the age of sixty-nine.—All the year Round.

The great prosperity of the town of Lindsay have again induced their assessor to put down $200 to aid in the construction of the Lindsay, Fenelon Falls and Ottawa Railway. This speaks well for the liberality of the Lindsay people. Prosperity has always rewarded those who step to the front and the old fashion we commend the men of the Lindsay ilk are not to be staggered by trifles. Already there is a debt upon their town of $[illegible] eight up of $37,100, a previous [illegible] granted [illegible] to the amount of $[illegible] for interest on the same, which together with the $20,000 now granted will raise their indebtedness to the handsome figure of three hundred thousand dollars. This magazine is the oldest and has the largest circulation of any literary magazine in Canada. It aims at being a Canadian Magazine, both in the characters of its matter, and in odening the way for Canadian writers. In the latter field it has up to the present been a failure, so for as remunerating its contributors and its publishers is concerned; but as its circulation is fair, we are in hopes that a good advertising patronage may yet put it on paying basis. We do not see Canadian homes can find elsewhere, so interesting and so Canadian, and we ask all Canadians to sustain it. Its circulation is 3,500. New Dominion Monthly 1,50 *per annum in advance, Old subscribers subscribing the name of a new subscriber with their own will get the two for $2. Wife to Husband—(Rubbing the PAIN-KILLER on his left shoulder-blade briskly.) I'm so glad my dear Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER is not more extensively used, and what a world of good it has done even since we have had it, George don't have the toothache any more, it has served Fredy a severe attack of Dyspepsia—, and I know it will relieve you of Rheumatism.

Husband:—You are right Mary, the PAIN-KILLER seems to fire up the cold corners of my shoulder and put new life into it, it certainly does not insinuate meanly, I do think my dear, I am cured already (meditatingly) well, well, all I have heard said of it is true, my shoulder is free from pain the first time for these two months.

Wife:—It is strange, we never have been induced to try it before, I should have thought you would have been often advised to try it.

Husband:—I have had the PAIN-KILLER recommended many times, but between the Doctors and Druggists they have always succeeded in keeping me from using it by suggesting other trash that has done me no good.

Wife:—People seem to enjoy paying the Doctor five or ten Dollars every now and then to experiment on them, when a twenty five cent bottle of PAIN-KILLER would give them far more relief, and the Druggists are so obliging it is very hard to say "I want Perry Davis' PAIN-KILLER and nothing else will do," and then refuse to keep their trash.

The Coming of Spring.

The winter time is past and gone,
The time of silent death,
And the greatest sceptic owns
With a fleeth and warmer breath
In the half-studied thicket, and on
The sunny banks, plain
The primrose buds
To the sort call of the
And 'mid the pale pass
The bee's sweet
And the thrush's song
Tell that the Spring

Beautiful Spring! [illegible]
The air grows warm
And circulates through Ran laughing
Is shady
The delicate enfolded flowers
Open their silvery cups to catch
The mild dewsweetened
And deep within the
His nest the goldfinch weaves,
Where the honeysuckle's winding sprays
Are set with tender leaves.

By cottage door the butterfly,
The earliest of Spring,
Above the golden crocus-beds
Stayeth his trembling wing;
And by old ponds the daffodil
Is bowing to the breeze,
That stirs in [illegible]
Or clustering [illegible]
And on the [illegible]
By woodpaths massed and gray,
And far up on the pasture-slopes,
Gleameth the daisy's ray.

And now in gardens spreading far
Round antiquated halls,
With broad clear mantle reflecting back
Smooth turf and terraced walls,
The dark yews wear a fresher green,
And sweet at early dawn
The scent of hyacinths floats forth
Over walk and dewy lawn;
And cool winds, that at even time
Down the long alleys pass,
Lay the blossoms of the almond tree
In crowds upon the grass.

Bright, blessed Spring! Why coming hide
A thousand thoughts arise,
Beautiful as the pearly light
Of thine own changing skies.
We pluck thy wild up-glancing flowers,
And wander by thy streams,
And thy sunshine brings to us again
The joy of vanished dreams;
Far down the vista of past years
Faint harp like echoes ring,
Borne to our hearts upon thy breath,
O loved and lovely Spring

SHOEING HORSES.

THE IMPORTANCE OF DOING IT IN THE BEST WAY.

BY ROBERT BONNER.

Our attention was long ago attracted to the importance of having horses properly shod.

One of the earliest improvements which we adopted in shoeing consisted in shaping upon the heel. This we learned from a Canadian. It was a great one, but a crude one; and we have now abandoned it, having got from another source a substitute which produces the same effect, and is better.

A man, in order to get a perfect or even considerable knowledge of the horse's foot, should have no prejudice, either way, for or against any source of information. He should be prepared to learn anything that he can from any body who knows it.

We have purchased and read and studied all the books treating of the horse's foot which were to be had anywhere. Such as we could not obtain in this country we have imported. Yet we are constantly acquiring new and additional light on the matter, and being led from predilections on the subject, we not unfrequently modify our views on one point or another.

On the whole, now we are enabled to direct the shoeing of our own stable of horses vastly more to our own satisfaction than ever before. Still we hope to acquire as much more information as we already possess. A great deal must always depend on personal judgment and discretion in applying even the best ascertained principles

It is not commonly understood, but it is nevertheless the fact that ringbones, spavins, curbs, windgalls, shoulder lameness strains of the loins, "hitching," etc., all arise from either malformation of the feet or improper shoeing, or both combined. If the feet are kept in proper shape and properly shod, it is, in our opinion, well nigh impossible for a horse troubled with any of the complaints we have enumerated. Hence the importance of good shoeing.

But the reader is probably ready to ask how ought a horse to be shod? We will answer this way: There are no two horses in our stable that we would shoe precisely alike, consequently, we are not inclined to give general directions. At one time, when we had made but little progress in our studies, we experienced considerable benefit from opening the heels and cutting down the toe; but we have since that time, as we have already intimated, found out "a more excellent way," which we now practice.

Lameness is not confined as many people think, to horses that have been shod for a number of years. Last autumn we saw several colts in Orange and Suffolk counties that were "perfect cripples," and yet they had never been shod! At Cowes Long Island, Mr. Smith Burr, who has for over thirty years ranked—and deservedly so—as a leading breeder of Suffolk county, called our attention to a little colt, only six months old, that was so lame it could scarcely move, and yet neither Mr. Burr nor anyone in that neighborhood could tell where the lameness was seated.—New York Ledger.

POTATO EXPERIMENT.—Three years ago I offered in my catalogue, and through the public press, $100 for any new potato, that should excel the Excelsior in quality as a fall, spring and summer potato, for table use. I received 100 varieties, from all parts of the United States which I planted side by side, on a piece of land very uniform in its character, and gave them the same treatment. The newest the results of my experiment in that while I leave the Excelsior in high rank which it holds, sustained by various emphatic testimonials, and not detracting anything from its merits, the introducer of the early rose and Breese's, I decided to award to Albert Breese, No. 6, or Peerless, the prize of $100, as these potatoes, everything considered, are superior to any of the great number of varieties sent me for trial. The Peerless is the most productive potato I have ever raised. Mr. Breese's success in producing new seedlings has been most remarkable, and I am very happy to award him $100 as some return for the great gift he has made the agricultural public. I make mention of Early Rose and Peerless only, but others of his varieties are potatoes of great merit, sufficient of themselves to give fame to the introducer.—Rural Chronicler.

DURABILITY OF WOOD.—"The Mechanic's Manufacturer and Builder" says:—Experiments have lately been made by driving cylinders of different [illegible] and one-half inch square, into the ground, only one half inch projecting out-ward. It was found that in five years all three made of oak, elm, ash, fir, soft mahogany, and nearly every variety of pine were totally rotten. Length, hardness and toughness were decayed on the outside only; while acacia, with the exception of being slightly attacked on the exterior, was otherwise sound. Hard mahogany and cedar of Lebanon were in tolerable good condition, but only Virginia cedar was found as good as when put in the ground. This is of some importance to builders, showing what woods should be avoided and what others used in preference in [illegible]

TABLE MATS.—Straw table mats may be cleaned by washing them in washing Soda. Lay them out in the sun and when nearly dry press them between clothes or paper.

To remove the stains on spoons, caused by using them for boiled eggs, take a little common salt, moistened, between the thumb and finger briskly rub the stain, which will soon disappear.

A crusty old bachelor says that love is a wretched business, consisting of a little sighing, a little crying, a little dying, and a deal of lying.

SMOKING BRUTALITY.—All over the country the clocks are constantly striking the hours; and, what is worse, the public cry out if they stop.

A writer from the African diamond fields says he attended a double wedding, saw a corpse which read thus:—"No gentleman admitted without pants."

William, who used to boast that he did not owe a dollar, and never would, found that in less than a year after his marriage he had a little Bill to take up every day.

The latest style of dressing the gentleman is to have one look as if well brushed, over softened neatly combing the eyebrows. The hideous curl is called crevche coeur.

A devoted girl whose lover had lost one of his arms, replied to her companions banter on the subject: "I wouldn't, Ashley a man with two hands, maybe he beats."

DISCERNING CHILD (who has heard some remarks made by papa)—"Are you our new nurse?" Nurse—"Yes, dear." Child—"Well then, I'm one of those boys who can only be managed by kindness; so you can't whip me, 'cause you promised mamma you wouldn't, and brought us sticks."

A parsimonious sea-captain, answering the complaints of his men that the bread was bad, exclaimed: "What! complain of your bread that is made from flour? What do you think of the Apostles? They ate shipbread," made from old boots and shoes.

A [illegible] was [illegible] for [illegible] to the [illegible] after undergoing the brutal ordeal he was escorted out of the court yard to the tune of the "Rogue's March." He then turned, and, in mock dignity, [illegible] addressed the bystanders: "Gentlemen, I thank you, but I have no ear for music."

"After the girls, father."

"Did you ever know me to do so, when I was a boy?"

"No, sir, but mother did."

"My son, you had better go to bed."

A millionaire, who lives on Fifth Avenue, gave a testimonial to a chiropodist which testifies that "several years ago he successfully extracted several corns from my feet without pain, as also members of my family, and they have not returned since that time."

"A minister who had a fancy for startling texts, and was in the habit of announcing them without any preface, astonished his hearers a little more than usual, one morning, by peering over the pulpit, (he was a very small man) with the startling question, "Am I a whale."

A worthy Scotch couple, when asked how their son had broken down so early in life, gave the following explanation:—"When we began life together we worked hard and lived on porridge and such like, gradually adding to our comfort as our means improved, until we were able to dine off a bit of roast meat, and sometimes a boiled chickie (chicken); but Jack our son, he worked backwards and began with the chicken first."

"A great many people have asked us of late, 'How do you keep your horse looking so sleek and glossy?' We tell them, its the easiest thing in the world; give 'Sheridans Cavalry Condition Powders,, two or three times a week.

A gentleman in the eastern part of the state, who was about having his leg amputated on account of his being bent at right angles and stiff as the knee, heard of "Johnsons Anodyne Liniment". After using it a short time, his leg became straight, and is now as serviceable as the other.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glossy freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.
